GREAT GOAL SCHEME FOR TORONTO

Engineering Proposition to Make the Queen City An Atlantic Calling Port for Ocean-Going Steamers.

(Special to The Guardian) OTTAWA, Ont. June 16.—The engineers report on the St. Lawrence improvement scheme by which it is proposed to virtually bring tidewater to the head of the Great Lakes and permit ocean going vessels to penetrate thither will be submitted to the international joint commission next week. Mr. F. W. Bowden, chief engineer for the department of railways and canals, and Col. P. P. Wootton, of the United States corps of engineers who have had the investigation, declare in their report that from the engineering standpoint at least the scheme is perfectly feasible. The scheme had two features, navigation and power, and its proponents hold that it will cost more than pay for the expense involved, estimated at from 150 to 200 million dollars. By the scheme certain of the existing canals will be converted into ship channels capable of permitting the passage of the largest ocean going vessels. Toronto would be an ocean going port. Last session members on both sides of the house generally approved of the scheme the only question arising being that of expense. It has been suggested in this connection that the cost be defrayed by an international bond issue.

MR. DONALD NICHOLSON, M.P., REVIEWS POLITICAL SITUATION

Mr. Donald Nicholson, M. P., recently returned from attending the Parliamentary Session at Ottawa, has had an excellent opportunity of forming first hand impressions of the political situation there. Though laid aside through illness for about two months of the session he nevertheless kept continually in touch with the trend of affairs. Interviewed by The Guardian yesterday he said: "One of the most noticeable features of the session has been the split in the Liberal ranks. The old Liberal party today is divided. Some are still for advocating absolute free trade, while others—especially the members from the Province of Quebec—are in favor of retaining the present protective policy. On the other hand the Government party is unanimous in supporting the protective policy. The advocates for protection comprise also the most important element of the Ontario Liberal party. Such men as Guthrie, Cronin and Mowatt, with many others, are strongly supporting Premier Meighen's policy. "There are now about forty-five members from the West who support the Government. They are made up of the highest type of citizens—farmers, business and professional men. A great number of them were formerly Liberals. To-day they are fighting Mr. Crerar's fiscal policy, and they maintain that the policy of protection for home industries in Canada is absolutely necessary. "The most difficult question confronting the Government at present is the Railway problem, which they are in hopes of clearing up when the Grand Trunk is acquired. Canada will then own over seventy thousand miles of railroads. When the whole situation is under one management the expectation is that the sure increase of trade and population will make the railroad an asset of ever increasing value. "Some criticism was made during the session upon the Government's ship-building programme. This embayed chiefly from members of the back benches of the official Opposition. But when the Minister of Marine proposed it he had the hearty support of all the prominent members of both sides of the House. "After the Census is completed another session of Parliament will be held for re-distribution and readjustment of seats. The West expect to have an increased number of members although this will mean a decreased number for some of the Eastern provinces it will not affect Prince Edward Island, the representation of which is permanently fixed.

Commencement Exercises Charlottetown Business College

On Monday Last for the Term 1920-1921

One of the most successful terms during the many years of its existence was brought to a successful close in the Charlottetown Business College on Monday last, when Principal Miller distributed diplomas to the graduating class. As the system followed in this institution is based on "Individual Instruction," some students accomplished the prescribed work in connection with the various courses more rapidly than others, and instead of being detained until the end of the term, are given their final examinations whenever they are ready for them. This frees many of the students to go into employment much earlier than they otherwise would, and proves a great incentive to extra effort on their part. The regular examinations however, are grouped under three dates:—Christmas, Easter and June. The attendance during the term just closed has been rather above the average, and the application of the students has been commendable, consequently gratifying results have been their reward. While there has been much inactivity, and consequently, uncertainty in the Commercial world, yet re-construction is steadily, if slowly—going on and so being built on a sound foundation. The business public is carefully feeling its way, which at present limits the general demand for help so freely called for during the past few years. This, however, has affected trained help to a limited extent only, for a great number of the students have already obtained employment,—a large percentage of them direct from the college. Everything is brightening up and the demand for skilled help will soon be back to normal; therefore it is the wise who are preparing themselves so as to be in readiness whenever their services are required. The Principal commended the students on their deportment and general work, also the teachers on their loyalty to the interests of the college and students. He was pleased to welcome the Hon. Mr. Nash who, from a business as well as a social point, had long followed the career of the college. He had much pleasure in asking him to complete the term by receiving the students—Honorable Mr. Nash, always popular, delivered a most enthusiastic welcome, and in the course of an eloquent address—gave much practical advice to the students and graduates who are soon to take up the responsibilities of active business life. "Efficiency," said he, "is the great watchword of the college which is graduating you. Never forget it in business life. Look well after the details of affairs, and you will all the sooner receive promotion. Your College is well and favourably known everywhere, for where can you go that you will not find a C. B. C. graduate, and always hold three dates:—Christmas, Easter and June. He could cite many receiving salaries ranging up to $15,000.00 per annum. "It is up to you as graduates to maintain the high standard the college has already won in the eyes of the employing public. "Space, at present will not permit of an extended report of his excellent address; it was brim full of advice and encouragement. Principal Miller stated that a large number of the graduates from the business department were also well advanced in shorthand and typewriting, and he advised them to keep up their practice during the holidays, so that when they returned to college work, there would be no delay in reviewing any of the work already done. He was pleased to announce that there were a few students whose ambition carried them to a higher average (100 words per minute) than the graduation requirements; and consequently they wished their final examinations postponed until they were capable of taking at least one hundred and twenty-five words per minute together with extra subjects according to their wishes their names—while not in the graduating list—appear immediately after. Following is a list of graduates for this term. The names do not appear in order of merit.

STIRRING ADDRESSES BY MR. WALTER MCGRAYE

At P.W.C. Hall and at Rotary Club Brilliant Western Orator Strikes Patriotic Chords.

Rotarians had their luncheon at the Country Club yesterday afternoon and were favored with an address by Mr. Walter McGraye who has been designated 'Canada's Patriotic Lecturer.' Mr. McGraye is touring the Dominion advocating the adoption of a Canadian spirit and the furtherance of Canadian nationalism. He is an able and ready speaker and is wholly enthusiastic regarding his subjects. He spoke to the Rotarians on Canadian Nationalism and referred to the fact that so far as Canada is concerned there is no provision for and no interpretation of Canadianism from an official point of view. In the Census papers provision was made for the designation of the inhabitants according to their origin, and if a Canadian of Canadian parentage dating back several generations were to describe himself as such the Census Commissioners or enumerators were instructed not to accept his statement but were to enter upon their papers the European or other nationality from whence originally he sprang. Mr. McGraye maintained that this was wrong and that people Canadian born should be recognized as Canadians, and that emigrants who came to the country should be nationalized as Canadians and forever designated as such. The speaker dealt at some length with the reputation the Canadian soldiers had earned for Canada and the place in the world which had been made for this country by the shedding of their blood. He believed it was only right and proper that a country which had made good on the field of battle in Europe, in the greatest war in the world's history, should have an identity of its own and should be able to claim a nationhood equal with that of other countries which participated.

After referring to the spirit of optimism which dominated the people of Canada, especially the people in the West, Mr. McGraye spoke of the great heritage Canadians had in the pioneers and of their work during the past 150 years. Too little had been written about the romantic history of Canada. The schools knew little or nothing of the making of Canada and as to the Confederation Fathers the schools he visited knew practically nothing of them. The real history of Canada was dead to Canadians. This should not be. The spirit of Canadians should be cultivated and developed and we of this great country must decide whether we shall become a nation of Canadians or continue a string of people gathered from various nationalities and looking to Europe as the country of our origin. Our educational system should be so broadened and developed that we shall be able to Canadianize the foreigner and make Canadian patriots of our own people. But it is not possible to develop education suitable for foreigners until the Canadians themselves realize that they are part of a great nation.

The part Canadians took in the great war was considered phenomenal for a people of such limited number and for a country so comparatively new. But so far as Mr. McGraye was concerned he considered it only natural that representatives of pioneers of Canada should have made good at the front. It was by no mere chance that they more than held their own. They were simply "running to form."

Referring to the political situation Mr. McGraye held the growth of political groups not as something to which objection might be taken but as a means of political independence. People had got into the habit of becoming members of one of the two parties as a matter of course, simply because their parents belonged to them before and because from their earliest years they had been accustomed to take sides. When once they became members of a party they remained so all their lives irrespective of the politics pursued by their party. The development of groups in Parliament indicated that the people were not altogether satisfied with the old conditions of party government and that in itself the speaker recognized as a good sign. He maintained that the people who criticized group government and who have shown a great deal of uneasiness concerning it were largely those benefiting in one form or another from the continuance of the two-party system. It was high time, he believed, that Canadians became more independent of politics and supported that party or that group which would bring the greatest good to the greatest number of people of Canada. "Something ought to be done to protect and develop the industries of Canada more than had been done in the past. It was in his opinion a matter for shame that eighty-five per cent of the pulp of Canada was exported to the United States and part sent back for consumption in Canada in the form of paper. He thought it was in the interests of Canada that an export duty should be placed upon pulp, so that Canada should have some means of protection against the inroads of the United States. "With regards to emigrants, Mr. McGraye maintained that more care should be exercised in selecting the people to come and settle in this country. No man should be permitted to come to Canada to settle who could not become a Canadian. Referring to the development of Canada he said something should be done to prevent the extensive purchase of American goods for Canadian consumption. A great deal of what were more or less luxuries were imported from the United States and could be as easily grown or manufactured in Canada. There was no reason why Canadian industries should be made to suffer simply because it was an easy matter to import the goods from the United States. If the speaker had his way he would build a tariff wall as high as Haman's gallows until the Canadian dollar was worth one hundred cents in the American market. "Until we get a wider vision and a better realization of the future of Canada, said Mr. McGraye in conclusion we will not be able to make the progress necessary and desirable towards Canadian nationalization. The spirit of co-operation—the community spirit should be developed to include not only local villages, towns and provinces but also East and West. When we get to understand one another better and have a common object in view then we will march ahead and take our rightful place among the progressive nations of the world.

Mr. McGraye's address in the evening was perfect in form and thoroughly Canadian in spirit. The Soul of the Nation was, he said, expressed by the Canadian soldiers who fought and were victorious at Ypres and other fields of battle in the late great war; and the fact that these men, not the profiteers or the politicians, won for Canada the status of a nation should ever be held in remembrance. The evening address was along the Hon. Gavin Duffy, seconded before the Rotary Club. After a vote of thanks had been moved by the Hon. Lavin Wuffy, seconded by Premier Bell, and carried by a standing vote, Mr. McGraye gave several recitations from Drummond and told several stories which were greatly enjoyed by the audience. The Rev. George C. Taylor presided.

DRIVE NOW ON FOR PROTESTANT ORPHANAGE

An Appeal on Behalf of the Destitute Orphans of the Province That They May be Cared For and Trained For God, Their Country and For Themselves.

The drive for the Protestant Orphanage is now on. Solicitors are at work in every section of the province and the purpose is to visit every locality and every home. The amount aimed at is $100,000, less than one dollar a head for our population and conditions for our numbers and our ability to meet such an obligation, an amount which should be raised without difficulty. "The need of a new orphanage has long been felt. The building now used for the purpose is no longer adequate to meet the requirements or to give the children now in residence there the opportunities for development that they require. The accommodation is greatly over-taxed and the trustees have been obliged to refuse admission to many, simply because to admit any more would be out of the question. The fact that there are a number of destitute orphans in this highly favored land of ours who must be refused the care and the oversight that they require because we have no room for them will surely appeal to the Christian and charitable spirit of our people and we have no doubt that after the present drive is completed and its proceeds put to their intended use, it can no longer be said of us that we have failed in the greatest of all Christian tests—caring for His "little ones." In the proclamation announcing this drive and its purpose the Trustees state they are "building for the present, for the future and for eternity." This is verily the aim of the proposed institution. How many little ones through death, fate, and helplessness upon the world may be saved for God, for their country and for themselves through this institution, none can predict, but we know that from the lowest and most unpromising conditions many men and women have risen to usefulness and even to greatness because a helping hand had been held out to them. How many have gone down to misery, to criminality, to perdition, because "there was no hand to help or eye to pity" we shall never know. This we know, however, that "inasmuch as ye have done it" and "inasmuch as ye did it not" we have done it unto Him in whose service the great majority of us profess to be. One more opportunity is afforded by the present drive, one more opportunity to help save the unfortunate little ones, one more opportunity to do a Christian service, to help even a few of the many who need help. In this blessed country of ours where there is little poverty, no orphan child should lack for bread or clothing or Christian training and if we but do even a fraction of our duty the amount needed for our new and greatly needed orphanage will be forthcoming on July 15th. This is a call to duty and real service, it is only a call for money, not for blood or sacrifice, a call on behalf of God's poor children. Let us not lightly refuse it.

LARGER INFANTRY CAMP

1st Battalion (105th Batt.) P. E. I Regiment 400 Strong.

As an indication of the enthusiasm being shown in the reorganization of the infantry, which goes into camp on the 22nd inst. the Commanding Officer, Lt. Col. Stewart, found necessary to ask for authority to increase the strength of the Prince Edward Island Regiment in order to take care of the men offering. The required authority was received yesterday and the unit will now go under canvas over four hundred strong. The Regimental Band is up to full strength and has been practicing diligently. Everything points to the new band being the best organization of its kind in the Province for many years. There is nothing so popular in a military camp as a good band and the Infantry boys in common, with the citizens, are looking forward with great interest to the Regimental concerts.
