LEADING P.E.I. POTATO GROWERS USE THESE PROVEN PRODUCTS.

25% DDT Emulsifiable Oil Concentrate
GENITOL EM-25

Made for easy, convenient mixing with water, especially for spraying potatoes. Genitol EM-25 has proved effective at economical dosage in control of Colorado potato beetles, aphids, flea beetles and leaf hoppers. It may be used in combination with fixed copper fungicides, such as Nichols Chemical Spraycop, for combined control of insects and blights.

Micro-Particle 50% DDT Spray Powder
GENITOX S50

A 50% DDT wettable powder, especially milled for finest particle size. Poured directly into agitated spray mixture, Genitox S50 mixes completely in hard or soft water, obtaining quick wetting and dispersion without excessive foaming. Because it is especially processed to stay in fine flocculated suspension, Genitox S50 provides uniform spray cover on foliage, with only minimum runoff of the insecticide. Unexcelled for control of potato insects mentioned above. May be used with fixed copper fungicides.

DDT-Basic Copper Concentrated Spray Powder
GENICOP SPRAY POWDER
Micro-Particle Fineness

A combination of 25% pure DDT and 75% Basic Copper Sulphate with special conditioning and depositing agents, providing excellent coverage and all-around spray efficiency. This concentrated insecticide-fungicide offers economy and time-saving convenience for combined control of early and late blights, Colorado potato beetles, aphids, flea beetles, and leaf hoppers—in one material.

Neutral Copper Fungicide Spray Powder
SPRAYCOP

A specially processed fixed copper fungicide of unusual chemical stability, high in copper content, for control of early and late blights. Outstanding for fungicidal effectiveness.

FOR DUSTING: Ask about Nichols' Chemical's DDT and DDT-Copper Dusts to suit every insect and blight problem on potatoes.

No, Mr. Brown

By Gertrude Knevels

"Very well, Dolan. Rafferty, you may let Mr. Dolan up. Dolan," April said sharply. "I've a mind to call the police. What have you got to say for yourself?"

"Only what I told you, Ma'am. I comes to the back door an' I thinks if Mr. Rafferty could get a hand-out at a party, why can't I? The door was open, so I walks in, and then I hears ye scream, and up I comes." Bill wiped away a grin with the back of his dirty hand.

"Don't ye be believin' him," Rafferty stormed. "You've no need to be callin' the police for the likes of him, Miss April, dear. Just leas me the handlin' of hkn, that lad!"

"But, Raf," April interrupted. "You weren't in your room when I fell, were you? Did all these people running about the house scare you?"

"They did indeed." The old man looked sheepish. "I'd just got to me room when I hears Mrs. Bundy comin' up with somethin'. The row they raised I couldn't be takin' even a cat nap. I got up to stretch me legs in the attic."

"Go along downstairs, Dan. Polly needs help terribly in the kitchen. Suppose you take this fellow, Dolan, down there and set him to work for his supper. There are floors to be scrubbed, and tables too. Piles of dishes. See you later, Mr. Dolan."

April hastily unlocked the closet, hung up the key, and ran downstairs ahead of the two men. She wanted to see Polly and put her wise. Polly could always take a joke. Brown was Dolan, an ex-waiter, April informed her. If Bill wanted to "investigate" poor old Rafferty further, he might as well wash dishes while he did it. Noel Andrews came running down the hall as April paused before the mirror. "April, where have you been?" Noel's big eyes were shining. "Oh, darling, I've had the most marvellous fortune. I'm to have one piece of bad luck, Zora says, and then heaps and heaps of good."

April plunged into her hostess' duties, and had no time to worry over Bill in the kitchen; forgot to inform Gwenn of his arrival. Miss Zora was now at the piano banging out her old-fashioned waltzes. Ten was dancing with Gwenn, Natalie with Rex Chelmsford, Noel with the tutor. The party was going well. Polly, poor dear, was having the heavy end of it. April decided she would send her in to see the dancing.

"Mr. Dolan's a lovely scrubber," Polly winked at April. "He's not like them that sits around smokin' their smelly old pipes and givin' orders." She turned on the placid Rafferty who occupied the comfortable chair beside the stove, a well filled plate at his elbow.

"Raf," April said, "I think, if you've finished supper, you'd better go up to your room and have a nice rest. And, Polly, do go along and see the dancing."

"I wonder," said Bill, when they were alone, "that you have the nerve to look me in the eye."

"I owe you one, Mr. Dolan," April grinned. "You ought to know by this time that I pay my debts."

"It's odd," Bill sighed, "how perfectly simple demonstrations that by others are called affection should rouse in you such awful rage. Now a kiss—"

"A kiss," said April, "depends. I'll tell Gwenn you're here." She started for the door.

"Have a heart," Bill begged. "Your clothes are all right for this party," April assured him.

"Listen," Bill begged. "I don't like your having that hobo in the house all night."

"Hobo yourself," April made a face at him. "Raf's my old friend and Granny's handy man. Drink to his weakness, but he was quite sober tonight."

"And last night too," Bill admitted cheerfully. "I happen to know because we spent the night together in the lockup." (To Be Continued)

In Memoriam

GEORGE FREDERICK PROUDE

On May 2nd, there passed peacefully away, George Frederick Proude of Loyalist Road. In the passing of the late Mr. Proude the community of Loyalist Road and vicinity loses one of its good neighbors and friend, as he was always ready and willing to lend a helping hand to any worthwhile community movement. He was in his seventy-fifth year and was one of a family of eight, two of which predeceased him. There are besides his wife, the former Grace Robinson and daughter Mrs. Redvers Stewart, the following brothers and sisters: John H. Frank, Windrow, Bertram Younker, Mrs. William Gran, and Miss Hannah.

His funeral was held May 4th at Hampshire with the service being conducted at the home by Rev. J. J. Morrison. The pallbearers were six nephews of the deceased.

CARD OF THANKS

The family of the late Mr. Fred Proude wish to thank friends and neighbors who so kindly helped in various ways in their recent sad bereavement, also appreciation and thanks are extended to all who sent flowers, cards and letters of sympathy.

In Memoriam

WILLIAM A. CHANDLER

On the morning of May 11th, 1948, many friends were saddened to hear of the sudden passing of William A. Chandler at Hazelbrook, in his ninety-second year. He was sick only three days and during his long life had enjoyed excellent health, never needing the services of a doctor until a few days previous to his death.

He was ever ready to lend a helping hand to others and was prompt to offer assistance in time of sickness or sorrow. He was a carter by trade and was well known near and far for his capable and conscientious workmanship.

He will be sadly missed in the home by his wife and daughter Helen, also a son W. Edmund of Amherst, N. S., who was home at the time of his father's death. Another son Samuel E. was killed at the battle of Passchendaele, Nov. 1917. He is also survived by two brothers, James H. of West Newton, Mass., who came home for the funeral and Charles A. of Sydney, N. S.

The funeral, which was largely attended, was held on May 13th, with a short service at the MacLean Funeral Home, followed by a service at Birch Hill Church. Both services were conducted by the Rev. Mr. McVicar of Pownal. Interment took place in the adjoining cemetery and the following were pallbearers: Fred Robertson, Joseph Driscoll, William Drake, Bernard Coyle, Ernest Ings and M. W. Wood.

Many cards and messages of sympathy were received by the bereaved members of the family; also a wreath from Branch No. 10 of the Canadian Legion, Amherst, N. S. (Amherst papers please copy.)

CARD OF THANKS

Mrs. Wm. A. Chandler, Helen and Edmund, wish to thank all those who sent cards and messages of sympathy or who assisted in any way during their recent sad bereavement.
