Romance Amid Peril In Welles' Melodrama "Journey Into Fear"

A strange shipboard romance off the Turkish coast between a man whose life is in peril and a woman whose life is a lie, makes the unusual theme of "Journey Into Fear," Orson Welles' latest film for RKO Radio now showing at the Capitol Theatre.

Joseph Cotten and Dodores del Rio are co-starred in the thrilling picture, which is hailed as one of the year's most unusual offerings. Cotten as Howard Graham, an American engineer about to return to the states after inspecting the needs of the Turkish navy in a rearmament program, encounters Miss del Rio as a Latin dancer who sets out to fleece him and winds up by falling in love with him.

The Turkish secret police, learning that the Nazis plan to kill Graham in order to delay the rearming, try to smuggle him off to Russia on a Black Sea steamer, but the Getapo puts two of its killers aboard the same ship. In desperate peril, Graham confides in the dancer who tries to help him but fails. The vessel reaches Batum with Graham still unharmed, but helpless, and his subsequent efforts to escape cause the breathless climax of the picture.

Love Tangle Is Basis Of Comedy

The comical side of a dramatic love triangle is said to be zestfully exploited in Universal's "Fired Wife," coming to-day to the Prince Edward Theatre. The hilarious new film boasts a strong cast of movie headliners topped by co-stars Robert Paige and Louise Allbritton, Diana Barrymore and Walter Abel are featured.

A secret marriage between a radio executive and a noted feminine stage director is the basis of the plot and much of the action takes place backstage, in a Broadway theatre and a great radio station.

Walter Catlett, Ernest Truex and Alan Dinehart have important roles and the supporting cast includes George Dolenz, Richard Lane and Rex Ingram. The film was directed by Charles Lamont under the producership of Alex Gottlieb.

FAMILY REUNION. — The home of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Scott, High Street, New Glasgow, N. S., was the scene of a very happy family reunion on Saturday evening, it being the anniversary of Mrs. Scott's birthday as well as that of her sister, Mrs. Russell Gillis. The double occasion was made a real jolly one and both received many "Happy Birthdays" Greetings and very nice mementos of the day, also gifts of money from relatives. Their parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Jenkins of Murray River, P. E. I., who are spending the winter in town, also their niece, Miss Vera Jennex, were present. The dining room was gaily decated with pink and white streamers. The supper table was nicely arranged and also done in pink and white. At either end of the table was an artistically iced birthday cake, done in the same colors. Mrs. Jenkins assisted by her daughter, Mrs. Seldon Jennex, served the delicious chicken supper. The guests spent a very happy time together as they engaged in a variety of amusing games, social chat, music, etc. Mrs. Scott and Mrs. Gillis in their usual pleasing manner thanked the donors for thus remembering them on this happy occasion. After which the party broke up with best wishes to the guests of honor for many more birthdays. — New Glasgow News.

ENLISTMENTS IN ARMY — Seven more Prince Edward Island men enlisted in the Canadian Army at No. 6 District Depot, Halifax, recently. Outfitting and documentation complete, they will leave for basic training. Recruits were William B Champion, husband of Mrs. Helen Champion, Kensington; Edward Deveau, of Sturgeon Mills; Allan Robert Hickey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hickey, R. R. Matheson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Angus Matheson, R. R No. 2, St. Peter's; and Harold F. Poole, son of Mr and Mrs. Frank Poole, Souris.

ENGAGABLE SHOWER — A large number of friends and neighbours gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Carr, Oyster Bed Bridge, on Thursday evening, January 13th, to honor their daughter Alma Viola whose marriage takes place in Calgary on Jan. 29th. While the "Bridal Chorus" was being played by Mrs. Amasa Horne, the bride to be was escorted to the seat of honor by Miss Vera Matheson, a nicely trimmed basket laden with gifts was carried in by two little girls, Jean Carr and Verleen Johnston. The gifts were opened by Mrs. Wendell McQuarrie and Miss Olga Proud, while Miss Doris Rackham read the accompanying verses. The gifts were arranged on the table by Miss Vera Matheson, Alma thanked her many friends for the lovely gifts and all joined in singing "For she's a jolly good fellow". A dainty lunch was served by the ladies, and the remainder of the evening was spnt in music and dancing.

Cooperative Union Of P. E. I. Is Formed

At a joint meeting of representatives of Fishermen's Unions, Associated Cooperatives, and the Credit Union League held in the City Hall last Friday evening, the groundwork was laid for the formation of a Cooperative Union of Prince Edward Island. The purpose of this association is to unite all Island cooperative enterprises on a provincial basis and to tie them in with the national cooperative organization which is made up of similar groups in the other provinces. The other provincial groups are either already formed or in the process of being formed.

The highlight of the evening was an address by Professor A. B. MacDonald of the Extension Department of St. Francis Xavier University. Professor MacDonald outlined the nature and purpose of the national cooperative organization and the advantages which would accrue to the provincial groups making it up. Its chief purposes are to make possible the exchange of information, ideas, and experience among cooperatives across the country and thus to ensure cohesion and long range planning; and to provide a means whereby the united voice of cooperators throughout Canada can make itself heard in national affairs affecting the cooperative movement.

After a certain amount of debate the attending delegates voted to form a provincial organization, the Cooperative Union of Prince Edward Island. A temporary board of officers was named to carry out the preliminary organizational work. Those selected were Austin Bell of White Sands and Thomas Johnston of North Rustico representing the Fishermen's Unions, Jerome O'Brien of Morell and Gerald Handrahan of Tignish representing the Associated Cooperatives, and D. A. MacDonald of Glenfinnan and H. L. Johnston of St. Dunstan's College representing the Credit Unions. Of this group Thomas Johnston was elected president, Jerome O'Brien vice president, and H. L. Johnston secretary.

Besides undertaking the formation of a provincial cooperative union, the meeting, of which D. A. MacDonald was chairman and J. T. Croteau secretary, decided on the formation of a central credit society for the province to include credit unions and incorporated cooperative societies. It also passed a resolution reaffirming the complete neutrality in politics of the cooperative societies of Prince Edward Island and a resolution from the executive of the Fishermen's Union applying to the Extension Department of St. Dunstan's College for the service of field men to give further assistance and explanation to the various unions which wish to come under the Cooperative Act.

Previous to the general evening meeting, separate afternoon meetings were held by the Board of Directors of the P. E. I. Credit Union League, the Managers of the P. E. I. Cooperative Societies, and the Executive of the Fishermen's Union. At these meetings problems peculiar to each group were discussed and settled. Professor A. B. MacDonald attended the meeting of the Managers of the Cooperative Societies.

THE KIRK PULPIT

Preaching last evening on the text, "In the year that king Uzziah died I saw the Lord.. and the house was filled with smoke" (Isa. 6:1-4) the Minister, the Rev. T. H. Bussell Somers, said: Might we not illustrate that effect of vision from the masterpieces of our Christian painting? In ancient Greece and Rome there was but little painting; the art of Athens was the art of sculpture. Now sculpture, whatever else it is, is exquisitely and beautifully clear. Its outline is always perfectly distinct. There is little of awe or mystery in sculpture. And that is why, from the hour that Christ was seen in the infinite reach of his redeeming love, something was wanted of a larger meaning and the golden age of sculpture was over. Something was wanted to express those longings that are too delicate to be expressed in marble—something that could suggest without defining—that could hint at feelings which never can be uttered, something that does not stand out clear and definite under the sunshine of an Athenian sky, but hides as much as it reveals. Hence sculpture passed and painting came with its thoughts that wander through eternity, with its remembrance of unutterable agony, with its mystical light upon the face of motherhood. And any man who has once looked on that, and come to it from some piece of ancient statuary, will understand the vision of Isaiah. "In the year that Uzziah died I saw the Lord" and Christendom like him has seen the Lord. She has seen his love, his agony, his beauty, his faith unquenchable in every prodigal. And life can never be the same again, never so clear as in the long ago. There are depths of love in it, and a brooding mist from the eternal hills.

Film Of Stout Canadian Ship Draws Tribute

BY DOUG HOW
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Jan. 30 — (CP) — Canada's sturdy little warships of the North Atlantic—or the one the film lets stand for them all—bowed to a London theatre audience that ranged from the First Lord of the Admiralty to the men of the sea who knew this story of a workaday corvette long before they took their seats.

The film was "Corvette K225" in Canada. In Britain it has become "The Nelson Touch" but it is the same good tale of the same good ship, H.M.C.S. Kitchener, the K225 of the Royal Canadian Navy.

Its premieres at the Leicester Square theatre in London's West End theatre district lacked little in color or effect or braid. Cameramen stood in the lobby to snap pictures of the big men in Britain's naval ranks, and high military and civilian figures in Canadian life in Britain.

The audience which packed the building paid this film version of Lieut. John Rhodes Sturdy's original script the rare tribute of spontaneous applause which came unexpectedly as the picture ended.

For one man, at least, in that audience this was a night of reward. He was Lt. Cmdr. William Evans of Vancouver, the former merchant marine seaman who commanded the Kitchener for months after she was commissioned in Quebec City in June 1942.

When questions were thrown at him later about this screen story of his craft, Cmdr. Evans insisted that she was "no prima donna. In fact, I'd be inclined to say just the opposite she does her real work when no one is watching."

The Kitchener, he said, had helped ships "that must be well up in four figures by now. She has probably travelled far enough to carry her around the world a couple of times."

Cmdr. Evans cited at least one trip in which the Kitchener knew action as hectic as that the picture rolled forth.

That was when she was operating in the Mediterranean and the convoy she was helping to escort was attacked successively by torpedo bombers, submarines, high-level bombers and dive bombers, all in the space of eight hours. Some of the ships, including a Canadian corvette, were lost but the attacks were beaten off and the bulk of the convoy reached its destination.

The Kitchener, Cmdr. Evans insisted, is a typical wartime corvette "aboard which many of the film's action shots happened to be taken while she was doing her ordinary work."

"All that action you see in the picture represents just a rare, brief moment in the life of a corvette," he said.

That brief moment unfolded before a London premiere audience which included First Lord of the Admiralty A. V. Alexander, Admiral of the Fleet Sir Andrew Cunningham, Rear Admiral F. H. Dalrymple-Hamilton, Admiral Sir C. E. Kennedy-Purvis and his wife, Lord Cranborne, Secretary of State for the Dominions, Information Minister Brendan Bracken, ranking officers of all three Canadian services, among them Maj. Gen. P.J. Montague, Maj. Gen. E L.M. Burns, Maj. Gen. F.F Worthington, Air Marshal L. S Breadner, Air Vice Marshals W. A. Curtis and N. R. Anderson, and senior officers of the American forces in this theatre.
