

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND

Has Cured More Women Than Any Other Medicine in the World.

Its annual sales are greater than those of any other medicine exclusively for women. It holds the record for the greatest number of actual cures of woman's ills. This fact is attested by hundreds of thousands of letters from grateful women which are on file in the Pinkham laboratory, and which are constantly being published.

Merit alone can produce such results. Good advertising serves to call attention for a time, but merit alone can stand the test of time.

The ablest specialists now agree that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the most universally successful remedy for woman's ills known to medicine.

All sick women should note these facts, and placing all possible prejudices aside, should realize the truthfulness of these statements, and that a cure for their troubles actually exists.

Wise is the woman who has faith in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, for health and happiness is sure to follow its use.

Porter's No. 5 Reversible and Adjustable Wood Track

HAY CARRIER.

This is without exception the best wood track hay carrier on the market, for the reason that the carrier can be adjusted to work on any size track, from 2 x 4 to 4 x 4, by simply loosening the bolts and moving the four arms up or down on the body of the carrier. It is a perfect reversible carrier, working either way from the trip stop without changing the carrier on the track. It is made of malleable iron, has no spring to get out of repair and is very simple in construction. The locking arrangement has but two working parts and cannot fail to catch and lock the trip pulley in the carrier, holding the load entirely independent of the rope.

We also carry a complete line of single, double, and grapple Hay Forks, iron, wood and raw hide bushed Pulleys, steel grapples, floor hooks, rafter hooks, hay rope, churns, washing machines, wringers, harness and carriages of all kinds.

LOVE UNALTERABLE.

Let me not to the marriage of true minds
Admit impediments; love is not love,
Which alters when it alteration finds,
Or bends with the remover to remove.
Oh, no! it is an ever-fixed mark,
That looks on tempests, and is never Shaken;
It is the star to every wandering bark,
Whose worth's unknown, although his height be taken,
Love's not Time's fool, though rosy lips
and cheeks
Within his bending sickle's compass come;
Love alters not with his brief hours, and weeks,
But bears it out, even to the edge of doom.
If this be error, and upon me proved,
I never writ, nor no man ever loved.
—Shakespeare.

Living in a Bath.

Day and night a little girl-patient at the London Hospital lives, sleeps and eats in a bath of warm water, for this is her only chance of surviving a terrible attack of typhoid fever, says The London Daily Mail of Dec. 4th. She is never left for an instant, and two nurses are watching her at the present moment, scarcely taking their eyes away from the sufferer till relieved by another pair of watchers. Five days ago the girl, who is only eleven years old, was placed in a large bath, seven feet long and four wide, "practically dead," as the doctor said yesterday. Her temperature was then 105 degrees Fahr., and everything had been tried and had failed to reduce it. The patient is lying on water pillows, and her body is entirely under water, which is kept at a constant temperature of 101 degrees by an arrangement of hot and cold water entering a mixing cistern, from which it flows into the bath and thence out by a pipe. In five days the girl's temperature fell to 103 degrees, but the crisis has yet to come, and at least three weeks must be spent in the bath before the disease can be shaken off. It is most unusual to find a typhoid case necessitating this treatment. Only once before has it been resorted to at the London Hospital, when some years ago a man was kept immersed for six weeks and recovered. In the present case the girl has moments of consciousness, during which she asks for her mother. Strict watch is kept, in case she turns her head in the restlessness of delirium and so puts her mouth under water.

A Stupendous Theory.

Discoveries are now coming thick and fast. The scientific world seems almost dumfounded at Prof. William Ramsay's discovery that the elements are, after all, transmutable. It is felt that what has been regarded as one of the foundations of science has been destroyed.

Prof. Oliver Lodge now launches the following stupendous theory: "There are those who have surmised that matter is, after all, only the weapon and vehicle of mind. The way it interprets itself to our consciousness through the sense of the organs gives no clue to its nature. A motion and alteration of the configuration of the molecules of our brain are believed to accompany every act of thought. It will be, at any rate, a suggestive analogy if a material progress of an essentially similar sort is found to be occurring throughout what we know as the inorganic world—the world of dead matter—and we should begin to ask, does all this motion correspond to some universal thought or mental activity likewise?"

Gained His Wish.

There was company at the table. The plate of cake was passed to the guest, who took one of the largest pieces, then to Johnny, who took the other large piece. As Frank took the remaining small piece he said under his breath to his brother, "Fig!"

"Well," said Johnny, "if it had been passed to you first which would you have taken?"

"The small piece, of course," said Frank, with righteous indignation.

"Well, then, what are you grumbling about? That's the piece you got, isn't it?"

Salisbury's Fine Contempt.

The note in Lord Salisbury's character which appeals most to us, the quality the country will miss, though it may not regret, the most, is his fine contempt for popularity. Lord Salisbury troubled himself little with what people thought of him. What he was, was much to him; what he was thought to be, nothing. This may have been a fault in the politician, but it was a splendid, and extremely rare, virtue in the man. It was the key to his finely tempered irony. It distinguished it wholly from cynicism. There was no contempt for man, no indifference to things, but a complete contempt for pretended things. This great man was not afraid to neglect the art of success, while lesser men neglected every other art. Maybe not every man can afford to take Lord Salisbury's view of life; but it is a great thing that one who has been on all men's lips should leave this salutary lesson of care for truth rather than for show. After all, it was what we ought to expect from so deeply religious a man as Lord Salisbury.—Saturday Review.

When Queen Victoria Was a Child.

Among the many stories told of the childhood of Queen Victoria is one of a visit made with her mother at Westworth House in Yorkshire. While there the Princess delighted in running about by herself in the gardens and shrubberies.

One wet morning soon after her arrival the old gardener, who did not then know her, saw her about to descend a treacherous bit of ground from the terrace and called out:

"Be careful, miss; it's slape!" a Yorkshire word for slippery.

The ever curious Princess, turning her head, asked, "What's slape?" and at the same instant her feet flew from under her and she came down.

The old gardener ran to lift her saying as he did so, "That's slape, miss."—Youth's Companion.

His Problem.

"Yes, sir," said Mr. Gillingberry; "I guess I've got one of the intellectualist families in these parts—always takin' up with something that calls for the exercise of the mental powers to their utmost."

"Is that so?" politely murmured the other man.

"You bet. Now, there's mother. She's upstairs this morning with a set o' newspaper puzzle pictures, an' if she solves them an' writes a good serial story to go along with 'em she gets at least a dollar; an' my daughter Lizzie is coverin' the dinin' room floor with sheets o' paper that she's been figurin' on tryin' to find out how old Ann is; an' Henry, he's determined to work the pigs in a wigger puzzle with three shakes an' a wriggle of his hand; an' Jim—that's Jim over by the fence—he's studyin' up a new way to work the fifteen puzzle. He's worked on that for ten years an' thinks he's pretty near got it."

"But you—what problem are you devoted to?"

"Who-me? My problem? Oh, I work out the puzzle of keepin' the family together."
