"Westward Ho" Plus New Serial At The Capitol

The creaks of covered wagon wheels, the rattle of the rattle of the thunder of galloping horses and the roar of crackling six-guns greeted the patrons of the Capitol Theatre last night when "Westward Ho" opened for a three-day run. A gripping and vital story filmed against a background of awe-inspiring grandeur, "Westward Ho" will long be remembered by lovers of romance and beauty. The story of "Westward Ho" deals with hardships and dangers encountered by the early pioneers on the frontier.

John Wayne adds further to his laurels as the leader of the "Singing Riders" in "Westward Ho." Lovely Sheila Mannors injects a sparkle and vivaciousness into the story that made all the masculine hearts beat faster. Other members of the cast who deserve special mention include Frank McGlynn, Jr., James Farley, Yakima Canutt, Earle Dwire, Bradley McCall, Jack Curtis, Hank Bell, Mary McLean, Dickie Jones and the "Wranglers." Wayne and his riders sing three rousing Western songs called "Westward Ho," the theme song of the production, "The Vigilantes," and "The Girl I Loved Long Ago." Seldom has an outdoor drama been graced with such beautiful music. Wayne surprises his fans by breaking forth in a pleasing baritone.

The photography in "Westward Ho" is outstanding. Scenes involving thousands of cattle, long wagon trains, cloud-infused skies and rugged mountain peaks form the background for the thrilling action. A particularly impressive shot shows Wayne and his forty "Singing Riders" mounted on pure white horses dashing across the wind-swept meadows in pursuit of the fleeing outlaw.

Lining-Up For Nov. 14 Election

LONDON, Oct. 31—(C.P.)—A survey of parliamentary candidates now in the field indicates the real fight at the polls on Nov. 14 will be between the government and the Labor Party. Of the 1,300 candidates who will probably be nominated, 700 are members of 130 opposition Liberal, 70 Conservative and Labor candidates number each about 550.

Only in the English counties are there an appreciable number of seats unchanged by Labor, while only in Wales are the ministerial candidates weak. Straight fights will be the rule with three cornered contests the exception.

More than 200 Laborites of the penultimate parliament are contesting their old constituencies, while 546 members of the late House are seeking election. Therefore, in large proportion, the present contests will find the same contestants who fought in 1931 again opposing each other.

In the Cabinet, only Premier Baldwin and Walter Runciman are presently without opposition. All the other ministers are fighting.

Eight thousand loud speakers on travelling broadcasting vans will be shortly in action vociferating the views of rival candidates.

TABLE LINEN

Do not put the table linen through the wringer. If you do, it will make creases that no amount of ironing can remove.

BRAVE BLIND BABIES PLAY WITH SNAKES

LONDON, Oct. 31—Children from the Sunshine Home for Blind Babies at East Grinstead had a thrilling experience recently when each in turn became for one moment the driver of a real train. They were allowed to stand on the footplate during a round of visits in London.

An inspection of the Tarbay Express in the programme of the children's annual visit to London. After lunch at the National Institute for the Blind, the Sunshine Babies were taken to the Zoo.

Peter, a friendly chimpanzee, was introduced to them. He was allowed to walk with them in the grounds. He held their hands and kissed each child.

One of the children, feeling the chimpanzee's ears, exclaimed, "His ears are just like Daddy's."

At the back of the reptile house the children showed no fear when handling snakes, some of them of considerable length.

Pioneer Of Traffic Lights Before Court

LONDON, Oct. 31—Carl Janssen, a Dane, living at King Henry's-road, Chalk Farm, who claimed to be the first who introduced automatic traffic lights into this country, appeared at Thames Police Court recently on a summons alleging that he failed to observe traffic lights in Commercial-road, Stepney.

Janssen pleaded not guilty, and contended that the lights were that they changed to red before he reached the far side of the junction, because he pulled up to allow pedestrians to cross.

He said that he had been driving since 1903, his first licence having been issued in Denmark, and he had a perfectly clear record.

The Magistrate (Mr. John Harris) —It is unfortunate that the gentleman who introduced these lights into this country should have been apprehended for failing to observe them.

Janssen — It is, but I always pay special attention to them. I once had both legs smashed under a taxi-cab, and I am careful not to take risks.

Mr. Harris said that he thought that it was a case he would dismiss on payment of 10s. costs, so that there would be no conviction.

Cat Bitten By Spider Dies In 30 Minutes

LONDON, Oct. 31—A spider and a cat fought a duel in a London warehouse recently—and the spider won.

The spider was a tarantula, newly arrived from Honduras in a crate of bananas delivered to the Borough depot of Messrs. Hinton and Hooper, Ltd., a firm of Covent Garden importers, while his opponent was a stray tom, unlucky enough to be walking in the neighbourhood at the time.

A porter of the firm, Charles Murrell, an official of Messrs. Hinton and Hooper told a Morning Post representative, "was unpacking the crate when the spider jumped out."

"He tried to catch it, but it took great jumps across the floor and the cat, seeing it, tried to be playful. He was promptly bitten and died within half an hour."

"Meanwhile the spider hunt went on, and we eventually caught it by throwing a hat over it. At first we placed it in a glass bottle, but later we decided to kill it."

DONKEYS USED AS BAIT IN JAMAICA MOSQUITO TRAPS

(By The Canadian Press)

KINGSTON, Jamaica, Oct. 31—The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals is preparing a protest to the Government of Jamaica against the use of live donkeys as "bait" in the Department of Health's mosquito traps.

The traps were set up on St. Andrew's plain as part of the campaign in this colony's organized investigation into the origin of malaria.

The box-like structure in which the gnats conveying the dread malaria germ are captured were built by the Department of Public Works from plans furnished by the Co-operative Health Department, an associate of Rockefeller Foundation and the Central Board of Health.

The wooden traps, made large enough to hold a donkey, are covered on one side with fine wire netting. The opposite wall contains numerous small slits.

When a donkey is tied in the enclosure in the evening, mosquitoes swarm in through the slits and settle for the night on the unfortunate "bait." Before daybreak, sanitary officers, in charge of the study of malaria in this colony, close the small openings and have a "catch."

The traps are shifted from one breeding area to another as the officers try to determine the districts in which the malaria-spreading mosquitoes thrive.

The Department of Health have found the traps very helpful in their study of the disease but it is found the donkey suffers too much from the behavior of his bed-fellows, dead bait will probably be substituted.

Helen Hayes—Robert Montgomery In "Vanessa" At Prince Edward

Two of the cinema's most brilliant stars, Helen Hayes and Robert Montgomery, came onto the screen of the Prince Edward Theatre yesterday in one of the season's outstanding photoplays.

It is "Vanessa," Her Love Story, the adaptation of Hugh Walpole's saga of the spectacular Herries family.

Brimming with high romance, rich with the idealistic sweetness of the last generation, the story tells the tender tale of a woman who, loving one man with all the blind adoration of youth, is persuaded to accept marriage with another.

Top Splendid Cast

Helen Hayes has seldom, if ever, equalled her performance in the role of the Walpole heroine. And certainly Montgomery never has done a finer or more believable bit of work than as first, the wild Rogue Herries, and then the modern Benjie who inherits his ancestor's wild strain.

With the stars is Otto Kruger in one of the season's most difficult roles—that of the mad husband of Miss Hayes, making her life unbearable by his crafty suspicions. Kruger has never had a more tricky role, and it is difficult to imagine an actor who could have played it with more sincerity.

May Robson Scores

With these is an outstanding cast, each of whom deserves special mention. They include such favorites as May Robson, Lewis Stone, Henry Stephenson, Violet Kemble-Cooper, Donald Crisp, Jessie Ralph, Agnes Anderson, Lionel Belmore, Lawrence Grant, Crauford Kent, Howard Leeds, Ethel Griffies, Elsiebeth Dudgeon, Mabel Gordon, Ellen Pringle and George K. Arthur.

"Vanessa: Her Love Story" is the latest Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production of David O. Selznick, who gave the screen "Viva Villa!" "David Copperfield" and "Dinner at Eight." William K. Howard directed.
