Utilities Show Strength On New York Mart

By FREDERICK GARDNER, Associate Press Financial Writer. NEW YORK, Jan. 12—Stock market leaders bucked profit cashing today and retreated a little in the process. Only the utilities, as a group, stayed on the plus side throughout the session, although a few rails and gold mines held gains earned in an early rally. Reports the administration favored cooperation with the utilities on a program calling for non-duplication of private facilities provided the focus of resistance for power company shares. Issues were generally improved on the Canadian list. Dome gained 1 1/8 points to 56 1/8. Gains of 7-8 of a point and less were shown in International Nickel, McIntyre, Brazilian, Marconi, Ford, and Lake Shore. Shawinigan, and Distillers-Seagram receded slightly. Transactions fell under yesterday's figure, totalling 1,209,800 shares against 1,506,260. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks dropped 2 1/2 points. Utilities in the compilation added .60 of a point at 34.9.

In Memoriam

MR. JOHN DEVEREAUX

It is with deep regret and a feeling of personal loss that we pen these lines in the memory of John Devereaux who passed away to his Eternal reward at his home in New Haven on the morning of Dec. 25th. The deceased was 77 years old and enjoyed a fair measure of health up to a few months ago when he was stricken with an illness which, despite all medical treatment and tender nursing, proved fatal, and he passed peacefully away, on Christmas morning, to be forever in the presence of the Prince of Peace.

John Devereaux was a life-long resident of New Haven and was held in high esteem by all who knew him. He was strictly honest and charitable and his word was as good as his bond. By honest toil and intelligence he built for himself and his family a lovely home where all were welcome, where the wayfarer and the traveller were kindly admitted and generously cared for, and where he ruled with a firm but gentle hand.

In his early manhood he married Teresa McGuigan, of Kelly's Cross, who proved indeed a faithful helpmate and who, with their daughter, Mary, R.N., was constantly at his bedside in his last declining days, tenderly caring for him in the hope that his health might be again restored to him. But God willed otherwise.

During his illness he was frequently visited by his pastor who administered to him all the comforting sacraments for the dying. Much will be missed in the community and in the parish of St. Ann's where his wise counsel was eagerly sought and freely given. But it is in the home where his absence will be keenly felt for he was in very truth a loving husband and a kind father.

Besides his sorrowing wife he leaves to mourn his passing the following family: Joseph and Frank in Worcester, Mass., Mary, R.N., and Ivan at home. Two brothers, Michael, New Haven, and William, San Francisco and two sisters, Helen, Charlottetown, and Mrs. Elizabeth Campbell, Millerville survive him. One son, Jack, student at P.V.C., predeceased him fifteen years ago.

The funeral was held from his late residence to St. Ann's church on Dec. 27th and, despite the almost impassable condition of the roads, was well attended. The services at the church and at the grave were performed by his pastor, Father Herrell. The pallbearers were as follows: Messrs. S. H. Colwell, John Boyle, Geo. Smith, Clement Wynne, John McMillan and M. J. McIvor. May he rest in peace.

Prairie Views For Record As Quest Resumes

(By CARL REINKE) (Canadian Press Staff Writer)

OTTAWA, Jan. 12 (CP)—Faced with common problems varying only in degree, the Manitoba and Saskatchewan governments travelled along broadly similar lines in their recent submissions before the Royal Commission on Dominion-Provincial Relations which will reopen sittings here Jan. 17.

Nationalization of social services, especially unemployment relief, was the keystone of the formula proposed by each province as a remedy for their present difficult situation.

Provincial debt adjustment on a lower interest basis and substantial change in national tariff and freight rate policies were likewise held fundamental to a solution of the present situation, but Dominion assumption of social services was felt most vital, for these reasons:

The Dominion government had unlimited taxing powers while fixed provincial revenue sources were inadequate to the growing burden. Such a shifting, it was argued, would also tend to offset existing "inequities" of the country and would assure every Canadian a certain minimum standard of social services, regardless of geography or climate.

Next week some of the more national aspects of Dominion-Provincial Relations will be placed before the commission. Basic problems of confederation will be pictured then from the viewpoint of big business and organized labor, from the viewpoint of various professional groups and industrial interests.

For 10 days such national organizations as the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, the Canadian Medical Association, the Communist Party of Canada, the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, will submit their views on the constitutional and economic ills of the country.

Resuming Tour

After that the commission will proceed with its hearings in the provincial capitals, opening at Halifax Feb. 3 and Charlottetown, Feb. 10, then Edmonton March 2, Victoria March 14, Toronto April 19 and Quebec May 2. The New Brunswick brief will likely be heard between the British Columbia and Ontario sittings.

In its Manitoba and Saskatchewan hearings, it was generally felt the commission made a fortunate start on its historic task of studying possible financial defects in the British North America Act. In both cases the governments had conscientiously assembled a great mass of relevant data and material, much of it never compiled before, purporting to show just how impossible their present situation was. They theorized about causes and then proposed their solutions.

A major cause of the financial embarrassment of both provinces was held to be the imposition of a host of new social services in recent years while their revenues were still gauged to government activities of the "horse-and-buggy" days of 70 years ago when the British North America Act was adopted.

Both agreed the strain of the last seven years, through the deadly combination of depressed farm prices and bad crops, had revealed faults in the present set-up and left the provincial government with an overwhelming load of debt. They contended, however, that provincial revenues were now so far out of line with provincial responsibilities that they could not meet even what had become normal government expenditures, exclusive of relief.

Manitoba presented a clear-cut and well-organized case. It proposed the provinces should be completely relieved of the burden of relief and old age pensions and half the responsibilities for other social services.

It proposed that the provincial debt problem should be met by the Dominion assuming the total relief debt, by the Dominion capitalizing its subsidies to the province at 3 1-4 per cent and by refunding the rest of the provincial debt at that same interest rate—with Dominion aid.

Changes Suggested

As compensation, Manitoba was prepared to turn over its succession duties to the Dominion but not its income tax, which is more substantial. It promised also to increase its grants to the municipalities substantially.

While the province worked out its plan to dollars and cents, critics questioned whether it had been over-simplified and whether its debt-adjustment proposals were quite practical.

It was pointed out no detailed suggestions were made of how the proposed refunding was to be effected, whether voluntarily or compulsorily, or how bonds of various term and yield were to be handled in one operation. It was suggested, too, there might have been some guarantee, such as a national loan council, for protection of provincial creditors against a recurrence of the current financial conditions.

Provincial government economists appeared to run into some difficulty when they tried to show in terms of money the "damage" Western Canada had suffered from national policies which they felt primarily benefited Central Canada. This was advanced presumably as argument for reduction of

Prairie Proposals

Saskatchewan was quite as specific in depicting the completeness of its misfortune but the province was more general in proposed remedial measures.

The province also advocated the Dominion taking over relief and refund, as well as helping to refund at 3 1-2 per cent the remainder of the provincial debt. They agreed, on the other hand, to the Dominion getting income taxes, corporation taxes and succession duties in compensation.

The province urged elimination of the customs tariff from instruments of production and its drastic reduction on necessities of life, as well as a review of the freight rate structure with a view to giving some relief to exporters of primary products from Western Canada.

At the same time Saskatchewan stressed the necessity of materially increased unconditional subsidies from the Dominion to offset the disability created by tariff and freight rate policies apparently imposed by the will of the majority. Some critics felt these two proposals should have been alternatives.

Saskatchewan also asked for the right to impose indirect taxation to bolster its revenues, although it agreed to give up co-operation income taxes.

The provinces urged constitutional amendments to give the Dominion authority to deal with unemployment and health insurance, conciliation and arbitration in labor disputes, general labor legislation covering wages and hours, right of association, abolition of child labor.

As the commission's first two hearings progressed they became more informal, with more of the atmosphere of a round-table conference and less the air of legal proceedings. This was illustrated best when Hon. J. G. Taggart, Saskatchewan minister of agriculture, was describing the condition and future of agriculture in that province, as commissioners and counsel all sought information by questioning a man who had it.
