

Special Notice

Having purchased from Mr. F. J. Hornsby the stock and good will of his books and Stationery Business in the Morris Block, we will continue the business in its various branches, selling at lowest prices for cash only, Miss B. M. Hornsby, who has managed the business in the past, will be in charge of the store, and will be pleased to attend to all old customers and many new ones.

A choice new stock of Wall Papers will be at once put on sale, and all departments of the business will be kept well stocked. A well supplied news stand will be a special feature of the business. The store will be known as "The Bazaar Bookstore."

"The Scriptures Say"

That we are to be moulded and fashioned, so the sand we use for our castings needs to be moulded and fashioned. That's what our moulders are doing every day, moulding and fashioning the sand like unto the patterns. It is therefore very important that the patterns be first-class in every respect, for as the patterns are so will the castings be. We have first-class pattern-makers employed and are able to meet the required need. Give us a trial when in need of Castings.

THE MORNING GUARDIAN

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 23, 1900.

THE "EXAMINER" AGAIN.

The Examiner yesterday had the grace to quote a part of what THE GUARDIAN said in favor of the Opposition's support to the Prohibition Bill. It thus admits that we said they "gave their support to the principle of the Bill, and that they went much farther in proposing, and supporting with their votes amendments designed to make it more stringent and effective." "But," says the Examiner, "there is not a word of commendation for the Opposition in this extract."

We are well aware that from the Examiner-saloon point of view the extract is not commendatory. From that quarter the Opposition might have been commended had they voted against the principle of the Bill instead of in its favor, and if they had introduced and voted for amendments calculated to weaken the Bill instead of strengthening it. But from the temperance and prohibitory standpoint, and from THE GUARDIAN'S point of view our statement was in the strongest way commendatory. We have said in effect that they did the right thing and have defended them against the animadversions and aspersions of the Examiner and the saloon keepers.

The Conservative temperance men and prohibitionists of Prince Edward Island will readily reach the conclusion that we have heartily commended the Opposition members who voted for Prohibition. They have equally conclusive evidence that the Examiner has censured these Conservative representatives for supporting a measure which that journal has declared to be "a fraud and a humbug" and "a shameful compromise."

THE SITUATION IN CHINA.

The situation in China has developed suddenly into warfare on an extended scale. The attack upon the Taku forts at the mouth of the Peiho River on Sunday last appears to have developed into a serious engagement in which British, American, Russian, German and Japanese vessels took part, while these strong defences, armed with modern cannon, were able to hold the allied ships at bay for seven hours. It was, in fact, a much more serious battle than that of Manila, which was a battle without casualties on the American side, though it made the fame of Admiral Dewey. A British and an American war vessel were each badly damaged in the fight at Taku, being apparently engaged at close range and struck with shells many times.

In the end the forts were blown to pieces, and the garrison driven out at the point of the bayonet, the troops engaged in the landing being mainly made up of 10,000 Russians, upon whom the bulk of the casualties fell. The allied losses are reported as 21 killed and 57 wounded, of whom, 16 killed and 45 wounded belong to the Russian forces. So far the allies were victorious, but it is less assuring to learn that Admiral Seymour, who made the attempt to push forward from Tien Tsin with a small force of allied marines, for the purpose of relieving the Embassies and foreign residents at Peking, had been forced to return to Tien Tsin.

From the Taku forts at the mouth of the river to Tien Tsin is approximately a distance of 35 miles, and thence on to Peking a distance of 73 miles. A railway, built by British capital and operated by Englishmen, runs through from the mouth of the river, and parallel with its southern bank to Peking. This railway, with the telegraph line were first interrupted and since mainly destroyed between Tien Tsin and the Chinese capital. Still later the railway and telegraph between Taku and Tien Tsin have been destroyed. The Peiho River is navigable for gunboats, but not for larger warships as far as Tien Tsin.

There is little doubt that the war thus begun will go on till an international army has marched to Peking and brought the Chinese Government to terms. This the concerted powers are abundantly able to effect. But there are other grave questions. Will the war become general along the extensive Chinese seaboard? Will the powers be able to settle peacefully among themselves the future status of China, the territory to be permanently held and the spheres of influence for each? Will the long talked of partition of China be an immediate result? These and other questions make the situation one of great gravity for all the powers concerned.

Specialists Condemn Handkerchief.

An American exchange declares, on the authority of a specialist, that the practice of using linen handkerchiefs is one of the most pernicious countenanced by polite society. Colds, catarrh and influenza are steadily propagated by this means—its possibility of bacilli multiplication being endless. Instead of their use being fastidiously neat, it is intolerably untidy, and we shall have gone but a little way into the 20th century, the specialist predicts, before science will convince us of the truth of his utterances. The practice of the Japanese who use fine white paper handkerchiefs, which they buy in blocks and throw away after using, is recommended. It would be more satisfactory to burn them, for if thrown away they would become a facile source of contagion. Paper handkerchiefs have already been advised for the use of tuberculosis patients, but this authority urges they should entirely supersede the use of linen handkerchiefs. The fact is impressed, too, in a family in which two or three persons are affected with catarrh the greatest care of handkerchiefs and towels should be observed. Paper handkerchiefs are the only sanitary means of meeting the conditions and their use would be to narrow very perceptibly the limit of contagion.

A Romance by Prof. Young.

A British exchange discussing "What may happen in a thousand years," says:—"Professor Yung, of the University of Guef, Switzerland, entertains great fears concerning the future of our lower limbs. This sage is of the opinion that within the next thousand years human beings will have forgotten how to use their legs, and that these limbs, if evolution will not do away with them, will serve as mere ornaments to the rest of the body. Professor Aung states that at the present age human beings show a decided aversion to personal or physical locomotion, and this is more manifest every time a new automatic travelling instrument is invented and rendered practical. Steam, electricity, cable power, and the different velocipede machines all bear an influence over us and create a dislike for walking, and the future generation will likely have the convenience of steerable air ships at their windows and electric automobiles at their doors, and these conveyances will be so cheap that almost every one can own them, and this means the doom of our legs. The latter will be regarded as superfluous appendages, no use will be made of them, and who knows but that they may disappear altogether? But so much more will our arms develop in length and strength. These are the cruel laws of evolution, and it will be due to their pranks that future generations will again resemble apes. There will come another epoch of short legs and long arms."
