Interesting Motor "Movie" Shown Here

An interesting demonstration of the new Plymouth model cars produced by the Chrysler Automobile manufacturers was given in the showrooms of Rankine McLaine, Grafton Street, last evening. A large crowd attended the show and expressed keen interest in the series of reels run off displaying the latest innovations and improvements in motoring, from the stand point of beauty and safety. The "movie" demonstrated the endurance of Plymouth under all conditions. It exemplified its fine breakage system, all-steel body and turret top. In several incidents the car was subjected to severe hardships, purposely rolled over embankments, driven over ploughed fields, railway tracks, etc. In every test the Plymouth came through with "colors flying." In one case on being driven over an embankment the car righted itself and continued under its own power. The pictures were shown by Mr. A. D. Matthews of Halifax, Maritime representative of Chrysler and Plymouth Motors, and Mr. C. W. Hoyt of Halifax, service representative for the Maritimes.

Anglo-American Collaboration Is Advocated

(C. P. by Guardian's Special Wire) LONDON, Nov. 17—The collaboration of the United States "in peace, and if necessary, in war," is the "tremendous prize" for which Great Britain should strive, the House of Lords was told today by Lord Strabolgi, Labor peer. Now that President Roosevelt has been re-elected, the British Government "should turn its eyes to the west instead of to the east," to seek improvement of world economic conditions, "and as a last resort, to secure the preservation of peace," Lord Strabolgi declared in a debate in which the Government's rearmament program and foreign policy were sharply attacked. A charge that the Government's refusal to state its policy was "far more dangerous than armaments" was made by the Marquis of Lothian. "The first thing we have to consider," Lord Lothian said, "is whether we can preserve, and if so, under what conditions, the system of free institutions known as the British Commonwealth of Nations." "The United States of America is pre-empting another system under the Monroe Doctrine, and she is determined not to get into mad-dened Europe at any cost." Lord Strabolgi, however, pointed to the Buenos Aires Pan-American Peace Conference, which President Roosevelt will attend, as proof the United States "is not so isolationist as some politicians make out."

"There is a tremendous prize here to be striven for," he declared. "If we can get the collaboration of the United States in the economic field, in peace, and if necessary in war, I believe that is the greatest step forward to peace which is within our power." Lord Strabolgi moved a resolution calling on the Government to furnish full information on the progress of its arms program and to state its foreign policy aims. He questioned the accuracy of a recent Government estimate of the relative strength of airplanes and battleships, declaring that the air arm of the navy should be greatly strengthened and British naval bases more heavily fortified against air attack. A Fascist triumph in Spain would mean serious danger to British interests, Lord Strabolgi said, suggesting that Italy and Germany might thereby obtain Mediterranean bases which would weaken British communications. He wanted to know whether the War Ministry contemplated the possibility of having to maintain a continental army in the interests of collective security. "I should have thought that there would be better uses for our army in the unfortunate event of war, than manning the Maginot line," he declared. "We don't believe the country is so weak as has been stated," he said in conclusion. Basing British policy on the League of Nations was criticized by Lord Lothian, who described it as a policy of bluff, and doubted whether the League system "could be made to work in terms of collective security."

"The policy of the League of Nations means that you are bound to go to war sooner or later simultaneously with Japan, Italy and Germany," he asserted, and concluded with criticism of the Franco-Soviet pact as "quits clearly outside the normal procedure of the League."

When the Great War was still in progress Mr. Molson entered the Royal Naval College at Osborne and from there he went in due course to complete his training at Dartmouth. When the war ended he completed his naval career and completed his education at the great English Public School at Lancing, and at New College, Oxford. In preparation for a parliamentary career Mr. Molson went to India as the political secretary of the Association of the Indian Chambers of Commerce. There he assisted in the preparation of the memorandum to the Simon Commission then in the midst of its enquiries into the extent to which India could proceed to a further stage of self government. His work brought him into contact with every facet of Indian life and he was able to acquire that expert knowledge which he was to use with such effect in the House of Commons when the Government of India Bill was finally drafted six years later. After three years in India he returned to England. In a whirlwind campaign Molson won a seat in the National Government in the general election. Once in Parliament Molson quickly proved that the reputation he had won outside rested on solid foundations. He was one of the few young men in that parliament who really counted. Then disaster befell Doncaster, the constituency Molson represented, was traditionally socialist and was bound to revert to its old allegiance. Although he could have sought a seat in the solid residential south Molson stood his ground. His supporters had worked hard for him and he did not desert them but faced certain defeat. An early return to Westminster was predicted for Mr. Molson and a distinguished future in the public life of Britain. He has deliberately prepared himself for service in the parliamentary field and set an example which it is probable many young men of ability and character will emulate.

Rising English Statesman To Speak Here

Mr. Hugh Molson of England, who for the past three months has been making a lecture tour of Canada, is expected to arrive in Charlottetown tonight. Tomorrow night at 8:15 Mr. Molson will address a public meeting at Prince of Wales College Hall on "British Foreign policy and the international situation." The lecture will be held under the auspices of the Adult Education League of Prince Edward Island. The distinguished speaker came to Canada early in September of this year as the guest of the National Council of Education.

Charged In Death Of Fellow Worker

HEARST, Ont., Nov. 17—(CP)—Joseph Lanteigne, self-styled "lion of the north" was charged with murder today following a coroner's inquest into the death of Napoleon Roderique, a fellow lumberjack, after an alleged fight from which Roderique never regained consciousness. The fight allegedly occurred last week in Mattice, 20 miles west of this Northern Ontario centre on the Canadian National Railway's transcontinental line. Provincial Constable Ralph Crozier and Constable A. E. Staples of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police arrested Lanteigne and brought him here. He was held without bail. After evidence that Lanteigne "jumped on him with both feet" the jury brought in a verdict that Roderique came to his death from blows inflicted by Lanteigne.

S. S. HARLAND SOLD TO CAPE BRETON FIRM

The coastal steamship Harland was sold yesterday to the Strait's Shipping and Construction Co. of Sydney, C. B., Mr. R. E. Mutch, president of the Charlottetown Steamship Co., said last night. The Harland built over twenty years ago, had been used in the Prince Edward Island coastal trade except for a few years during the Great War when the ship was on the Pictou, N. S., and Georgetown, P. E. I., run. Owned by the Charlottetown Steamship Co., the Harland had piled on the Hillsboro and West Rivers emptying into Charlottetown Harbor and to Victoria and Orwell on the south shore of the Province. Last summer the subsidy for the service was discontinued and the ship had remained tied up at Charlottetown wharf. Although no announcement was made it is believed that the Harland will be used next summer on the Sydney, C. B. and Montague, P. E. I., service to replace the S. S. Enterprise which was burned at St. Peter's canal in Cape Breton recently. Negotiations for the purchase of the Harland were carried on by Mr. W. N. MacDonald of Sydney, C. B.

German-Japanese Alliance Bared

Russia Charges Secret Military Pact As Communist Bloc Formed. (A. P. by Guardian's Special Wire) MOSCOW, Nov. 17—Russia tonight charged 23 Germans with participating in a widespread plot to overthrow the Soviet regime, after a communique declared Germany and Japan had signed a secret military pact against Russia. An official statement alleged the Germans, recently arrested plotted to steal secret military information, wreck industrial plants and kill government leaders. Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinoff, a communique said, told German ambassador Friedrich von der Schulenberg, that several of those under arrest had confessed their guilt. The assertion that Japan and Germany had signed a military alliance directed against Russia was contained in an earlier statement issued through the foreign office and credited to the Tass official (Russian) news agency. It contained Japanese denials of a military pact, but declared that authoritative information held the agreement, ostensibly an accord against Communism, in reality was a "secret pact for coordinated action between Japan and Germany in case one of them finds itself at war with a third power." (The German propaganda ministry termed the communique a "periodic lie.") Replying to German protests against the arrests, Assistant Foreign Commissar Krestinsky said all formalities contained in a German-Russian agreement of 1925 governing such cases had been observed. Von der Schulenberg was reported to have told Litvinoff he doubted the guilt of the Germans under arrest and to have said there was no German Fascist organization in Russia. The Tass Agency, in reporting the asserted Japanese-German alliance said it was completed after Japan had given strong assurances at Tokyo that nothing would hamper "close friendly relations with the U. S. S. R."

The Japanese, the agency's communique said, contended rumored military aspects of the pact were without foundation. With the Tass communique splashed on all Russian newspapers tonight, Marshal Klement Voroshiloff urged officers of the Russian submarine fleet in the Pacific to strengthen their Far Eastern bases.

These sources, however, acknowledged it as possible military provisions had been included, but said Russia was assuming "the worst from the understanding." EXPRESS SATISFACTION ROME, Nov. 17—(AP)—Russian allegations of a Japanese-German alliance against Russia were refuted tonight with satisfaction in circles which generally reflect Italian Government opinion. The authoritative Virginia Gayda, writing in the Giornale d'Italia, declared "the anti-Communist front created by Italy and Germany at Berlin and widened at Vienna with the participation of Austria and Hungary is thus extended within a month to the Far East."

Planes Grounded At Saint John

HALIFAX, Nov. 17—(CP)—Three Royal Canadian Air Force planes which left the Eastern Passage base here yesterday for winter quarters in Montreal were grounded in Saint John, N. B., because of weather conditions, Wing Commander H. Edwards said tonight. He was unable to say whether the planes would return to Halifax or resume their flight to Montreal, when weather conditions cleared. Possibility of air bases being established by the Royal Canadian Air Force at Sydney and Yarmouth in eastern and western Nova Scotia, in addition to the main Atlantic base at Eastern Passage was mentioned today by Air Force officers following an aerial survey of the province.

With the Tass communique splashed on all Russian newspapers tonight, Marshal Klement Voroshiloff urged officers of the Russian submarine fleet in the Pacific to strengthen their Far Eastern bases.
