

How I Got Rid of Burning Feet

And Pains from Corns and Bunions Without Soaking, Powders, Plasters, Etc. After Suffering Indescribable Foot Misery for 20 Years.

Prof. F. T. McIntyre, well known world-famous lecturer, says: "For years I was compelled to wear shoes two sizes too large, to be able to walk with any comfort at all. I tried powders, plasters, liquids and foot-treatments galore, but the burning, catenous and soreness refused to go, while the pains from corns and bunions continued to torture both mind and body, which upset my entire nervous system. One day, very fortunately, I met a lady from Exeter, who gave me a little box of Gypsy Foot Relief, which she said was a secret from the desert. After using it a short time, the awful burning stopped, the callouses came off in chunks, leaving the skin clean and smooth, while the pains from corns and bunions seemed to disappear as if by magic. From that time, I said a joyful word to you over twenty years of indescribable foot misery. I would not take a hundred thousand dollars to get another box of Gypsy Foot Relief." The wonderful Gypsy Foot Relief, referred to by Mr. McIntyre, may be applied in a minute, without fuss or bother. It is a quick relief, and it is the only one, later, or the makers give back the little you pay. It is sold in this city at each drug store.

Horse Trains Goat To Ride
(Special to the Guardian)
LONDON, Aug. 23.—A strange friendship exists between a horse and a kid quartered together in a field near Burton-on-Trent. The kid taps the horse's leg with its hoof and runs to a foal pen, followed by the horse. The kid vaults on the roof of the pen and then on the horse's back and rides in triumph round the field. The feat is repeated daily to the delight of many spectators. The animals have trained themselves.

EXCITING EXPERIENCE.—During the storm of Sunday evening an Indian, Teddy Lewis, and his wife, who were in a dory, were compelled to beach their boat at Rustico. The couple, who left New London Sunday morning, were making for Rocky Point, where they intend spending a winter at the Reservation. While off Rustico a north easter came up and the couple were unable to reach the harbor. Their boat was loaded with baskets and household effects, and consequently hard to handle. With the wind blowing a gale and the rain pouring in torrents they beached their boat. They were preparing a temporary shelter with the sail when their predicament was seen by Mrs. Phemie Marshall, who went down and kindly brought the couple, thoroughly drenched with rain and salt water, to her home, the "Churchill House" and kept them there until Monday, when they set off again.

Voices: Ask Capt. Bonnell the man who's supposed to be running for the district. (laughter.)

As the Doubling Thomases in the hall were still unglanced on the tax question Mr. Lea again declared that the amount collected out of the country was nothing compared with what came out of the wealth of the province and this should have been considered if it were not necessary, years ago. Some men paying $30 under the Conservatives were made to pay up to the tune of $1,600.

A Voice: What about the poll tax?

Mr. Lea replied that a farmer getting protection from the state should make some contribution and that if he paid taxes for two or three sons he should consider himself a lucky farmer to have them around. He would have to pay the money on his land anyway if he did not pay it in poll tax. Whatever government follows the Bell government they will have to raise this money or go in debt. The government was straining every effort under the sun to keep expenses down.

Voices: "What about the salary grab?"

Lively Sallies

Mr. Gillis the Progressive candidate the next speaker also referred to the fact that the present bye-elections are being held only a year in advance of the general election and just a year after they should have been held. To the memory of the late Mr. Sutherland, he paid due respect as a man held in the highest esteem in his community. In coming forward as a Progressive candidate he trusted the people would believe that his Conservative opponent was only attempting to resurrect an old buried party and the only good thing in his favor was that the party he represented had been succeeded in office by a worse foe. The government evidently feared the insecurity of their own position in the Murray Harbor district as tonight they have all their big guns present when they are badly needed in Prince County. To the speaker's mind the Bell government is the most dangerous government the province has ever had. They have got in an awful degree the mania for spending money and they don't care where it comes from as long as they get it (applause) Three years ago their cry was to oust the Conservatives who were spending $500,000 and today they are spending from three quarters of a million to a million dollars; they gave the people to understand that taxes would be reduced and today they point to the Bell manifesto and declare there is nothing that effect to be found there. There is nothing nothing of anything to be found there, but this promise was the tone of their pre-election campaign and there is not a man in the audience who was not led to believe from listening to them that taxes would not be reduced, that the strictest economy would be practiced and that there would be sufficient money saved from the revenue to give the teachers their salary increase. When they got into power they practically doubled the taxes, and seized money wherever they could get it. They do not deny today that they failed to live up to their promises but they make the excuse that they could not help it and so the only opinion the country can arrive at is that an irresponsible government is in power. The salary grab the speaker believed should have been condemned in stronger terms by the opposition press at the proper time. He was not questioning whether it was too much or not but he was opposed to the method by which it was obtained.

Capt. Bonnell the Liberal candidate was called upon but instead of addressing the meeting asked leave to call upon Hon. Mr. Lea, Commissioner of Agriculture, to speak for him. In the embarrassing silence which followed this announcement Mr. Lea explained that the occasion gave him a great deal of pleasure because he always believed it his duty of a government representative to face the people. Much had been said about false pre-election promises but whatever promises the Harbor representative might have made about cutting down taxes he acquiesced himself on this score. The Bell government had simply been content to face conditions as they found them, there being a big overdraft on the bank, a satisfaction among the teachers and a shortage of $232,000. There was a difference of $60,000 between public works estimates and expenditure. The matter of education, the land tax and poll tax which did not come within the scope of the meeting, the teachers alone and the bulk of their money had to be raised from sources that the other government did not intend to touch.

Voices—"Where did you get it?"

Mr. Lea: "From the wealth of the province. (laughter.)"

Mr. Lea denied that the government increased two and a half times the taxes and he was contradicted by votes from different parts of the hall declaring that the proportion was greater than that. Mr. Lea added that it might be if people were not paying enough before and the reply came back as an echo "We're paying enough now all right!"

Mr. Lea assured his hearers that the federal tax was not raised early on and that if the provincial taxes had not been raised when they were we would be another million dollars in debt.

The first two or three years the Conservatives were in they built steel bridges. Mr. Lea admitted but claimed they neglected them afterwards. The expenses had to be met and he would like to ask Mr. Gillis how he proposed to meet them.

Voices: Ask Capt. Bonnell the man who's supposed to be running for the district. (laughter.)

As the Doubling Thomases in the hall were still unglanced on the tax question Mr. Lea again declared that the amount collected out of the country was nothing compared with what came out of the wealth of the province and this should have been considered if it were not necessary, years ago. Some men paying $30 under the Conservatives were made to pay up to the tune of $1,600.

A Voice: What about the poll tax?

Mr. Lea replied that a farmer getting protection from the state should make some contribution and that if he paid taxes for two or three sons he should consider himself a lucky farmer to have them around. He would have to pay the money on his land anyway if he did not pay it in poll tax. Whatever government follows the Bell government they will have to raise this money or go in debt. The government was straining every effort under the sun to keep expenses down.

Voices: "What about the salary grab?"

Mr. Lea: "The Progressives met the other day behind closed doors and they did not touch that question. I will not say that it was not a political error in passing it at that time but it was passed by the whole house."

Voices: "Tell us what you told us at the last election." (laughter.)

Mr. Lea: "That's what I always told you at last election. (increased laughter.)"

Voices: You said you were going to reduce the taxes.

Mr. Lea denied this, and said he was sorry if anybody had been false enough to do that. "Let the dead past bury its dead," he declared, but offered to resign if anybody could point to anything wrong he had done in office.

A voice: You should have resigned two years ago. (laughter.)

When Mr. Lea had sat down after briefly referring to the highways expenditures Mr. John McSwain of Highbank asking for permission to speak declared he had been at the Highbank meeting last election when Mr. Lea gave the understanding that he was going to cut down taxes. Asked how, he had said by cutting the salaries of some of the officials who were getting too much.

Mr. Lea denied this, which was again repeated and again denied.

Mr. J. A. MacDonald of Cardigan speaking briefly on behalf of the Conservative candidate who according to the arrangement was allowed to give so much of his allotted time to a ny speaker, said with reference to Mr. Lea's denial of Mr. McSwain's charge, that at any rate he was in the House of Assembly when the estimates were being passed and when a motion was made by the then opposition to cut down salaries, because they knew it could not be done, Mr. Lea voted for that resolution and yet as a member of the government however he took his increase he without complaint. What his actual salary is today is hidden away in different accounts, $845 in little items in addition to the $1,000 salary he got before.

Mr. Lea: That's expenses for travelling.

Mr. McDonald: No sir, it is not expenses for travelling.

Mr. Lea: "Yes it is."

Mr. McDonald: "Well then, the accounts are not correct. The real grievance of the people is simply in these little matters in which you have deceived and fooled the people. In the Cardigan district our people were told that the official salaries were too high. And yet will Mr. Lea himself deny that he has not increased those officials in his office?"

Mr. Lea: "There is the same number as always."

Mr. McDonald: "It is this year. There might have been more when we were busy."

Mr. McDonald: "We are dealing with the accounts. We don't know what you are doing this year: there are many things you are doing this year that we don't know of. Did you ever say to the people that necessary public taxes were necessary?" (cries of "You bet they didn't!")

No; but you said: "If we had the revenue the Arsenal government here we could run the country without taxation."

Mr. Lea: No, no. We didn't say that.

Mr. McDonald: Those are the words. (Applause.)

Several voices at once: "Yes you did; those are the words."

Mr. McDonald in conclusion referred to the statement of the deficit credited of the outgoing Arsenal government and asked why the Liberals did not collect the taxes in 1919?

Mr. Lea: "We collected the land tax."

Mr. McDonald: "No sir, you did not try to collect it."

Mr. Lea: "We collected it as soon as we could."

Mr. McDonald: "You made no effort to collect it, because you which is largely a myth, I was going to say 'largely collected' but I don't like the use of that word because I don't believe Mr. Lea could concoct anything."

Mr. Lea after some further lively sallies at the Commissioner Mr. McDonald was informed that his time was up and he sat down much to the evident regret of the audience, who applauded him vigorously.

The meeting was then addressed briefly by Messrs. Martin McKinnon, S. S. Hessian, and again by Mr. Gillis, the Progressive candidate who repudiated any connection with the Bell government. The meeting closed in splendid order.

Boston Auburns Ch'town Nine

A baseball game has been arranged for this evening at the Abwegwet grounds, between the Boston Auburns and the Charlottetown nine. As this is likely to be the last chance to see a Boston game this season, no doubt a large turn out of fans will assemble at the grounds.

The finish of the Boys Bicycle Road Race will also take place on the track, and this will give every body an equal chance of viewing the finish of the race from the grand stand and bleachers, without any effort. As will be seen by the report of the Scottish games, sport is coming back strong, and it only now lacks the attendance of the fans, and especially those who can shout the loudest. The game will start at o'clock sharp, be on time and get a good seat to view the finish of the first Boys Bicycle Road Race ever staged in Charlottetown.

Some Excitement At Toronto

TORONTO, Aug. 23.—Police headquarters were entertained today by the presence of a little French woman from Ottawa who persisted in saying that she knew where Ambrose J. Small was buried. She had told the same story at the Parliament buildings and had been cursorily directed to Toronto city hall. When she sought an interview with Police Inspector Wallace, he, in turn, politely directed her somewhere else. Every request from the Inspector provoked a volley of French. Finally in desperation he escorted her into the hallway and barricaded himself behind a closed door. The woman is the same who insisted at the time of the Doughty trial that Small was buried in a cellar in Ottawa.

PEACEFUL HAGUE IS GERMAN'S PARADISE

Much is read in the papers of the day about "The Hague" and "The Hague Peace Conference" and yet it is surprising how very few people know just where it is for anything particular about it beyond the fact that Andrew Carnegie, the great philanthropist and library builder, built a huge and very ornamental building there in which the leaders of the world's affairs might assemble on practically neutral ground and confer as to the best methods of securing a permanent world peace.

"The Hague" is the official capital of the Netherlands, in South Holland, the land of canals and windmills. It is two and one-half miles from the North Sea and is spoken of as one of the "staidest, quietest, proudest and most respectable cities in the world."

Everything about The Hague is solid and substantial. All the inhabitants seem to be born middle aged. There are no variety theatres, vaudeville houses, dance halls or night life of any kind and yet, it is distinguished because it is said that you can secure there the biggest, best and most satisfactory meals in the world for less than half of what they cost anywhere else.

At the Restaurant Royale, The Hague's "Delmonico" or "Ritz" you may secure a nine course dinner, each course sufficient for a full meal or an ordinary man for five gulden ($2.00.)

Read, oh lover of good things, what that two dollars will bring: Half a mutton to begin with, then hors-d'oeuvre in abundance and of elaborate composition, followed by soup, with a large tureen of it set by the side of each liner, then salmon steaks, then a large variety of cold meats with salads and vegetables, then roast duckling—a whole bird to your own check—accompanied by pineapple and stewed peaches after which a plate piled high with ice-cream served with hot sauce, then fruit in unlimited quantity and of—ohly enough, but very appetizing the best quality, and to end with—a large piece of golden ginger, served with its syrup out of a big glass jug. And then it is all over you don't have to tip the waiter unless you very much want to.

Three miles away from this most decorous city is the mecca of the younger generation, a little seaside resort of Scheveningen, and all summer long a continual stream of cyclists ply to and fro on the splendid level road, which connects the town and city.

After all Scheveningen is unattractive. It is just a bare flat lily built town with a bare flat sandy beach swept by the biting winds of the north sea. Sand storms are frequent and glass screens are provided so that people may sit behind them to escape the biting particles of flying sand. Yet with all its faults it is a popular haven of refuge for the young folk, whose homes are in the staid and ultra respectable Hague.

Now that they are loading camp, with bootleg there's going to be more all-night suckers.
