Nearly 2,000 Rover Scouts assisted the London police in traffic control during the Coronation. Their principal job was the erection and manning of "crush barriers" on side streets.

When presented with an old brick veneer building for a club house, on condition that they remove it, the Thirty Boy Scouts of Tillsonburg, Ont., quickly negotiated a sale of the bricks, and at once began stripping them off.

Presenting the Brampton, Ont., Town Council the large Union Jack awarded even the town by the local chapter of the I. O. D. E. the Rover Mrs. M. Sharpe, paid a tribute to the loyal services of the Boy Scouts, who for some years have carried out the daily duty of hoisting and lowering the flag.

A widespread activity of Boy Scouts during preparations for the Coronation celebration was the painting of business firms and private homes that their Union Jacks were flying as signals of distress instead of rejoicing. In other words, flying upside down. Except in rare cases the boys were thanked for their mistake corrected. It was said that Nova Scotia counted one hundred incorrectly hung flags on one street.

Despatches still being received from Switzerland, the International Bureau of Boy Scouts Association, London, England, that the Boy Scouts of war torn Spain, born in the government controlled and insurgent controlled territory, continue to carry on the Scouting code of helpfulness to others "at all times." In his letter to the International Scout Commissioner, the Spanish Chief Scout, writing from Madrid, reports Scouts helping the wounded, serving in the hospitals, looking after lost and orphaned children, turning over their camping equipment for the use of refugees, and otherwise "doing everything in their power to put into practice their Scout Promise to do their duty to their country and help other people at all times."

Just another "news when a man bites a dog" story is it "news" when a Boy Scout is found guilty of a crime, declared Magistrate S. B. Amoss, of Chatham, Ont., addressing the Scouts of Blenheim. The magistrate stated that during his years on the bench he had never had a Scout before him charged with a misdemeanor.

A Northern Ontario country boy accidentally wounded by gunshot bled to death because no one knew how to apply a tourniquet. The average Scout knows all about such first aid, and one on the scene would have saved this life. Which indicates the desirability of having all lads enrolling in an organization that provides necessary training.—Peel Gazette.

Outstanding courage and cheerfulness under continued suffering, plus a high standard of high character, and uninterrupted progress in Scouting, has earned for two more Canadian boys in hospital Scouting's highest decoration, the Cornwell Award. The award went to King's Scout Alan Chase of the Robert Leigh Stephenson Troop of the Tweedsmuir branch of the Sick Children's Hospital, Toronto, in recognition of courageous cheerfulness over a long period despite the daily dressing of a painful wound, his uninterrupted progress in Scouting, and his endeavours to help other boys in his ward. King's Scout Buckwell Graham, of the 14th Ottawa (St. Andrew's) Troop, an active lad suddenly stricken with tuberculosis of the spine, has carried on cheerfully for over a year at the Royal Ottawa Sanatorium, for six months in a cast which permitted only the moving of his hands, and since then a frame on a fracture board. In both cases doctors and nurses have paid a high tribute to the boys' cheery patience and the value of their example to other patients in the wards. Both boys recently climaxed their progress in Scout Proficiency Badge work, notwithstanding their handicaps, by qualifying as Coronation King's Scouts.

A railway box car standing in front of the door would have assisted in shielding any one using the entrance. The thief or thieves apparently went straight to the safe. The combination lock was destroyed but the door remained locked. A night watchman noticed nothing suspicious when passing the building at four a. m.

$5,000 Gift Pledge Is Ordered Paid

NEW YORK, June 22—A promise made by I. Gainsburg, the lawyer, to contribute $5,000 to Beth-Israel Hospital, was declared binding and enforcible by the Appellate Division in a four-to-one decision yesterday. Previously Supreme Court Justice Philip J. McCook had ruled the pledge unenforcible because it was made without receipt of any consideration.

By the terms of the agreement Mr. Gainsburg was to pay the $5,000 in four equal annual installments "to aid and assist the Beth-Israel Hospital Association in its humanitarian work". The pledge was assigned by the hospital to the I. & I. Holding Corporation, which brought suit when the lawyer failed to pay.

"The subscriber who fills in a subscription blank and the charity promisee do not contemplate a bargain in the mercantile sense", Justice Albert Cohn said in the majority opinion. "Nevertheless, where the subscriber agrees to pay for a certain purpose and the promisee thereafter spends the money for that purpose both intend a binding pledge and the former should be compelled to live up to his promise. The acts of the hospital here in reliance upon the pledge made by the defendant as alleged in the complaint furnished the consideration for the promise to pay and created the promissory estoppel".

Justice McCook in his decision held that the court in determining whether or not there was consideration could look no further than the pledge itself, but the Appellate Division ruled otherwise.

"We conclude", Justice Cohn said, "that the court is not limited to the language of the subscription agreement for the purpose of ascertaining the consideration for the promise of defendant to pay".

Presiding Justice Martin, who wrote a dissenting opinion, agreed with Justice McCook in holding that the pledge was not legally binding.

He suggested, however, that the time might be ripe for the Legislature to declare that a consideration is not necessary to make a charitable pledge enforceable.

Many Visitors See Exhibit At Convent

A large number of visitors saw an exhibition of plain and fancy sewing, knitting, crochet work, drawing, by the pupils of St. Joseph's Convent which closed yesterday.

Visitors were shown about the large assembly room, where the samples were neatly arranged on frames and tables, by the Sisters of the Institution, who pointed out interesting facts in connection with the work.

Among other articles on exhibition was a knitted sweater and crochet cap made by two Sisters attending the school. All the work showed painstaking care and careful instruction on how to use that one important household adjunct, the needle.

Commencing with the work accomplished by the tots in Grade II, visitors are shown small handkerchiefs, work on dolly bags, neatly stitched and hemmed. In this display little souvenir books were shown, with small pictures fastened to the top of each and hand written verses below.

Grade III pupils showed a fine assortment of aprons, with more advanced style of stitchery, while the exhibit of Grades III and IV was an admirable showing of hemstitched pillowslips and towels.

More delicate work was shown in the Grade VI display where a nice assortment of tray cloths and serviettes were shown. Those articles were neatly embroidered with crocheted edges.

The Hoover aprons of pretty design caught the fancy of the ladies of the house. They were varied designs, with red, yellow and blue trimmings. Linen bags in pleasing colors were included in this display.

Grade VIII devoted their exhibit to knitting. Here the visitor was shown the very latest in shopping bags, cap and scarf sets, Turkish collars, sweaters, ankle socks, and children's bonnets. A nice exhibit of drawing, by pupils of this grade, was also shown.

"Sleepy Hollow" was the magnet which attracted the younger visitors and which was greatly admired by their elders. Here was shown cot covers and pillows, with embroidered figures of children, etc., cardboard Chesterfield sets with hand-made cardboard trees, and an occasional doll. This was the work of Grade IV children.

Pillow cases with embroidered initials and a neat exhibition of drawing was the contribution of Grade V while Grades VII and VIII showed a handsome display of initialed towels, embroidered buffet sets, with a beautiful crocheted bonnet. An exhibition of drawing was also made.

Grades V and VI showed an assortment of bridge table covers of pretty design, and hem stitched handkerchiefs. A display of drawings including maps, neatly executed, also were greatly admired.

Laundry bags of many colored designs and a nice assortment of drawings were displayed by Grades VI and VII.

The altar linen made by the pupils of Grade IX, always a feature of this display was this year equal to the work of other years. The fine stitching and embroidered emblems were most favorably commented on.

ALCOHOL IS ANARCHIST SPEAKER SAYS

Mrs. H. B. Newcombe Addresses Meeting In Prince Of Wales College Hall.

"The greatest anarchist in modern civilization is alcohol", Mrs. H. B. Newcombe of Halifax declared in an address in Prince of Wales College auditorium last night. The only difference between anarchy and democracy is the degree of responsibility of the average citizen to his citizenship, the speaker declared. "You can't say I'll obey all the laws except the temperance law and I consider it a foolish one and I'll not obey it. If you continually break one law you weaken all laws. Such an attitude introduces into the body politic a rotten spot which will eventually destroy all laws", Mrs. Newcombe declared.

Mrs. Newcombe, who is a temperance lecturer and social worker of international repute is honorary president of the W. C. T. U. of Nova Scotia. Last night's address was the first she will give in a series of meetings scheduled by the provincial government as part educational program along the line of temperance and law enforcement.

Premier Thane A. Campbell presided last night. Others who spoke briefly included Rev. Dr. Ellsworth of St. Dunstan's University, Rev. G. C. Webster, honorary president of the Temperance Federation and Hon. B. W. LePage, president of the executive council.

The only temperance, so far as alcohol beverages were concerned, was total abstinence Mrs Newcombe declared. Prominent European scientists had stated, the speaker said, that one of the four scourges of modern civilization was alcoholism. That did not mean that a person had to be a drunkard to be the victim of alcoholism. Such a person might never have been really drunk but was one who drank daily and continually. The speaker quoted prominent doctors and research workers in various parts of the world who had spoken against the use of alcohol as a beverage from the standpoint of health. "With such knowledge before us is it not the common sense the intelligent thing to put this thing out of our lives?" the speaker asked. "And remember before you can rid your province of this thing you must first put it out of your own life."

"The bootlegger is no worse than the woman who serves this stuff at her reception," Mrs. Newcombe declared.

She made a strong appeal for the citizens to give the government reasonable co-operation in the enforcement of all laws.

Premier Campbell in introducing the speakers outlined the scope of the temperance program on which the government has embarked. Those who attend the series of meetings it is hoped will form a nucleus of a movement that shall expand and leaven the whole Island. The object of the program was not to raise any contentious issue.

Rev. Dr. Ellsworth of St. Dunstan's University told the meeting that before people could be educated to a more perfect observance of law they must understand what law really is. It might be described as an ordinance of reason promulgated by the people of a community for the common good. Every civil law, if it is just, is based on the natural law which is very broad and which declares "avoid evil and do good." So in order to educate to better law observance people must be brought to see that laws are directly or indirectly from God.

Rev. G. C. Webster, honorary president of the Temperance Federation, brought greetings from that body and told the meeting that the members of the Federation were very happy and commended the government, as it would any government, to [illegible] temperance program for the province.

It was the duty of every true citizen of the province and country to see that, first of all, he himself kept the laws, which were passed for the good of humanity in a community as a whole, and secondly to see that the laws as far as was humanly possible were carried out to the last letter. "Because we are our brother's keeper in the last analysis and no man lives unto himself." Rev. Mr. Webster declared.

Hon. Mr. LePage thanked Mrs. Newcombe on behalf of those present and on behalf of the people of the province for her excellent address.

He expressed regret that there had not been a larger audience to hear the gifted speaker.

Completes Series Of Evangelistic Services

Mr. Geo. W. Titus, who occpupies the position of Secretary-Evangelist of the Churches of Christ in the Maritime Provinces has just concluded a very profitable series of evangelistic services in the South Lake and Greensboro Baptist Churches lasting two weeks. Notwithstanding the very poor condition of the roads during the first week of the meeting the interest and results were very apparent. Large crowds attended throughout and a large group came into these churches.

A very largely attended baptismal service was conducted by Rev. H.R. Bell last Sunday afternoon when a number were baptised. Rev. Mr. Bell serves both these congregations in a most efficient manner and now occupies the unique situation of serving his second ministry with these congregations, the last one in which he is now engaged covering already a period of eight years.

Mr. Titus will begin a series of meetings with the Montague Christian church which will begin tonight. Lawrence Wray is the pastor of the Montague Church having assumed the leadership of this important work during the latter part of last year.

RIPE GOOSEBERRY MARMALADE.

This is a particularly useful recipe, as it makes a delicious jam when made exactly as given below, but it can be turned into a very toothsome chutney to be served with cold meat, by making it with double the amount of spices.

Ingredients: Ripe gooseberries, sugar (white). To each quart of pulp allow 1-2 teaspoon each of ground cinnemon allspice and cloves. From 1-2 to 1 cup of cold water.

Method: Weigh the berries, then weigh out an equal quantity of sugar. Mash the berries and put them into an enamelled saucepan with the water, and cook until fruit is tender.

Put the pulp into a preserving pan with the sugar and spices, and boil until a little of the mixture sets when tetsted on a cold plate. Pot and cover in the usual way.
