

Here is a Canadian soldier of half a century ago.

Then, as now, his favorite smoke was T & B. T & B Tobacco has been the constant companion of generations of Canadian soldiers, because year after year its high quality has never varied.

Tobaccos come and go. T & B has remained a favorite for generations.

This is due to its outstanding quality.

Quality only comes when carefully selected leaf is used, when such leaf is properly cured and matured; when the right processes of manufacturing are employed.

T & B contains only genuine, imported Virginia leaf.

The men in the Tuckett organization responsible for T & B know that thousands of smokers rely on "good old T & B" to give them always a cool, a fragrant and a satisfying smoke.

So their watchword is—T & B standard must be maintained.

T & B CUT & PLUG SMOKING

T & B is the one tobacco put up in three forms. One—Good old-fashioned "plug" for the man who likes to cut his tobacco as he uses it. Two—"Cut Coarse" ready for your pipe. Three—"Cut Extra Fine" for the man who rolls his own cigarettes.

ing for supremacy, the semi-deposed monarch threw himself on the generosity and mercy of the famous bandit Robin Hood and happily secured protection. The United Farmers Guide has apparently read of the incident and is suggestion a similar protection for eastern farmers, whose interests are imperilled by the Grain Growers aggression. In answer to the objection that Maritime farmers must beware of exploitation by farmers of western Canada, it says, "HOW CAN SUCH EXPLOITATION BEST BE EXPLOITED?" "Surely the best way will be through the means of organization." "In union there is strength." "They are anxious to join with eastern farmers to work together where our interests are common and to arrive at an understanding where our interests are at variance." And it winds up with the proverb: "Beware of the Greeks bearing gifts."

Yes, most excellent advice. Beware of the Greeks or the Grain Growers combine bringing gifts, even when conveyed through the slippery columns of the Guide. It is contrary to nature for the tail to wag the dog and if our Maritime farmers were so simple as to link themselves up with the Cramer combine, they would discover when it is too late that in "union there is strength," but that all the strength would be concentrated in the western dog, AND OUR EASTERN FARMERS WOULD BE THE TAIL WHICH WOULD BE WAGGED AT THE PLEASURE OF THE CRAMER COMBINE. Common sense tells us that in all combines, the stronger forces control the weaker and our band of farmers in the big western organization would be powerless to protect their own interests. They would be only the cats-paws to draw the chequists from the fire to feed the Grain Growers of the west.

Disgraceful Scene

Kloor was the only man who prayed, or said he did. Those were lies.

"You must not talk now," Hinton begged. "Come on and get together and we can make things all right."

Farrell burst into a torrent of abuse and Hinton flatly denied that he had written any such letter. Farrell insisted that a summary of the letter, in the position of one of the correspondents, be read.

Hinton hung his head and fidgeted as the words sounded in the still room. At the conclusion of the reading Hinton made an effort to disclaim the letter.

"I may have exaggerated, I'll say I exaggerated," he said. "But in a general way it was true, and it will come out. You're all right Lieutenant, came along with me to the car."

Farrell pushed aside chairs standing between the two men, and made a threatening gesture, at which Hinton backed away, continuing his pleading for peace. With difficulty the older man was induced to return to his seat, and there ensued a discussion, in which Hinton tried to persuade Farrell not to talk, and Farrell insisted he had the same right to make his side public as did Hinton, whose version already was a matter of record.

"I showed you my letter with 'Do not publish' on it," Farrell cried, "but you didn't show me yours. I don't believe you wrote anything on it."

"It was a private letter," Hinton answered. "Of course I didn't show you a private letter to my wife." Asked directly if he had authorized publication of the letters, Hinton asserted that he had not and expressed regret at the whole incident.

"That doesn't set me straight," Farrell replied, and latched into such an outbreak of profanity, calling Hinton all the unprincipled names he could think of, that young Williamson, at the moment host to both navy officers, came in and begged Farrell to desist, explaining that his mother, who was in the kitchen preparing dinner for Farrell, was shocked at his language.

Farrell said he was sorry and abandoned the profanity for a moment, but soon became enraged again when Hinton, weakly and stumbling, pleaded and explained. Farrell rushed from the sitting room, announcing that he was through with the argument and intended to have some tea.

Things would have ended there without the worst happening, but, unfortunately, Hinton followed to the dining room. The correspondents, thoroughly aroused to the sorrow that all Americans must feel that the whole affair should end so disgracefully, followed, hoping to induce Hinton to leave Farrell to cool off and come away.

"Now, Farrell, be quiet," Hinton begged. "These men," pointing to the newspapermen, "are taking down every word you say and it will all be printed."

The newspapermen protested that they were frankly and openly inviting Farrell to present his version of events and argued that they had a right to, since Hinton's account was already public property. Apparently hoping to head off an interview, Hinton announced to his brother officer that he had three messages from Secretary Daniels, which he wanted him to read, "Get out of here, you damned rat, and let me alone" cried Farrell, shaking with rage and obviously striving to control himself.

Hinton made some answer which was lost to the listeners and Farrell, bursting through the group of men in the crowded little room, and putting his full weight behind the blow, planted his right fist on Hinton's jaw. Hinton staggered, closed his eyes and fell over on to a serving table by which he stood. Farrell followed his blow with a vicious left hook which glanced off Hinton's head. Hinton stood bent over the table for the second time, completely occupied by the attack. Those who looked on stood motionless, too startled and sorry to intervene. The newspapermen thrust themselves into the breach. Some of them grabbed Farrell and held him, while others lit-

In Memoriam

MR. JOHN WHELAN

The death of Mr. John Whelan of Covehead, which occurred on December 24th is deeply regretted by a wide circle of friends throughout the Province. Although the deceased had been in failing health for almost a year, no one suspected that his condition was so serious and his sudden death on Xmas Eve was a severe shock to his immediate family.

The late Mr. Whelan was of a quiet, unassuming personality, universally respected by all classes, and was ever ready to assist in every enterprise that endeavored to the betterment of the community.

During his illness he was frequently visited by his kind pastor, Rev. J. B. McIntyre, and died fortified with the comforts of his Holy Religion.

His funeral took place on Sunday afternoon and despite the inclemency of the weather was well attended. His remains were laid to rest in the quietude of St. Eusebius Cemetery, there to await the dawn of a Holy Day.

There are left to mourn his loss, and cherish his memory his widow, two sons and four daughters. One son, John, pre-deceased him having given his life for his country in Sept. 1918. The surviving members are: Thomas of the P. O. staff, Charlottetown; Ida, teacher at Sturtevant; Loretta, teacher at Covehead; Emma attending P. W. College and Adele and Frank at home. To all of whom the sincere sympathy of many friends is extended.

VERNON RIVER SCHOOL

The semi-annual examination of Vernon River School was held on Thursday, December 22nd. There was a large number of rate payers and visitors present. Rev. P. D. McGuigan presided.

The school room was most beautifully decorated. The children were carefully examined in all subjects by Rev. Father McGuigan, assisted by Miss Mary E. McDonald, former principal of Vernon River School, Mrs. W. Lea, and Miss Tattala Collins. They showed by their ready answers and keen attention that they had been very carefully instructed during the past five months by their capable and efficient teacher, Miss Laura Brothers.

A very pleasant program was rendered which was heartily enjoyed by all present. The children and visitors were treated to candy and apples, after which the teacher was presented with a beautiful Xmas gift. Miss Brothers, though taken by surprise in a few well chosen words, was treated to a most complimentary speech by Mr. Alfred Carver, Mrs. W. Lea, Mrs. H. Wood and Miss Mary E. McDonald. All expressed themselves as being well pleased with the work done.

A very pleasant afternoon was brought to a close by the singing of "The National Anthem."

Following is the programme: Words of Welcome, Charles McDonald; Recitation, Hazel Carver; Recitation, Gordon Carr; Song, Mary O'neffe and Hazel Carver; Recitation, Gladys Harper; Recitation, George Lea; Dialogue, Jennie Lea and Willard Wood; Recitation, Pansy Wood; Xmas Wishes, Harold Wood.

Hinton from his half prone position over the table.

Then in stern and uncompromising words the newspapermen told both officers the scene was so unfortunate and disgraceful that it must not be prolonged. Turning to Hinton, they demanded that he leave the room with them for the sake of peace.

Hinton consented and walked up the hillside to the superintendent's car without discussing what had happened, beyond asking that the telegraphed summary of his letter be lent to him. This was done. An ugly bruise was just beginning to show at the angle of Hinton's jaw, but otherwise he was uninjured and the skin on his face was not broken.

Arthur Stevens, who had been waiting several days to invite the airment to accept the hospitality of Cochrane, and young Williamson stayed behind. They pleaded with Farrell to put the best face possible upon the affair, and, no matter how he might feel toward either of his companions, to go to the car, with them and present at least an appearance of amity.

MONTAGUE PROGRESSING.

The Community Welfare League of Montague an organization formed for the purpose of furthering all interests that will tend for the improvement and betterment of the Town in general, have just recently purchased from Mrs. Catherine Anear, her valuable property at Montague consisting of some 10 or 12 acres. This land will be available for school purposes, Town Hall, Skating Rink, Park, Play Grounds, Chausaugua and other such purposes as occasion may require from time to time. They have also purchased from Dan. McKinnon his lot on Main Street, which will make a very fine uptown entrance to their plot of land. It is the intention of the League to hold each month some form of entertainment to raise funds to pay for the properties purchased, and on New Year's Eve the first Concert and Fire Social was held with very gratifying results to the League, when the sum of two hundred dollars was realized. Women's Institute intend holding on January 21st a community Fair Show, the proceeds of which will go to the League, and we trust that they will meet with every success as it is no doubt a move in the right direction for the citizens of the fair town of Montague. What about our Brass Band? Some of the boys might get organized now during the long winter nights, and some Band Concerts in our Park would be the result next summer. Montague is soon to have an up-to-date Movie Hall operated by Mr. B. H. Yeo, who now has a
