—of the—
Merchant's Bank of P. E. Island

The Annual general meeting of the share holders of the Merchant's Bank of P. E. Island, will be held at its Banking House, Great George Street, Charlottetown, on Tuesday the 14th day of January next, A. D., 1902 at the hour of 11 o'clock a. m.

Proxies must be left with the cashier at least one day previous to the meeting.

That Whoop!
Have you had it in your house? It's cough and cough and cough, and then that terrible whoop! Don't upset the stomach more by giving nauseous medicine. Just let the child breathe in the soothing vapor of Vapo-Cresolene. It goes right to the spot that's diseased. Relief is immediate, and in a very few days the cure is complete. You can't say the same of any other treatment. For asthma, catarrh, and colds it's equally good.

Vapo-Cresolene is sold by druggists everywhere. The Vaporizer and Lamp, which should last a lifetime, and a bottle of Cresolene complete, $1.50; extra supplies of Cresolene 25 cents and 50 cents. Illustrated booklet containing physicians' testimonials free upon request. VAPOR-CRESOLENE CO., 126 Fulton St., New York, N. Y.

A KLONDIKE CHRISTMAS

BY RODNEY LINHOLM

[Copyright, 1901, by American Press Association.]
"Pay dirt, and five hundred to the pan, or I'm a liar!"
"Oh, Bob, do you mean it? Seems too good to be true!"
"Sure, Tom. Guess I know 'color' when I see it. There's fifty thousand to the box length when we come to wash out in the spring. reckon that up, and see if you can make us out worth less than half a million apiece."
"Bob Burley, you're off your base. I can't believe it."
"Believe it or not, Tom Herrick; but even you can tell what a nugget looks like after it's washed out, eh?"

Burley scooped out a handful of clean, yellow nuggets varying in size from a cucumber seed to a hazelnut from the pan in which he was testing the dirt and held them out for his claim to examine. These two had been two months on the El Dorado branch of the Klondike, having come up here from Circle City on receipt of first news of a "strike" in this region. They had built themselves a hut, staked out a claim of 500 feet each along the creek and then set to work "burning out" the earth.

Herrick and Burley had burned and drifted, drifted and burned, until at last they had an open shaft sunk quite fifteen feet, and, as Bob had declared, they had at last struck "pay dirt," and had struck it rich.

Tom took the handful of glistening nuggets from his partner, but said not a word. There was no doubt of the fact—at last gold had been found.
"Well, old man," said Bob, "what's the matter with you? Don't you know what those nuggets mean to us?"
"Don't I just! Bob, if the claim turns out half as good's you think we can both go home, can't we, at the end of the summer?"
"Right you are, Tommy, every time. If you hear me say it, it's so! But there's one thing I feel compelled to say and which you won't be so happy to hear, and that is we haven't got five pounds of flour nor an ounce of meat in the shack. And the deuce of it is this is the day before Christmas, and tomorrow we ought to celebrate."

"GOODEY, TOM, AND GOOD LUCK!"

"To be sure. Christmas doesn't seem like Christmas without turkey."
"It doesn't, hey? Well, what did we have last Christmas a year ago?"
"Bear meat and blubber, and mighty glad to get it too. But, all the same, it didn't seem like Christmas, and I'll stick to it!"

"No, Tommy, it didn't. A Christmas dinner always should have a bird in it of some sort."

"Well, Bob, you're a better miner than I am, but you can't beat me at hunting. The thermometer is down to twenty-six below, and the wind is howling great guns, but I don't see any other way than to take my gun and try for a rabbit or a partridge."

"That's the talk, Tommy. One of us has got to attend to the fire, and you are the better hunter of the two. I don't envy you the contract, though. It may be down to fifty below before night, so get back before the sun goes down, won't you?"

"I'll try," said Tom as he slid out into the cold, clad from throat to toe in furs. He carried a double barrel shotgun in the hollow of his arm and a revolver in the belt, the latter in case he should encounter anything larger than the shotgun could bring down. "I'm going up to the mountain for ptarmigan," were his last words to Bob, "so have a good pastry ready for ptarmigan pie some time early in the evening. 'Goodby.'"
"Goodby, Tom, and good luck," chattered Bob as he closed the door.

Tom swung sturdily along through the fine, dry snow, which came about up to his knees, and derived exhilaration from the keen air and the prospect of sport. He crossed the creek, climbed the farther bank and came upon the level plateau, where the wind had wider sweep and the cold was more intense than in the sheltered ravine.

It was a long stretch, and no object intervened to break the monotony, so he plodded ahead for over an hour and arrived at the summer snow line, where the ptarmigans dwell. The graceful ptarmigan, though brown of plumage in the summer when the snow is melted and the scant vegetation can protect it, was now pure white and hard to distinguish from the snow itself, into which it dove and from which it darted out like flying fish on the surface of the sea.

He was a good hunter, having carried a gun ever since he had been able to lift one, first practicing at the woodchucks and squirrels on the old farm, then extending his range to the moose and deer down in the woods of Maine. So when, all of a sudden, a white, spiritlike thing broke out of the snow and made off straight to windward he threw up his gun and toppled it over instantly.

Several got away from Tom's shots, their movements were so erratic, and there was little to distinguish between snow white bird and bird white snow. At last, however, marking down where a flock entered a snowdrift, he made for it and stirred them up with his feet, and when they sailed out dropped three of them on the wing. In this manner, by pursuing the birds closely and keeping them on the move, he secured fourteen and then thought it about time to start for camp. But in all his windings and doublings while in pursuit of the ptarmigans he had so confused himself that he couldn't find the trail back to the creek. The sun had long since set, and but a faint twilight remained, while the cold air was getting colder, though the cutting wind had died away.

Hours later, tired to exhaustion, tempted to yield to the intolerable drowsiness that was stealing over him, and to succumb to which he knew meant only death, he was staggering toward the bank of the creek. But it was far away, and he was not sure of his bearings, when he heard the report of a fire-arm. He answered by discharging his gun, and not long after Bob hove in sight, dragging after him a sled thickly piled with skins.

"Zounds, old man, but I got scared for you! Here, tumble on to this sled. Bundle up in the furs and let me drag you back home. Not a word. Do as I tell you. I'm boss of this expedition, my boy. Another hour and you'd have lain down to sleep, now, wouldn't you?"

"I'm afraid I should," drowsily muttered Tom. "I'm just about done up, Bob. But, say, I got the birds, didn't I?"

"Yes, you did; but if you'd have gone to sleep they'd have come rather nigh."

But Tom heard nothing. He slept until the cabin was reached and long after he had been bundled into his bunk. When he awoke next morning, refreshed and recuperated, the first thing he saw through the curling smoke of the pit fire was his industrious partner packing the fourteen ptarmigans into a pie. He had a dish as big as a milk pan and twice as deep well lined with dough and garnished with all the ingredients. As he dexterously trimmed the top crust and set the dish down for one last admiring look he saw that the sleeper had awakened.

"Hello, Tom, how do you feel? Look at that! How's that for a pie, eh? Big enough to last a week, ain't it? Where'd I get the dish? Oh, Sam Reynolds and his brother Dave were here after you left, and they're coming over to the food. By the way, Tom, wish you merry Christmas! Same to me? Oh, that's all right! I'm a millionaire, you know, and, as for that matter, so are you! Pretty business for a millionaire, hey—picking ptarmigans and making a scuttler of himself generally? Let never mind. There's a good time a-coming by and by. Next year this time we'll have our horses and servants, sure's you're born, Tommy, my son."

Thus Bob rambled on, the while setting the great pie carefully in a corner of the pit, which had been heated red-hot with stones taken from the creek bed. And there it slumbered and sizzled and in the end turned a delicious brown just as Sam and Dave came over from their cabin, farther up the creek.

The pie was served from a stump which stuck up in the center of the hut. It was a pronounced success, and Dave declared that it "beat turkey all hollow," in which opinion he was supported by his brother Sam. Bob was heard to declare—in fact, Tom said the same thing—that even if he went out with twice a hundred thousand ounces next season he would contrive to locate in a section where he could have ptarmigan pie for his Christmas dinner.
