CONSECRATION OF BUSINESS AND INDUSTRY

"Consecration of Business and Industry" was the subject of the sermon delivered at the fourth week of prayer by Rev. Dr. E. H. Ramsay. Rev. R. M. Legate was chairman. Other clergymen taking part in the service were Rev. C. N. Brown, Rev. H. D. Raymond, Rev. Dr. A. C. Vincent.

Dr. Ramsay gave the address of the evening basing his remarks on the words "Ye Cannot serve God and Mammon." He started out by asking the question, "Can our present system of business and industry be consecrated?" He went on to say that the Jerusalem conference after much deliberation said, "that the gravest menace that Christ and his Church has to face is secularism not in the East but in the West. The Christian Church must determine that if this system stands in the way of Christ, we will battle against it with all our might."

If we withdraw from this order the speaker went on to say we are running away from duty. On the other hand if we indulge we are living contrary to the principles of Jesus. What can we do about it? The speaker suggested three things: First we ought to pray about it. Second, we ought to think deeply on this problem. Third, we are to scrutinize again our own attitude toward it.

There are two attitudes towards business: Selfishness and service. The Christian Church goes one better and insists on sacrifice. The speaker in closing threw out a challenge to all to live the sacrificial life.

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—(A.P.)—The German Lloyd liner Bremen arrived two days late today after having battled her way through two hurricanes and raging seas that at times towered above her 80-foot bridge

Mr. Hearn expressed his pleasure at seeing all gathered around the board, and extended hearty greetings to all. He conveyed regrets of commanding officer at not being present.

Lieut. J. J. Connolly expressed his pleasure at seeing the boys present. He went into the history of the R. C. N. V. R. in the city. When the work began the boys had a small room in the armouries, twenty-five fellows met twice a week. Athletics were gradually adopted. The R. C. N. V. R. had an excellent basketball team during the last few years.

So successful was the half company in hockey that at Halifax the team had never suffered defeat. The R. C. N. V. R. had the use of the Holy Name Club and Y. M. C. A. gyms. They also could have a miniature shooting team when the boys got together. In a short time the outfit would be taken over to Halifax for the annual training. Each fellow who would go over would have a job to do. 35 men, 30 percent of the ship crews going south would be R. C. N. V. R. Every member of the R. C. N. V. R. who qualified could take the West Indies trip.

Mr. J. Hearn proposed the toast to the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserves. He outlined the history of the organization, which was an off-spring of an Old Country organization started with the idea of helping out the Royal Navy. The Reserves had always acquitted themselves with great distinction. During the late war the reserves were in every operation. In 1923 Naval Reserves Corps were organized in Canada. The organization was formed with a view of having men to call upon in case of emergency. During the late War, there were in Canada a group known as Naval Reserves composed of seagoing men. The Reserves were on a par with permanent ratings. They did their work voluntarily, while the permanent men training for a living.

The toast was responded to by Mr. Wilfred McIsaac, who remarked that only a few of the originals of the corps were still active. He gave those present some advice as to what to do when the members went to Halifax to train. The local half-company was one of the best that went to Halifax.

A toast was pledged to the member present in longest standing. Mr. Wilfred Cullen responded to the toast giving some reminiscences. He had been in the outfit for eleven years. Mr. Hearn proposed a toast to the absent ones. Mr. Hearn, addressing the three ratings, who were going on the five months' cruise, exhorted them to uphold the reputation of the Charlottetown half-company. The speaker remarked that his contract was up in May, but hoped that he would be with them many years.

A toast to Mr. Hearn was proposed by George McMahon. Speeches were made by A. Rush, C. Coyle, A.B. Reg Dillon, Carl Prowse, George Ayers, Earl Goss, Borden Cox, Len Connolly. Mr. Hearn remarked that the R. C. N. V. R.'s had never approached a man for the sake of getting his services for sport.

The news of Coolidge's death stunned this city and shocked the nation. When he turned the Presidency over to Herbert Hoover in March, 1929, it was generally supposed that the former President went into private life, healthier than any of his recent predecessors.

Dr. Brown, who had attended Mr. Coolidge many times and a month ago examined him and found him physically fit, said the end had been caused by heart disease.

Born in a little house which is now the general store at Plymouth, Vt., Coolidge had made this city his home since his graduation from Amherst College in 1895.

His rise from the political obscurity of a member of the common council at the turn of the century to the most exalted office within the gift of a great nation made little or no difference to his private life.

Throughout his long service as a Massachusetts representative and Senator, his subsequent election to the lieutenant-governorship and finally to the chief magistracy of the commonwealth, he continued to live in one half of an unpretentious duplex house on an ordinary street.

It was, in fact, only after he had quit the Presidency that he permitted himself to depart from the Spartan frugality of life that had characterized him for more than half a century.

He bought "The Beeches," a spacious homestead overlooking the Connecticut Valley and fitted it out in keeping with the stately park in which it stood.

Retirement from the Presidency brought few changes to Mr. Coolidge's mode of life. While, with the exception of two addresses delivered on behalf of Mr. Hoover in the recent campaign he eschewed direct politics, he did write numerous magazine articles on political or semi-political subjects.

Funeral Saturday

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Jan. 5.—The funeral of Calvin Coolidge will be held Saturday morning at 10.30 o'clock in St. Edward's Congregational Church, of which he was a member. The body will be taken by automobile coterie to Plymouth, Vt., where the committal service will be held at 3 o'clock. Further details of the funeral arrangements have not yet been completed.

Prosperous Administration

The administration of Calvin Coolidge was marked by an era of prosperity at home and of peaceful relations with foreign nations.

Coming to the office of Chief Magistrate from the vice-presidency in August, 1923, through the sudden death of President Harding, Mr. Coolidge was confronted with problems of rehabilitation after the World war, and devoted his energies to a program of economy at home and of mutual helpfulness abroad.

Such success attended his first efforts that in 1924 he was elected in his own right by a popular plurality of over 7,000,000. Accepting the mandate of an endorsement of his policies, in his inaugural address of 1925 he again pledged himself to a program of economy and peace, and addressed himself to carrying out the policies he had announced in his first message to Congress in December, 1923.

As a part of his fiscal program he completed the funding of the foreign war-time debts, running into billions of dollars, and when Congress adjourned in the summer of 1925 all but one settlement had been ratified—that with France, which waited upon ratification by the French parliament.

Two tax reductions accompanied the decrease in government expen-diures, relieving millions from the necessity of paying taxes to the federal government. The suggestions of Mr. Coolidge in this respect were accepted practically without change by Congress in 1925, although his proposals for tax reductions in 1924 were considerably revised through a coalition in Congress of Democrats and Insurgent Republicans.

Other legislative policies Mr. Coolidge saw adopted along his own lines until by the summer of 1926 few of major importance remained unacted. Plans for reorganizing the Shipping Board, for legislation bearing upon railroad consolidations and for other matters of secondary importance were among the proposals that failed.

Signs of political unrest in the middle west were seen early in 1926 when a number of administration senators went down to defeat in the primaries. These defeats were attributed variously to the administration's attitude on farm relief, the world court, and other issues. But the President took the position that what he and his supporters had done should speak for itself, and early in the primary campaign he adopted a hands-off policy with regard to fights within the party.

Even some of his closest friends and most consistent supporters had to go before the electorate and wage their own battles for re-nomination, without a word of support from the White House.

This policy was of a piece with the silent, calm demeanor of the man himself. He was given to quietude in his work as well as in his hours of relaxation, in his pleasures as well as in his sorrows. Worry appeared foreign to his nature. In spite of two great personal sorrows within the space of a few months, added to the tremendous load of his responsibility, he carried the Presidency confidently and without apparent mental or physical strain.

The first of the two bereavements whose mark he carried beneath the surface of his outward calm fell upon him almost without warning in the summer of 1924. His youngest son, Calvin, Jr., a schoolboy still in his teens, was taken suddenly ill and passed away a few days later. Then early in 1926 the President's father, Col. John C. Coolidge, breathed his last at his home in Vermont while his son was spending to his bedside. With stoic fortitude the chief executive turned back from the grave-side to his desk, and smothered his sorrow beneath a load of work.

Mr. Coolidge was the 30th President of the United States. He was born at Plymouth, Vermont, 1872, of early New England ancestry. He was graduated from the Amherst College in 1895, entered the law office of Hammon & Field, Northampton, Mass., and was admitted to the bar in 1897. He served as City Councilman in 1899, as City Solicitor 1900-01 and as Clerk of Court 1904.

He was elected to the Massachusetts House of Representatives 1907-08, was Mayor of Northampton 1910-11, a member of the State Senate 1912-15, President of the Senate 1914-15, Lieutenant-Governor 1916-18. He was elected Governor of Massachusetts in 1919. He attracted nationwide notice by his firm stand for law and order during the Boston police strike and was overwhelmingly re-elected for 1920.

THREE FORMER AMHERST PUCK MEN SUSPENDED

(Canadian Press)

NEW GLASGOW, N. S., Jan. 5.—Official notification that Foster Dickson, Art Dalton and Paddy Cormier of the Saint John club in the Southern New Brunswick Hockey League have been suspended, was given today by H. F. Tennant, Amherst, Secretary of the Maritime Amateur Hockey Association, according to word reaching here tonight.

Failure to secure necessary transfers was given as the reason. Games so far played in the Southern New Brunswick schedule would have to be played over again, according to the ruling.

Foster Dickson formerly played centre with the New Glasgow Tigers. He and Art Dalton had worked out with the A. P. C. League team this year, but Cormier, who with Dalton played in Amherst last season, had not donned the blades with a Nova Scotia squad this season.

According to the rules, a player is released from the team he last played with, at the end of December. Establishment of residence before May 15 is a further requirement to a transfer.

Must Wrestle Or Get Out

CHICAGO, Jan. 5.—(Associated Press)—No more roughhouse or burlesque wrestling goes in Chicago. No longer will the big, hairy chested, mammoths of the mat be allowed to toss each other out of the ring, exchange bites, slug each other and indulge in other monkey business to the huge delight of the spectators.

In the future wrestlers must wrestle, or be fined, suspended or both.

he was nominated for Vice President with Warren G. Harding, of Ohio.

On Oct. 4th, 1905, Mr. Coolidge married Grace A. Goodhue of Burlington, Vermont. They had two sons, John and Calvin Jr. The latter's death which occurred after a brief illness during the summer of 1924, was the first of two bereavements to Mr. Coolidge's family during his occupancy of the White House. Early in 1926 his father died at his Vermont home.
