bus attended Mass and received communion at the Holy Redeemer Church. Rev. A. MacDonald, C. S. R., the Council Chaplain, preached a special sermon for the occasion.

Following is the text of the address:

To His Grace Archbishop J. A. O'Sullivan The Charlottetown Council of the Knights of Columbus takes this occasion of your departure from this diocese to express its heartfelt appreciation for the sympathy and understanding which you have always shown in our mutual relationships.

You have honoured us by your presence at many of our celebrations. Particularly in the field of Catholic education has your encouraging support, in all of our worthwhile endeavors we have benefited greatly from your sober and sincere advice.

We shall miss you in the years to come. We shall remember you as a sound leader and a sincere friend. We have profited greatly from our association with you in our honoured Order and we feel certain that you will continue your interest in our Order wherever you may go. Our hope and prayer is that our Order will be worthy of this honour and trust; to thank you for all the kindness with which you have treated me in spite of my many shortcomings.

Progress Growing Quicker "It is a year almost to the day since I spoke to you on a broadcast here at home. This has been a time of disappointments as well as successes but there is no doubt that good news has far outweighed the bad and that the progress of the United Nations towards their goal has been solid, continual and growing quicker."

Referring to the Italian campaign which the rescuing powers making it being accomplished stage by stage, and we can say not only with hope but with reason that we shall reach the end of our journey in good order, that the tragedy which threatened the whole world and might have put out all its lights and left children and descendants in darkness and bondage perhaps for centuries—that tragedy will not come to pass.

Referring to the Italian campaign, the prime minister said progress had not been as rapid or as clear as had been hoped. "I do not doubt that we shall meet our whole world and might have put out all its lights and left children and descendants in darkness and bondage perhaps for centuries—that tragedy will not come to pass."

news has far outweighed the bad and that the progress of the United Nations towards their goal has been solid, continual and growing quicker."

He frankly acknowledged that both in the conquest of Sicily and in the fighting on the mainland of Italy, progress had not been as rapid as had been hoped.

He said much remains to be done in the Balkans and in the Eastern Mediterranean. "I hope you will not imagine that I am going to try to make some extraordinary pronouncement tonight and tell you exactly how all the problems of mankind in war and peace are going to be solved," he began.

"I only thought you would like me to have a short talk with you about how we are getting on and to thank you for all the kindness with which you have treated me in spite of my many shortcomings."

He declared the man rash who tries to prophesy when or how under what conditions victory will come but come it will. That least is sure, he said.

It is also certain that unity alone will not win the war. It is also certain that unity alone will not win the war. It is also certain that unity alone will not win the war. It is also certain that unity alone will not win the war.
