Dog as Scouts Aid Ethiopians

ADDIS ABABA, Dec. 23.—(CP Hava)—Whether or not a dog is man's best friend in other countries, he's that kind and more in Ethiopia.

No matter how many he may be a hound that can hear an Italian bombing plane before it is visible is an invaluable ally. Ethiopia has thousands of such talented mongrels in every village in the land.

Ethiopians haven't always appreciated their helpful hounds. In ha' wild bands that prowled through villages and even invaded Addis Ababa itself, in search of food, they have hitherto been the country's one and only scavenger service, a necessary nuisance. Since the coming of war, however, they have learned to function as impromptu scouting patrols and signal corps as well.

A story about the prowling dogs of Ogaden, brought here by a doctor from Dargahur, shows how quickly the Ethiopian dogs have learned to protect themselves against the enemy attacks. The Italian aviators first bombarded Dargahur a month ago, he said, and 50 dogs were killed, almost the only victims of the raid.

The second time surviving dogs heard motors in the sky, they didn't wait for bombs but sought cover until the raid was over. The inhabitants of Dargahur took the hint, and also had themselves. Nowadays throughout the war zone the Ethiopians say the behavior of the wild dogs tells them when a raid is imminent.

The pastor, Rev. D. L. Griffiths, presided and led in the devotions. Mrs. Mabel MacEachern presided at the organ. A solo entitled "That Wondrous Night" was rendered by Master Kenneth Griffiths and the contribution of a solo entitled "That Christmas Carol" was given by Mr. Dave Griffiths. Some members of the choir and of the Y. P. S. who had prepared for taking part were unfortunately unable to attend owing to weather conditions and long distances. The pastor, during the proceedings, gave

SAYS MUSSOLINI "BLUFFER"

(C.P. By Guardian's Special Wire) HALIFAX, Dec. 22—"The fear of Hoare that Mussolini would bomb his fleet was idiotic," Dr. Emil Ludwig, noted biographer and man of letters, declared in an interview here when he passed through Halifax on board the liner Montrose, bound for Locarno, Switzerland, after a lecture tour of the United States and Canada.

Referring to the recent Hoare-Laval plan to secure peace between Italy and Ethiopia, which caused Sir Samuel Hoare to resign from the British Cabinet as Foreign Secretary, Dr. Ludwig thought "the plan was not entirely wrong." He was convinced "Sir Samuel does not know Mussolini."

In his opinion, Mussolini was a "bluffer" and Hitler, with a "smaller" man formed a greater menace to European peace. Mussolini chose Ethiopia for his "playground" but Hitler would want Europe as a site for his war games.

"War may come as a blow of despair on the part of Mussolini," he conceded and he laid the blame for such an eventuality at the feet of the League of Nations. He believed full sanctions, not "half measures," should have been applied by the League at the start.

"If that had been done, all possibility of war would have been ended," he said.

"I am a League of Nations man and I have just finished travelling all over the United States telling them they should join. But in this case, the League of Nations is wrong. 'If you make sanctions they must be military sanctions. Economic sanctions are not enough. There must be military sanctions. There must be the whole or nothing.'"

Missouri Shows One Real Santa

MARSHALL, Mo., Dec. 23.—(AP)—Santa Claus lives here on the edge of town and "down the road a piece" where it gets muddy. He lives in a frail, blue, three-room house full of children, laughter and prayer.

"Yes, sir, I'm Santa Claus," he acknowledged, seating himself on the colored squares of the bed quilt in the lamp-lit front room. "I'm a plumber and a pastor."

"I could never find out way my father named me Santa—'but it's a good name, even if it is a lot of trouble.' However Santa had no desire to hand down his name to any of his nine children, seven of whom are living.

"I've got a house full," he said, "but it's home. They're all good kids, and if we don't have toys and turkey we get lots of mail and fun out of Christmas."

"This Santa hasn't any ermine-trimmed knicker suit of red velvet in his wardrobe. He has blue eyes, but his crown and duddy cheeks sprout no billowing snowy locks. He has blue eyes, but his crown and ruddy cheeks sprout no billowing snowy locks. He doesn't scale no houseposts or plunk down chimneys, but he might tackle a flue on order. He's a plumber with a big heart, a big family, a small house and a small income.

From a corner he dragged out a cardboard carton holding several hundred envelopes. "I couldn't answer these last year. I didn't have time, and then it takes a night of stamps. I was receiving about 90 letters a day and answering about 30."

Mostly they are children's letters. A young woman in Holland sent an elaborate greeting with some ink drawings: A little girl in Mexico wanted a token. Some times Santa gets a tie or handkerchief, but never any money.

"If the stamps hold out, I'm going to answer all of them this year," Santa said. He sends out cheques on "the Bank of Happiness" which he signs with the abandon of a rajah.

"Got to live up to my name, I guess. Santa Claus' initials are the same as Spirit of Christ—the spirit of giving, of cheer."

It's hard for Santa to cash a real cheque where he isn't known. And one Christmas an express agent refused to deliver a box of fruit which a California relative had addressed to Santa Claus.

What about Christmas in Santa's home? "The kids will get some candy, and we'll have church service and can sing hymns," he said. An old agan stood across the room from the coal stove.

Mrs. Claus said supper was getting cold.

A Christmas message? Sure. "Tell 'em Merry Christmas and God bless 'em," Santa smiled. Then he went into the kitchen to eat his beans and potatoes.

"Rainbow Over Broadway" At Capitol

One of the gayest of the screen's long line of musical romances is "Rainbow Over Broadway," which was presented at the Capitol Theatre yesterday.

Grace Hayes, a newcomer to Broadway, stands out as a new bright star of the Hollywood firmament in a role that is made-to-order for her. Mae West had better look to her laurels, for this Hayes miss, who is not unlike Mae is something to write home about. Miss Hayes will be heard from in a big way soon again.

"Rainbow Over Broadway" is all about Judy and Bob Chibbins, her brother, who find that writing popular songs is not all it's cracked up to be. Their job, selling and demonstrating particularly tough, for step-mama Trixie Valleron is given to untold extravagances. Opportunity seems to come their way, however, when Don Hayes, a nationally famous orchestra leader and an old friend, stops in to see them on his way back to New York from California. Mama, though, cuts in on the party when the youngsters are trying to interest Don in their songs, and, though her intrusion adds much to the gaiety of the picture, it seems to doom the kids to a five-and-ten-cent life in Kansas City.

Don, however, gets a big idea Trixie is it. He brings the family to New York where Trixie's burlesque technique wows New York's smartest night club and puts the entire family in the money.

PEOPLE MAY LIVE IN GLASS HOUSES

(Canadian Press) BOSTON, Dec. 22—It looks today as if the long-talked-of glass houses may become a reality in the not distant future. Glass is invading new fields and is developing new forms for practical use. A certain firm has, after months of research, perfected a process of drawing glass into fibre capable of wide application.

This company claims that it is now practical to think of living in homes and working in buildings built of glass-blocks, insulated against heat and cold by glass "wool." The blocks, so it is said, permit up to 86 per cent of outside light to enter without glare.
