Significant Word

ALtered (Exchange) Lord Bessborough concluded the Speech from the Throne with the words: "May God give you strength to support, by your unremitting labors, this great movement towards happier days."

A signed despatch from the Toronto Star's chief Ottawa correspondent changes the sentence to read: "May God give you strength to support, by your unremitting labors, this great Government towards happier days."

The word "movement" is suppressed to make way for the word "Government," and the correspondent proceeds to build upon this incorrect version of a charge that the Government dragged the Governor-General into making an appeal to Parliament on its behalf.

It is common knowledge that the Speech from the Throne is written by the Prime Minister, and that the contents of the Speech merely represent the policy of His Excellency's constitutional advisers.

Fishing Craft Construction Great Boon

HALIFAX, Jan. 21 (C.P.) - Stimulus given to the shipbuilding industry in Newfoundland by the construction government had provided work for hundreds of lumbermen and shipwrights this winter, declared Sir John Bennett, former colonial secretary and an ex-Premier of the Old Colony on his arrival at Halifax. He was en route to Nassau, B.W.I.

The government program of fishing craft construction was a boon to unemployed, Sir John said. Newfoundland had enjoyed an exceptionally good Christmas trade and retail and wholesale business was holding up well through January, he declared.

THE QUEEN WRITES TO ONTARIO SCHOOLGIRL RICHARDSON'S LANDING, Ont. Jan. 21 - From Her Majesty the Queen a letter came yesterday to Eva Pickering, 15-year-old continuation schoolgirl, "expressing sincere thanks for the kind expression conveyed in her communications of the seventh of December."

Mr. Tilley will continue his argument tomorrow morning. He opened the presentation of his contentions at the conclusion of arguments by Peter White, Government counsel, that a proven case of wrong-doing had been made out against the two defendants.

or were not justified, occupied the commission's attention. Eaton's counsel, Roy L. Hellock of Toronto, put numerous questions to the stand. All denied knowledge of any pressure brought to bear on girls to speed up production. They knew nothing of girls crying and becoming hysterical at their machines. When girls complained of low wages, cognizance was taken of their complaints and in many cases adjustments were made upwards. Frank S. Moore, former manager of P-3, told the commission that the factories were no longer on a piece-work basis, but on a time basis, and all girls earned the minimum wage, Moore said. This, in Ontario, is $12.50 for a 44-hour week.

Much has been said in evidence about switching work-tags - a practice known as the "dead horse." It began about 1928. When girls in the factory came short of the minimum wage, they would receive a tag equal to the difference in order to bring them up to the necessary figure. That was mis-named "special money," you would give work-tags would transfer to the recipient's credit enough tags to make up the previous week's balance.

This had the effect of a gift and a deduction, and was bitterly complained of by some of the company's executive knew of the practice, nor did Eaton's records anywhere disclose such a practice being done. Earlier in the trial Hellock in the commission the company was prepared to make good whatever amount had been so deducted.

The practice ceased about Dec. 1933. "Suppose a girl earned $12.00 for a 44-hour week," said Hon. H. H. Stevens to Miss Kate Lewis, a witness who had declared herself to be solely responsible for the "special money," "you would give her 50 cents to bring her up to the minimum wage."

"Then, you took a 50-cent tag from her work-bundle the next week and put it in with the previous week's tags?"

"I would take her, say two hours to earn the 50 cents the second week; there she would have worked 46 hours for the $12.50. Did you know," asked Mr. Stevens "that that was a breach in the minimum wage law?"

Kellock demurred, but Chairman Kennedy reminded him it was not such a girl had worked the 46 hours for the $12.50 when the law should have been $12.00.

"It is an extraordinary system to have been going on for years without the executives knowing anything about it," commented Mr. Stevens.

Other witnesses today were Miss Violet Lloyd and Miss May McMullen.

JUDGE MURRAY

Here is the Halifax judge's word-picture of the interior of the court: "Camera flashlights are going all day long. People chatter incessantly. Then there are present such notables as Walter Winchell, Bole Carter, Joe Penner (without the duck) and Damon Runyon."

He heard the jury described as "the intelligence department." Besides the flares and clinkings of cameras and the babbling voices of onlookers a stout woman snoring added to the sound effects, one day the judge attended the trial.

He was telling of his impressions at a luncheon attended by four other Nova Scotia judges: Neil E. McArthur of Sydney, W. A. Livingston of Annapolis Royal; H. W. Sangster of Windsor; George Patterson of New Glasgow.

The jurist in his address said he could not speak too highly of Justice Thomas W. Trenchard, the presiding judge at the Hauptmann trial.

"He is 72 years old... a fine cultured gentleman, absolutely fitted for his task."

Attorney General Wilentz he likened to "the sartorial Jimmy Walker wearing a different suit every day and with three other lawyers to write out questions."

Defense counsel Reilly appeared "not to be in harmony with the people of Flemington."

Hauptmann he pictured as "dark, dour, with sunken eyes, hunched and not looking like a criminal."

"The lawyers wear no gowns, making their impression by the varied number of suits they wear," Judge Murray said.

"The crowd are on occasions very hysterical. Once Justice was pressed so closely he was lifted some height above the ground. One woman screamed: 'Just let me touch his coat!' Joe Penner, with his duck this time, was likewise nearly mobbed."

UNPASSABLE "What are you like at full-back?" the captain of a Rugby team asked a new member of the club.

"Oh, passable, passable," was the modest reply.

"Well, that's not much use," said the captain. "We already have a full-back that's passable. What we are looking for is one that's not."

GIRL GUIDE NEWS

GUIDING IN RURAL P. E. I. Since November three Guide Companies have been registered at Guide Headquarters, Toronto. Each Company has its Captain and Lieutenant, and it is hoped that the Guides will be present at the Rally in Charlottetown next summer.

Melville region papers showed twelve members, Murray River thirty-six members and Alberton fifty-two members.

There is also a Company in Moncton, N. B. It has been registered for two or three years and some of its members have camped with the Charlottetown Guides.

RANGER COMPANY ORGANIZED A meeting for organizing a Ranger Company in Charlottetown was held in the Rover Den, Great George Street, Friday the 18th.

Miss Wilson, Acting Guide Commissioner, was present together with the Captain and sixteen girls (thirteen Guides over 16 years of age and three girls with no Guide experience).

Miss Wilson gave a short talk on the visit this summer of Lord and Lady Baden-Powell and then plans for future meetings were discussed.

Through the kindness of the Rover Den, a game was placed at the disposal of the Rangers each Thursday evening. Rangers are Guides over 16 years of age or other girls of that age who are interested.

2ND CHTOWN COMPANY Friday, January 11. This was "uniform" evening. The meeting opened with inspection for complete uniform taken in patrol corps by P. Janet Stewart. A game was played in which each patrol was required to pin paper badges and insignia on a Guide tunic in the correct places. A patrol discussion followed in which the leaders reported the opinions of their patrols as to the reason why Guides wear uniform. In the general discussion which followed it was pointed out that the Girl Guide uniform stands for service and the "c" leaf the four Guiding aims. The Girl Guide is a friend to all and a sister to every other Guide. At the consent of the Patrol Leaders, the Seconds were given the privilege of attending the meeting. The Court of Honour met and the patrol reports were submitted and programs for the remaining meetings in January were drawn up.

Friday, January 18. Three Patrol Leaders took charge of this meeting. Helen Lawson acting as Captain, Sylvia Block as Lieutenant and Avis Higgins as Company Leader.

The excellent program which was presented was well carried out and included inspection several different kinds of relay races, a discussion, a knotting game and a jolly sing-song which ended with the Girl Guide hymn, evening song and special airport. On Monday words a day were transmitted from the courtroom.

Here is the Halifax judge's word-picture of the interior of the court: "Camera flashlights are going all day long. People chatter incessantly. Then there are present such notables as Walter Winchell, Bole Carter, Joe Penner (without the duck) and Damon Runyon."

Jury Disagree On Bailey Case

In the Supreme Court yesterday the case, Harry Bailey vs. Wellington MacNeill, Oliver Campbell and Walter Berrigan, concluded. The jury retired at 12:15 and returned at 2:30 and reported a disagreement. Mr. Justice Saunders asked if they thought it possible to arrive at a verdict and the foreman replied in the negative.

A poll of the jury was taken and stood as follows. For the defendant: Messrs. William J. McEachern, James Lonergan, Sr., and Gordon Waddell. For the plaintiff: William Molyneux, Thomas White, James Murray and Philip Monaghan. The jury were accordingly discharged.

The appeal case, The King respondent, vs. John J. McGillivray, appellant was dismissed with costs. The Court adjourned until January 29th.

Mr. Justice Saunders before beginning his address to the jury announced that in the future he would not permit the character of witnesses to be attacked. It is a practice, he said, which is becoming far too common.

A summary of the Judge's charge to the jury follows: In beginning the address reference was made to the length of time the case has occupied. The statement of claims was then read to the jury. The plaintiff claims $5,000 damages from MacNeill and Campbell and Berrigan as the servants or agents of MacNeill. From the evidence there is nothing to connect them as the servants of MacNeill. The defendant Berrigan has not put in any answer to the claim. As on this case is concerned, the jury will have nothing to do with Berrigan. It was pointed out to the jury that where two or more persons acting in concert conduct themselves so as to be liable to be sued, each is liable for the acts of the other. So far as Campbell is concerned in this case what must be decided is whether he was acting in concert with Berrigan. It is the duty of the jury to determine whether in hitting MacNeill he was acting in concert with Berrigan. When the fight started first in the afternoon Campbell acted as peace-maker for he tried to keep Berrigan from going after Bailey.

His Lordship then referred to evidence given by various witnesses as to MacNeill's part in opening the door. He read extracts from Godkin's and Arbing's evidence where they said they saw MacNeill pulling open the door. So far as can be seen there is no reason to discredit the witnesses. Benjamin Shepherd also said he saw MacNeill pulling the door open. George Shepherd said he saw MacNeill and Berrigan trying to open the door. These are five witnesses who say they saw MacNeill trying to open the door, and it will be a matter for the jury to decide. Other witnesses give evidence which is quite the reverse. His Lordship then read extracts from Alfred MacNeill's evidence and Oliver Campbell's evidence where they said they saw Berrigan pulling the door open. Walter Berrigan in his own evidence says he pulled the bottom door open. Fred Henderson said he did not see MacNeill open the door although he was within ten feet of him. Wellington MacNeill in his own evidence said Berrigan pulled the door open. Ray Horne, whom Judge Saunders said impressed him favorably, in his evidence said he saw Berrigan pull the door open. He was within a pace or two of the door and had every opportunity to see.

It is a matter for the jury to decide who pulled the door open. Some witnesses said it was Berrigan who pulled the door open during the fight "give it to him," and other somewhat similar sentences. Other witnesses, however, who had a good chance to hear what was said did not hear any such language. It was pointed out that MacNeill actually said those words the trouble in coming to the conclusion that he was joining with Berrigan and urging him on. It is for the jury to decide whether he said those words or not. The same is true in deciding whether or not MacNeill used a whip. The Judge then read Bailey's own evidence of the fight. It is a rather singular story as it stands alone, the other witnesses do not substantiate it. Bailey gave the impression that very little took place on the first occasion. In his own stall MacNeill hit him and he was kicked. His Lordship pointed out that the fact that MacNeill was standing around and not a single witness says he saw anyone but Berrigan hit Bailey. They saw no one kick him. The Judge then pictured the fight from the standpoint of reason and common sense. Bailey said he had always been a friend of MacNeill's up to that day. Bailey goes to MacNeill's stall, starting fooling with Berrigan, maybe did "bump" him and start his nose bleeding. In that Bailey would appear, the aggressor. In any case Berrigan and Campbell proceeded up to Bailey's stall, Berrigan bent on getting even. According to witnesses they did fight it out. Whether MacNeill had any part in the fight is for the jury to say, but if Bailey's evidence is true, why should MacNeill without provocation turn around and suddenly assault Bailey. That is the situation, a number of witnesses telling a certain story and on the other hand another set of witnesses telling a diametrically opposite story. It becomes a question of probability, and if it is decided that the plaintiff is entitled to damages it is for the jury to decide how much.

Reilly Makes Unexpected Move In Hauptmann Case

officials said also that the phonograph record would be made available if Reilly testified. Wilentz, openly nettled by the turn the case was taking, said he understood Sisk was to be called away, and added the state was about to close its case. "Well," said Reilly calmly, "I will settle this with a witness as a witness for the defence." "Fine," said Wilentz. "And I call for his reports with him," the big attorney said.

Reilly cleared his throat, and glanced at a sheaf of papers he held in his hand. "Now, isn't it a fact," he asked, "that after talking to Dr. Condon, you had Dr. Condon imitate the voice of John at the cemetery and that imitation was recorded on a Victrola record?"

"Why, yes?"

"Did you or not?" Reilly persisted.

"Yes, sir, we did."

"Where are those Victrola records?"

"Well, there was only one record, and I believe that is in Washington," Sisk replied.

He said he believed he could get the record in a "couple of days."

Reilly went forward in the examination, then 1; sprang his biggest surprise.

"Isn't it a fact," he demanded, "that you know that a plaster cast of the man who received the money in the cemetery was taken and was sent to Dr. Condon's son-in-law (Ralph Hackett)?"

Wilentz objected at once.

"Well," returned Reilly, "he has looked through his records and in the interests of justice a question was asked if a cast was taken of a man and if it is not Hauptmann's despite all the rules of evidence, I think we are entitled to know it."

Supreme Court Justice Thomas W. Trenchard said it was correct for Reilly to ask Sisk if he "knew it and how he knows it."

"I learned that a footprint, a plaster cast of a footprint, was taken, but there is no positive connection between that footprint and the man who received the ransom money," Sisk said.

The cast, he explained, was taken from a fresh grave near a retaining wall in St. Raymond's Cemetery, "about 15 or 30 feet" from the point where Condon passed the ransom money to the collector.

Sisk said the report of the footprint and the cast was in the New York office of the Department of Justice, but that he might have difficulty getting it to Flemington because all reports are the property of the Attorney General of the United States. Reilly announced then that he would telegraph the Attorney General. He did so at noon, requesting the original report on the cast "in the interests of justice."

After the trial adjourned Reilly displayed a reply from J. Edgar Hoover, head of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice, saying Sisk had been instructed to produce the report. In Washington, Justice Department
