Sees England Passing As Great World Power

Live Stock Report

MONTREAL, Oct. 5.—Fresh receipts of livestock for today's markets amounted to 142 cattle, 147 lambs, 592 hogs and 50 calves. Some common bulls were sold at $3.00 to $3.50 and canner and cut cows at $1.50 to $2.50. The few veal calves sold for $10.50 to $12.00 according to quality and the half dozen grassers brought $3.75. The lamb market was pretty much on a level with yesterday. The best lambs sold today brought $11.25 with a dollar cut on bucks. Poorer lambs sold for $10.50 and $11.00 for the ewes and wethers. Hogs were a shade stronger today. Most sales of thick smooths were made at $12.25 although a few sales were made at $12.00 and 12.35. Selects sold for 12.75 and very light hogs $11.00 to $11.75.

While he is slow to hazard prophecies, as he says prophets have been very pessimistic about England's future after all of its recent wars, Dean Inge is of the opinion that the future will be with large countries. The Americas and Eastern Europe still have room for large populations and the dean believes it is unlikely England can continue as a great world power.

"The greater security of America will alone be enough to give her a decisive advantage in our competition with her," he says. "The prospect is unwelcome to a patriot. Much will depend on the friendliness of the United States, on which we certainly cannot count, but of which we need not despair."

MILK
The Perfect Food

Milk is the whole food of infants, the chief diet of invalids and should occupy a large place in the diet of us all.

It contains all the elements necessary for the human body including iron.

It is an enemy to Physical Ills.

Milk is the proper treatment when new blood is needed. It is a living fluid, nearly akin to blood, and quickly absorbed into the circulation. Hence the necessity of Pure Milk.

Get your Milk Supply from The Garden City Dairy and be sure you are giving your family Safe Milk.

Address And Presentation

On Tuesday evening, September 21, the people of Caledonia Presbyterian Church and community assembled at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Norman J. MacPherson, Brooklyn, to bid farewell to their student pastor, Quincey A. McDowell, of Princeton Theological Seminary. Their pastor was returning to Princeton to take up the third year of his theological training. In spite of the inclemency of the weather, about 180 people were present, which testifies in itself to the loyalty of the people to their church and to their young pastor. The evening was spent in games and music, and a delicious lunch was served. At quite a late hour the happy folk returned to their homes, having enjoyed the splendid fellowship of the evening. During the course of the evening a very substantial purse was presented to Mr. McDowell, at which time the following address was read:—
Mr. Quincey A. McDowell
Pastor of Caledonia Church
Dear Pastor and Friend:—
The people of Caledonia Congregation assembled here tonight realizing that the time is fast approaching when circumstances will make necessary the termination of your pastoral work in this portion of the Master's vineyard, desire to meet with you on this occasion and give expression to their great appreciation and thankfulness to the Master—the great Head of the Church—for the service you have been enabled to render to our congregation during the summer season which is now drawing to a close.

When we look back to the days prior to your coming to minister to our needs, and remember the unhappy congregational condition that existed, owing to the trying experiences through which we had passed, and the uncertain outlook as to the future and compare our state at that time with conditions as existing today we must say that it is truly marvellous, and we thank God for the manner in which you have led us through it all. A few months ago you came among us an entire stranger from another land. We know you not save as an ambassador sent to minister to our needs. We are indeed happy to say that in every way you have far exceeded our most sanguine expectations. Your striking personality and unique qualifications to co-mingle with people has endeared you to all. Your high standard of intellectual attainment assures us of your fitness to unfold a message of degree the great truths as contained in Scripture, and your christian character and bearing has been an inspiration to old and young, and has earned for you our respect and admiration as a congregation, and we hesitate not to say the approval of our Master whom you so faithfully endeavor to serve.

Your successful work among the young people as exemplified in the Summer Bible School which you so eminently conducted and your appropriate "talk" to the children each Sabbath morning are outstanding features of your ministry in Caledonia Congregation. And now as the time approaches when you must sever your connection with us here in order to further prepare yourself for service, we realize more and more what our loss will be. Your ministrations to our church in every department of congregational work has been to us a great blessing and an inspiration to earnestly press on with confidence and assurance. In closing, we wish to emphasize our feeling of thankfulness to God for favoring us with your leadership during the past few months. We want you to realize the esteem in which you are held, and as a slight token of unbounded friendship we ask you to accept this envelope with its contents which we trust you will find material benefit in assisting you to the attainment of your chosen high calling. Our prayers go with you and we all wish you God-speed.

Signed in behalf of the Caledonia Congregation.

A CHANGING WORLD
As an illustration of the axiom that this is a changing world the following story has its point.
Two friends dining at a downtown club were discussing the names of a common acquaintance "Dorothy" is very devoted to him, isn't she?" observed one. She's head over heels in love with him, she's quite drunk, she's quit smoking, and she's quit swearing, all for his sake."
Geologists tell us now that the earth is fast getting warmer, and that in from thirty to fifty million years it will become molten. Which means that just about the time the coal miners and the owners learn to work in harmony, we won't need any more coal. Life.

John Smith and His Car
By FREDERICK C. RUSSELL

John Smith is a character whom every motorist should welcome. He is not selfish, rather he is a motoring martyr, a chap willing and glad to have his car exploded, in an interesting way, his experiences for the benefit of the other twenty million or more members of the motor clan.

CAR IS RECOVERED

Smith's plan for finding his car differed from mine. He wanted to hire a taxi and give chase, but my plan was to go over to the police department and review the list of recent automobile losses.

"The thief will probably be in Alaska by night," Smith complained. "That car of mine could show speed."

"Your car," I said, "will probably be standing in some side street garage being repainted and camouflaged. They will drive it somewhere else, but not until they have destroyed the usual means of identifying it."

"Then why not search the garages and repair shops?" Smith asked.

"The unscrupulous fellows in the business would get wise and tip off the crooks," I explained. "The car would be juggled around so that we would never be able to find it. We must first find the thief. Then it will be a simple matter to find the car. Unless I am a pretty poor prophet the thief who took your car will be on the job in front of some other bank tomorrow. His specialty is 'bank' cars. His plan is to study the habits of one particular motorist—a chap like you for instance, who does the same thing regularly, but forgets to lock the car the one time when he should remember to."

"Now take this," I added pointing to a list of cars on a card which the clerk in the detective office handed me. A particular item read: "Sedan, Value $4,000. Stolen from in front of Mutual Bank." "This happened a month ago. Isn't it about time for this crook to be working in front of the Mutual Bank again?"

Smith thought it quite possible. But again he displayed a desire to leave the matter to the insurance company.

"My advice to you is not to report this to the company," I said. "Make a report to your agent, but ask him not to press the matter for a few days. The company is now deliberating as to whether they ought to overlook your forgetting to equip the car with an extinguisher. If you now report that the car has been stolen they will be inclined to conclude that you are careless—perhaps purposely careless. So according to agreement we pulled up to the curb opposite the Mutual Bank building in my car the following day. Being noon hour it was difficult indeed to single out any one person from the crowd as the thief we were looking for. Any one of a number of men might have been observing the habits of some one motorist in particular. After waiting 30 minutes the arrival of a certain car, however, attracted our attention. The driver drove up to the curb, switched off the engine and jumped out. We watched him until he disappeared through the doorway of the bank. A moment later a short, stout man emerged from the crowd and stepped into the car.

"That's not the man we're looking for," Smith said, as I cranked my motor.

"That's not the man who owns that car!" I retorted. "There must be several of them working this game. We'll follow."

We did. It was not hard work either. And apparently the thief never suspected that we were always just a few cars behind him. Plainly right in the heart of the automobile section of the city he turned into a side street, I drew up to the curb there, jumped out and followed him with my eyes. Noting what shop he turned into, I stepped into a cigar store and "pinned" one of the detectives at City Hall. A half hour later we had not only located the car just stolen, but Smith's car as well.

"There's my car!" Smith explained, upon seeing his old faithful.

"Can you identify it?" the detective asked.

The garageman smiled. No wonder! Not a number corresponded with those originally on Smith's car. Smith was convinced now that preparedness pays. He recalled that before he had taken his car from the dealer I had suggested that he put some secret identification marks on the car.

"You will find my initials scratched in the cover of the distributor," he said. The detective investigated and reported that he found the letters "J. S."

"They stand for 'John Smith,'" I explained. "This car was stolen from him yesterday."

The garageman ceased smiling. It was the detective's turn. And Smith's.

FAREWELL GIFT.

To Miss Dollie Condon.
Dear Friend: As you are soon to leave this province for the United States, we, the members of the Murray Harbor North Institute take this opportunity of bidding you farewell, expressing appreciation of your worth and work as one of our members. You have always given an active and valuable support at all our meetings and entertainments. It is a matter of deep regret that a younger people of your ability and splendid character find it necessary to leave this province for another country.

Our wish is that you remain with us for the winter months and assist us in our work and any entertainments that we may hold. As your name on the programme always ensured us a full house.

But as such cannot be we can only say good-bye. As a token of our esteem we ask you to accept this gift, accompanied by our most sincere wishes for success in your new employment.

Signed on behalf of The Women's Institute, Murray Harbour North.
Mrs. Irving Millar, Sec'y.

It will Prevent Ulcerated Throat.—At the first symptoms of sore throat, which presages ulceration and inflammation, take a spoonful of Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil. Add a little sugar to it to make it palatable. It will allay the irritation and prevent the ulceration and swelling that are so painful. Those who were periodically subject to quinsy have thus made themselves immune to attack.
