MADE HARDSHIPS EASY IN CANADIAN WILDS

Surveyors kept in fine trim by simple first-aid measure

A member of a survey party, sent out by the government of British Columbia to do subdivision work three hundred miles from civilization reports that the men were kept in fine trim throughout the trip by a simple first-aid measure.

"The chief brought along as a part of our first-aid supply a bottle of Sloan's Liniment," he writes. "And through weeks of exposure and hardship we found it our best help for sprains, bruises, stiff muscles and rheumatism."

Sloan's gives real relief because it doesn't just deaden the pain. It helps your body to throw off the cause.

Just a little Sloan's patted on lightly—and a healing tide of fresh, new blood is sent right to the place that hurts. The aching and stiffness are helped right away. Get a bottle today. All druggists—35 cents.

PARADISE

By COSMO HAMILTON

Author of "Scandal" and the "Blindness of Virtue."

Half the truth," he said. "I'll own up to hate for his having killed my chance. No more than that. There was no man in the R. A. F. with whom I was so thankful to serve."

She sprang at him suddenly, turned him round and forced him to give her his eyes. "What are yer goin' ter do to 'im? Come on, now. Answer that."

"Do to him?" He laughed quite easily, much amused. "I don't know what you mean."

She gripped his arms, her head bent forward, the fey look on her face. "I'm looking straight into your soul," she said. "You can't dodge me."

Her touch, her nearness bewildered him, sent his blood flying, made his heart stumble. But the whole success of his costly scheme depended upon lies, acting, the most careful waiting game. He had not gone off his head for nothing. And so he laughed again.

"Why this drama, Chrissie? My soul's open to inspection if you can find it. Look as much as you like."

"I want an answer," she said.

He beamed at her with all his winning alert. "I ought to have said that this will give me a chance for a holiday, a change of scene, new interest. I thought that went without saying. You've seen how I am. And so when I said I'm doing it for Tony, I included myself and you and the others. Every one's keen, and somehow we all seem to be hitched up together. Your precious Tony's as safe as the rest."

He seemed to be perfectly normal, open and frank.

He would have baffled a brain specialist.—and Chrissie was only a girl. But a girl of intuition, a knowledge of Sherwood, a memory of ugly moments, a great protecting love. And though baffled by this man's calmness and amusement, she kept her hold of his arms and gave him something to keep.

"Where you go, I go, you heard me say last night to Tony; and I shall always say it. It's my faith, my religion. And if anything happens to Tony, it will happen to me as well. Life and death, they're all the same. Remember that."

And she let him go, and stood for a moment with her head up and there were love and devotion in her eyes like a flame.

KING STUFF

I

"'Ere, 'old on there! What's all this?" cried Lady George, glaring at Lumley across the table in the smoking room, into which they had recently retired for a game of cribbage.

Poor devil! He had been held so long responsible for upsets, servant troubles and income tax that he merely shrugged his patient shoulders. Not the Germans, but he had brought the war on, and by sneezing one morning twice behind the paper had started, without the smallest doubt, the epidemic of influenza in 1917.

They were passing Sumatra and Java in the Timor Sea. It was late afternoon. The clouds of a storm that had burst on the coast of China were scurrying over the yacht in a broken procession, like refugees. Rain fell. There were shudders of distant thunder. Spasms of lightning zigzagged among the sullen greyness. The sea responded to the angry mood. Then, a few moments before sundown, an explosion of wind swept so violently over the Isis that she rolled like a drunken woman.

"Lumley! Don't you 'ear me? What on earth are you doin' to her bloomin' ship? 'Ere, 'ere! Oh, Saint John the Blacksmith." And away went her chair down the sudden incline.

The gallant Colonel, up at once to go to the rescue of his screaming spouse, lost his legs and fell against the wall. He watched the over-laden chair skid to and fro with its clutching mass of panic, impotent, and if the truth must be told, in an agony of wisely suppressed laughter.

And then the world, in the shape of the Isis, resumed its normal behaviour, and Lady George, taking a firm hold of the table, gave tongue. "There you are! I've been expectin' something like this to give me a nervous breakdown. You saw the flashes. You 'eard the thunder. You said yerself that all these clouds were let loose by a storm. Why the blazes be a Colonel if you can't guard against a hignerminous thing like that?"

"I'm sorry," said Lumley gravely. "I'll make a point of seeing that it doesn't occur again." The cards were scattered all over the floor.

The humour of his statement made no impression upon Lady George. The hard work and long standing hours of her early years had been followed by so much life that she was totally out of humour now. It had been worn away. All that she had in the battered fifties was simply the capacity to see what was ridiculous in other people. Her own absurdities no longer raised her mirth. She was a difficult woman to live with, poor old soul.

"I see no reason why yer shouldn't do somethin' fer yer livin'," she went on, glad to see him out to the pain of picking up the pack. And it was pain, with his stiff joints. "Liv'n' on ther fat of her land, with other people payin'."

Even that drew no tu quoque from the master diplomat. Without this constant nagging he would indeed be lost. It had become as much a part of his routine as the reiterated tapping of the same note to a piano tuner. He never forgot what he would have been without the wife who loved him all the more because her despotism was left unquestioned.

When a woman of middle age possesses neither a dog nor children, it is natural that she would order about a husband for the necessary indulgence of an ownership which is essential to her sex. That is the only reason why so many childless women with backanswering husbands fall back on little dogs.

And then Tony came up from the gymnasium all aglow with health. He was almost as sunburned as an Italian water boy who spends the summer grubbing for stones in the dwindling Arno with which to repair the ravages in the Ponte Vecchio.

Chrissie trotted in at his heels, much disturbed by the uneasy sea.

And Lady George, always stimulated by the presence of younger people, so that it was her habit to laugh loudly for no earthly reason, send herself into paroxysms of coughing and wind up with, "Oh dear; oh, dear,' instantly assumed her party manners and was hail-fellow-well-met.

"Well, you two nice things, and where 'ave you come from? The gym, by the looks of yer both. What's the idea of all this exercise?"

"The joy of keeping fit," said Tony. "The self-respect that comes from rippling muscles. Torso pride." He chucked his coat into a chair, stood in a white sweater with his legs apart, drew in a long breath through his nostrils, put one hand behind Chrissie's shoulders and the other behind her ankles, raised her high above his head and held her there, wearing the inane smile of a circus strong man with which he gives a lethargic audience the cue for applause.

As light as a feather, as slim as a girl of fifteen, who stood no higher at any time than the top button of his waistcoat, Chrissie was easy enough to lift. But from her horizontal place, not far from the ceiling she beamed with pride in Tony's strength, which was to her only one of the many wonderful things about him. And when he set her down, she teetered on her toes and blew kisses to the right and left in the manner of the hard-working little people in pink tights and with pink language, whom she had followed so often in the music-halls. It was a delightful imitation.

Pollock, who had watched it all from the door, applauded. Not for the first time since he had known Chrissie and caught many glimpses of her charming gifts, it seemed to him to be a crying shame that she should sacrifice herself to Tony, merely for the sake of love. To his individualistic way of thinking, love should be regarded, like bridge or reading, as a relaxation, a hobby, and should never be allowed to interfere with the business of a career. If he had been an impresario, or a booking agent of the music-halls, he would have set himself deliberately to break up the existing relations of this girl and that man, procured her a partner and put her back in the public eye. As it was—oh, well, there was nothing in it for him. Why worry?

"Nobody never done that ter me," said Lady George. "I was the Juno type always, I was, as Geordie used ter say, when he cud speak." And when Lumley took her podgy hand and raised it to his lips in silent agreement with his predecessor's praise, she wriggled with satisfaction and wrinkled her nose as Chrissie did, a trick that she had caught. All the same she would have given a great deal not to have out-Junoed Juno in her sere and yellow. The carrying of a quite superfluous hundred pounds added considerably to the difficulties of life in those hard times.

"It's distinctly unpleasant on deck," said Pollock. "What's the consensus of opinion as to a rubber of bridge before dinner?"

"I'm on," said Lady George. "We were only playin' this game for bottards just to 'ave somethink ter do."

"And you, Colonel?"

"Oh, yes, yes. Certainly."

"Well, then, sit down, Tony, and let's cus for partners". He, Pollock, sat down, and therefore expected that every one else would do so too.

FAREWELL GIFT

Miss May McGregor was the centre of a very pleasant gathering on Wednesday, January 12th when her neighbors and friends gathered at the home of her parents Mr. and Mrs. A. C. McGregor, Graham's Road, New London, and presented her with a purse of money as a token of their appreciation and as a farewell gift to her on the eve of her visit to Indianapolis, Indiana. The Chairman of the evening was Mr. Thomas Wigmore, who in a few complimentary remarks told why the gathering was being held. Mrs. Ray McLeod read the following address and Mrs. James M. Campbell made the presentation. A very delightful social evening followed with games and music. A dainty supper being served at a late hour.

Dear May:—On hearing of your intention to move elsewhere from our midst, we, your friends have assembled here tonight, to bid you Au Revoir, hoping your visit to Uncle Sam's Domain may be very pleasant, but not so much so as to attract you to remain there too long. Be assured you will be greatly missed by us, in all our social gatherings where you are ever ready to do your part but we cannot permit your retirement from the social position which you have so faithfully filled without some expression of our appreciation. Therefore, we ask you to accept this small gift as a slight token of our esteem and best wishes, not for its intrinsic value but that it maye be a reminder of the friends you are leaving behind.

Signed on behalf of the friends present.

Women's Simpler Hygiene

More Absorbent—Discards like tissue

By ELLEN J. BUCKLAND
Registered Nurse

ALL the problems of old-time hygienic ways have recently been ended, largely because of a new way called KOTEX.

✓ Kotex discards as easily as tissue. Thus no laundry, no embarrassment of disposal.

Being 5 times as absorbent as ordinary cotton "pads," you wear lightest gowns and frocks without slightest fear. Deodorizes, too, thus ending all fear of offense.

Obtain at any store without embarrassment simply by saying "KOTEX." Many stores have it already wrapped on counters, ready for you to pick up and take along without even asking for it.

Try today and you'll never again risk the uncertainty of old ways. Box of 12 costs only a few cents. Be sure you get the genuine. Only Kotex itself is "like" Kotex.

Hunter River And Vicinity

Mr. Albert Binns of Foster & Brown, Brokers, Montreal, who has been visiting his parents Mr. and Mrs. Richard Binns, Charlottetown, is in New Glasgow visiting Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Stevenson and other friends.

Mr. Dunbar, representing Manchester, Allison & Robertson Ltd., St. John, was here during the week in the interests of his firm.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Court were visitors in Charlottetown on Friday.

Miss Esther Dixon returned on Monday from the City where she spent the week end with friends.

Mrs. Rodgerson returned to Charlottetown on Thursday evening after spending the day with friends here.

Mr. J. Herb Smith, Bungay returned to his home the latter part of the week from Halifax where he had gone with his son who underwent a surgical operation in the Hospital there some days ago. Their many friends are delighted to know that the operation was successful and trust that in time he may return to his home completely restored to health.

Mr. Clarence McGuigan, Charlottetown, spent the week-end at his home at Hope River.

Friends here regret the passing of Mrs. Rose Devine who, until a few months ago was one of the residents of this place. During the summer she and a son removed to Charlottetown where her death took place at the home of her daughter. The funeral was held on Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. Whitlock, Montreal and Miss Bessie Waye, Boston, Mass., arrived home the latter part of the week to be present at the funeral of their mother, widow of the late Edward Waye which took place on Sunday afternoon. The pall bearers were Messrs. Hammond Bertram, Geo. S. MacLeod, Arch. McKinnon, Geo. H. McMillan, Rod. McKinnon and William Bernard. Interment was in Greenvale Cemetery.

Thirty or more young people from here attended the Fancy Dress Carnival on New Glasgow Ice Friday evening. The many courtesies extended by the committee in charge, the good ice and bright moonlight, altogether made an ideal outing and the participants eagerly look forward to similar gatherings during the remaining winter season.

Recent visitors to the City included Mrs. John Bertram, Miss Irene Whitlock, Mr. Everett Wedlock, Dr. J.R. Murchison, Mr. Angus Stewart, Mr. Louis Trainor.—L.

SUCCESSFUL WINTER FEEDING REQUIRES IMPERIALS

The "Power Foods," which supply energy and strength, are a necessity for your breeding foxes at this time. All the energy and strength must come from food and chiefly from one class of foods called "carbohydrates." From one-third to one-half of the foxes' diet should be made up of them. IMPERIAL COD LIVER OIL BISCUIT ranks very high in carbohydrates and its the correct cereal to feed at this season. IMPERIALS are also rich in vitamines and mineral salts, both absolutely necessary for healthy, vigorous foxes.

BEST RESULTS IN REPRODUCTION

are obtained from the regular feeding of IMPERIALS during the gestation period, as they are laxative and have a cooling effect on the blood. Feed the morning meal of dry IMPERIALS.

IMPERIALS are sold by leading distributors or direct from the factory.
