The splendid result of their days labor is a total of over $600 collected for the P. E. I. Hospital.

Stores and hotels did a thriving trade in exchanging bank notes for silver. One visitor to the city remarked "I changed a 'V' at the hotel and I've bought a tag from every young lady I've met on the way up."

SWINBURN DIED ON SATURDAY

LONDON, April 11.—(Special)—Algernon Charles Swinburn the poet and essayist died on Saturday morning. He had been suffering with influenza which developed into pneumonia.

First Methodist Church was most enjoyable and inspiring. The choir, Misses W. Holbrook and H. Bremner, were beyond criticism in their work, and the organist, W. H. Watts, made the king of musical instruments fairly speak its message of joy and gladness.

The church was beautifully decorated with potted plants of rarest bloom and fragrance. The choir under the direction of Prof. Earle, and the organist Miss Bessie Crosby, were up to the usual high standard mark.

The music included an organ voluntary, "Aria" Moryart, Anthem, "Sing we loud Hosannas." Solo Miss Dorekendorf, Evening: Anthem solos, Dr. Yoe, Miss Dorekendorf and Mr. Duffy.

The congregation at St. Paul's Church was exceptionally large yesterday, and beautiful music, for the happiest season of the whole year was appropriately rendered.

There was a larger collection of flowers, than in former years and they were most tastefully arranged. In the morning the Rector delivered a most thoughtful address, and in the evening an excellent report of the great Laymen's Missionary Convention, recently held in Toronto was read by a member of the Church.

Zion Church was full of the Easter spirit and the soloists, Miss L. Lawson, and Mrs. S. C. Moore, furnished keen enjoyment through their vocal ability. It is safe to say that Easter received more attention than ever before in Charlottetown, and more than one will hope that the good effects will be visible throughout the whole of the coming year.

When found his head touched the ground upon one side of the fence and his feet the ground on the opposite side. The barbs were imbedded in his abdomen.

It was by the merest chance that he was discovered, as he was far from a road and in a section of the Charles Kelly ranch that is seldom visited. His horse was found tied to a tree in dying condition five miles from the place where the owner was.

RECAPS CONFESSION ABOUT MURDER

BOSTON, April 8.—"Mother, I am innocent. If they send me to the electric chair they will be murdering an innocent man. Do you think I could look you in the face if I were guilty of killing that girl? Why I must have been crazy if I made the confession they said I made. I can't remember much about that night in the police station."

These words of Peter C. Delorey, indicted by the Middle sex grand jury as one of the murderers of Annie Sullivan, were repeated by Peter's mother a few minutes after she left the East Cambridge county jail after a two hour interview with her son yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Delorey, Peter's father and mother, his sister Mabel, and his two aunts, were present at the interview. "It's all a plot to get that $1,500 offered as a reward. My boy is to be sacrificed by those to whom he should look for protection," said the mother.

James Mantir broke his long, persistent offense and told his own story of that night of March 27 a year ago to A. L. Benachi, the Greek consul.

AWFULLY WARM IN BOSTON TUESDAY

BOSTON, Mass., April 8.—The last day of the first week in April, 1909, will probably long stand in the annals of the local weather bureau as a record-breaker. Bostonians today enjoyed all the comforts of a day in June. Young America swarmed over the green grass and the parks and vacant lots; all classes of citizens rode to the country on open cars and so insistent were the crowds on the public garden that the park department ordered the swan-boats placed on the pond. The temperature climbed from 60 at 8 a.m. to 76 late in the afternoon. The maximum broke all records of the weather bureau for April 7 and with few exceptions was the greatest ever recorded in the fourth month of any year.
