"Arliss" In "Iron Duke" At Prince Edward

The gala world premiere in London of the Gaumont British production "THE IRON DUKE" starring George Arliss now playing at the Prince Edward Theatre, was attended by H. R. H. the Prince of Wales and many of the distinguished guests who were in London to attend the wedding of Princess Marina and the Prince George. The Prince of Wales and most of the other members of the Royal Family are confirmed movie goers but the Prince usually prefers to attend theatricals and is able to be seen entering one of London's cinemas at any time of the day and buying his ticket at the box office like any other entertainment seeker.

George Arliss makes the Duke of Wellington a very human character. While the life of Wellington as a soldier and a diplomat is revealed in authentic manner, the scandal with the French Emperor, which at one time threatened the good name of Britain's greatest soldier is included in the film, as are some delightful glimpses of the Duke at home in England. In fact, the final scene of the film shows Wellington leaving the House of Parliament with his lovely wife and two children, to attend the Cricket Matches.

The famous incident of the Ball given in Wellington's honour by the Duchess of Richmond on the "Eve of Waterloo" and which was immortalized in Lord Byron's poem of that name, is shown in the film as the sound of revelry by night is brought to life in the film. The poem is in Canadian school readers and every child is familiar with it.

Another famous incident is the meeting of Blucher and Wellington at Waterloo which is reproduced from the famous painting. The charge of the Scots Greys which finally routed the French forces is vividly portrayed.

Glady Cooper, famous as one of the most beautiful and talented of English actresses is seen for the first time on the screen as the scheming niece of Louis XVIII of France who is the real power behind the throne.

Arliss is said to give the finest characterization of his career in "The Iron Duke" and the playing of the supporting cast is unusually brilliant. The man who beat Napoleon at Waterloo is shown as warrior, lover, diplomat, and husband.

DUCHESS FLEW TO TIMBUKTU

WOBURN, Eng., May 27—The Duchess of Bedford, who is 69 years old—has just returned from a holiday that covered 10,000 miles by air. She left her private airplane in Woburn Park, Beds, on March 20, flew over Spain, crossed to Oran, headed eastward over Equatorial Africa to the Sudan, and followed the course of the Nile northward on the homeward trip.

When a pressman saw the Duchess she would make only one comment on her trip: "It was most interesting."

The Duchess was accompanied on the tour by her private pilot, Mr. C. Preston, with whom she shared the task of piloting the machine.

CAPITOL TO-DAY

"Rendezvous At Midnight" At Capitol

A real piece of entertainment is the film, "Rendezvous at Midnight", which opened last night at the Capitol Theatre, with Ralph Bellamy and a charming, young English actress, Valerie Hobson, in the leading roles.

Rarely has Bellamy appeared to such advantage as in this picture, and the work of Miss Hobson makes one wonder why she was not imported from England sooner.

The story is a fascinating one, packed with the unusual combination of murder mystery and romance. Bellamy in the role of Bob Edmonds, has just replaced Mrs. Crawford, played by Arthur Vinton, as police commissioner of New York City, and is heading an investigation of Crawford's grafting activities while he was in office. Crawford in a desperate effort to save himself, "frames" Sandra Rogers, played by Valerie Hobson, the new commissioner's sweetheart, and tells her he will run her in the newspapers if she does not persuade Edmonds to stop the investigation. She refuses, and tells him she could kill him without having a second thought. Crawford is really killed and every bit of evidence unearthed points conclusively to Sandra's guilt.

To tell what happens would spoil one of the finest films we have seen in a long time. It is well worth anything to go to see it. Incidentally, for the women there is a brilliant display of feminine fashions in one striking sequence laid in a fashionable gown shop.

In the very able supporting cast excellent performances were turned in by Irene Ware, Catherine Doucet, Arthur Vinton, Kathleen Williams, Purnell Pratt and a host of others. Christy Cabanne did a very nice job of directing.

PRINCESS'S PRESENTS RANGE FROM WASH BOARD TO DIAMONDS

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, May 27—Wedding gifts for Princess Ingrid flooded the Stockholm Palace today as the time approached for her marriage to Crown Prince Frederick of Denmark next Friday.

From her grandfather, King Gustaf, the Princess received a 17th century brooch of diamonds and pearls originally owned by the father of Frederick the Great. It was later worn, according to history, by the Queen of Prussia.

Ingrid's father, the Crown Prince of Sweden, gave his daughter a modern platinum brooch set with 238 brilliants and 444 rose diamonds.

One present, from a small boy, was a scrubbing board, sent with the note that the Princess would be able to wash her own clothes.

Frederik arrived yesterday to participate in the series of receptions, luncheons and dinners preliminary to the marriage ceremony. The couple attended a public reception last night after which they were guests at a dinner at the Belgian Legation where King Leopold and Queen Astrid were the hosts.

A Danish newspaper has estimated the expenses of King Gustaf in seeing Princess Ingrid married at the equivalent of $60,000.

"Riding The Rods" De Luxe In France

Reminiscences of war days in France are recalled, particularly the "40 hommes 10 chevaux" marked on box cars showing they could carry 40 men and ten horses, in an announcement by the French State Railways that are fixing up some box cars for "tramping" parties, the cars being painted white inside and out and having cook stoves installed and hooks for hammocks. One can "hobo de luxe" in this way in France, according to about $1.19 a day, according to passenger officials of the Canadian National Railways, travelling by freight train, and if third class tickets are purchased the cars will be carried off passenger trains.

Home Canning Equipment And Material

(Experimental Farms Note)
Safe canning of fruits and vegetables requires care in every step of the process. Jars, lids and all utensils must be absolutely clean. It is not necessary to have a special canning outfit for home use although one may be purchased if it is desired. The ordinary wash boiler with a wire or slatted rack may be used, or any kettle with a tight fitting cover. The rack or false bottom must be at least three quarters of an inch from the bottom of the sterilizer and should be slanted to allow the water to circulate around the jars. For processing, fill the sterilizer with warm water at least two inches above the tops of the jars. The length of time required varies with the food being canned. This type of canner is used for general canning experiments conducted by the Division of Horticulture, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

The steam pressure cooker is especially recommended for canning vegetables and meats as it gives a higher temperature than is possible in a hot water bath.

Oven canning is recommended for fruits and tomatoes. A well insulated, heat controlled oven is best for this method of canning. The temperature should be kept at from 150 deg. F. to 175 deg. F. without top heat. The filled jars are placed in a shallow pan of water and the time allowed should be about one-third more than in the hot water bath.

A jar for use in canning should have a smooth rim and good fitting cover to furnish a perfect seal. Test each jar before using it. Half fill with water, adjust the rubber and cover, seal and invert, to test for leaks. The spring tops should snap into place. Ring tops should not be used if they cracked or corroded.

Jar rubbers are a very important part of canning equipment. Buy fresh rubbers each season. Never use old ones. Twelve rubber rings are cheaper than a jar of fruit or vegetables.

In choosing foods to can, remember that there is no magic in a jar which will improve the contents stored in it. Food comes out pretty much as it goes in. Fine luscious fruit, perfect vegetables, and tender plump fowls retain their quality after canning.

Recovery on Way Economists Say

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., May 27—(CP)—"The growing conviction that the depression is nearing its end is justified," Irving Fisher, economist and Yale University professor, told delegates to the 19th annual convention of Kiwanis International at the closing session.

Mr. Fisher who spoke on "Stable Money and Recovery" declared the fundamental reason for recovery was the restoration of credit currency. The only countries that had recovered materially were those that had restored their money.

During the session the training of Canadian youth in broad social programs was urged. Skilled education in all the handicrafts, promotion of hobby shows, music, drama, literature and painting was suggested. Agencies such as the Y. M. C. A., Junior Red Cross, Girl Guides, etc., were urged to cooperate in training in citizenship, adult education, night schools and the providing of recreational facilities.

The following clubs received high praise in the planning conferences for their community and welfare activities being conducted: Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Vancouver, Quebec, Moosejaw, Lethbridge, Kitchener, Waterloo, Kirkland Lake, Halifax, Belleville and Barrie.

District conventions for Canada were announced today as follows: Moose Jaw, Sask., Aug. 5-8; Vancouver, B. C., Aug. 18-21, and London, Ont., Sept. 22-24.

Seeing The World In a Sailboat

HAMILTON, Bermuda, May 27—(CP)—Two yachtsmen with no knowledge of navigation were preparing today for a trip to New York in their 15-foot sailboat, the "Spirit of Bermuda."

Captain Eric Johnson plans to sail Monday with Carl Holmes, his only companion. Johnson, who had an adventurous voyage four years ago in a small craft, thinks he will make the United States in six days.

After their arrival in New York, Johnson and Holmes will proceed to Montreal, and then Toronto to show their boat in the Canadian National Exhibition.

Meanwhile they were picking up hints from A. G. H. MacPherson who arrived here Friday after a 9000-mile voyage in a 32-foot yacht. MacPherson, who says his voyage to Spain, Madeira, South America and the West Indies since last September was "unexciting," intends to set out soon for the Azores and a Mediterranean cruise that will take him to Palestine.

Saves a Life Loses New Boots

NEW YORK, May 27—(CP)—Mike Carr, 30, of the Seaman's Church Institute, sold blood in a transfusion today for enough money to buy a new pair of shoes. Emerging happily from the store with his new footwear in place, he sauntered toward the East River and arrived there just in time to see Thomas Ryan, 60, also of the Seaman's Church Institute, floundering around in the water. Carr removed his new shoes and placed them neatly on the pier before he dove to the rescue. When he came back the shoes were gone.

Farewell Presentation

An event, replete with significance, on Thursday evening transpired in the Brunswick House, Kensington. The members of the Kensington Sub Division of the Catholic Women's League convened and were most hospitably welcomed by the hostess, Mrs. Euphemia Lynds.

Mr. James L. Saunders was named to preside, and specified in neat terms, that the guests had taken advantage of the privilege to call in order to bid farewell to Mrs. Lynds who is departing from Kensington, and will again take up residence in Charlottetown. Mrs. James Pendergast, with an ease and grace that emphasize action, read the following address:

Kensington, P. E. I.
May 22, 1935

Dear Mrs. Lynds: We your friends gathered here tonight, who have partaken of your hospitality so frequently during the past year, could not let you leave without some expression of our appreciation of your kindness. It is only when one of our neighbors is about to leave our community that we realize how much more of that person's society we might have enjoyed. Alas! too many of us are caught in the mad pursuit of worldly goods and we scarcely take time for the social amenities of life. If we could but learn to estimate our wealth by the number of our friendships, earned and retained, how much happier we would be. We should all practice the sentiment expressed in the following lines by an unknown author.

"Let's praise each other, now and then,
Give credit where it's due,
Let's help the downcast heart again,
To tackle life anew,
Let's pay the debts of life we owe,
Forget the debts of hate,
Let's say the kindest words we know
Before it is too late."

You have opened your home to us for some most enjoyable social functions, and we felt that we must have one more pleasant evening together, before your departure for Charlottetown.

We hope you will be spared for many years to put into practice your inherent qualities of kindness and hospitality to those with whom you associate.

To show our appreciation we ask you to accept this token of our friendship, and our heartfelt wishes for your future happiness.

Signed by Mrs. James Pendergast, on behalf of the Catholic Women's League.

Mr. Lynds, in terms that were concise and expressive, accepted the address and the accompanying gift with every evidence of gratitude, and most kindly invited the "guests" to renew acquaintance at her home during visits to the city.

Brief and pointed remarks were made by Rev. Reginald McDonald, Mrs. James Saunders, Edward Pendergast, Albert McLellan, James Pendergast, Mrs. Keefe and J. A. Ready.

All speakers heartily endorsed the sentiments so tersely expressed in the address, and gratefully accepted the invitation to renew acquaintance when in Charlottetown.

A few games of whist were enjoyed, a delicious lunch was served, and departing, all wished Mrs. Lynds many most happy years of life in Charlottetown.—Y

HEALTH

THIRST

The cry of the wounded for water is one of the horrors of war which impresses itself upon the minds of all who hear it. Thirst may be described as a dryness or sticky feeling of the mouth and, more particularly, the back of the throat. He who suffers from a severe thirst is pictured with a parched and burning throat, unable to swallow or to speak except with difficulty.

Thirst follows upon haemorrhage because, during haemorrhage, fluid is drawn from the tissues to maintain the volume of the blood stream. Profuse sweat, diarrhoea and diabetes lead to thirst, as these conditions exhaust the fluids of the body.

Those who sleep with their mouths open awaken with dry throats. The air passing in and out dries the mucous membranes which line the mouth and throat.

Long speeches are apt to be dry for the speaker as well as for his audience. While speaking, most of the breathing is done through the mouth. The glass of water on the speaker's table is a recognition of the fact that speakers' throats become dry.

Fear, or other emotional stress, may cause the mouth to become dry and the tongue to feel as if it were fixed to the roof of the mouth. Many a public speaker needs a glass of water, because stage-fright rather than speaking has dried his mouth.

These examples serve to show us that thirst arises from those conditions which make the throat dry, and that emotional factors may have the same effect. When thirst develops as a result of the reduction of body fluids, the sense of thirst arises from a dry mouth and throat due to a reduction in the flow of saliva.

Saliva has a number of important functions, including the digestion of starches and sugars. Not the least important of the functions of saliva is the lubrication of the mouth and throat. This is essential to speech and to the swallowing of food. The flow of saliva is ample as long as the body fluids are sufficient, but it falls when the body fluids fall below normal.

Thirst is an unpleasant sensation. It would appear that fish are not likely to suffer from thirst but that air-breathers are. Thirst serves notice that the body needs water. If we do not blunt our sense of thirst by failing to heed it unless the sensation becomes unpleasant, the sensation of thirst should serve as a satisfactory guide to the fluid needs of the body.

Questions concerning health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 184 College St., Toronto, will be answered personally by letter.
