BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

(By Thornton W. Burgess)

PAYING GUESTS

Most welcome guests are always they who in some manner pay their way. —Paddy the Beaver.

Paddy the Beaver and Mrs. Paddy were making themselves thoroughly at home in the small pond deep in the Green Forest. Had you seen them there you might have thought it was their own private pond. It wasn't. It belonged wholly to two young Beavers who were making a home for themselves and a place in the Great World. Paddy and Mrs. Paddy, who were homeless, having been driven from their home up on the Great Mountain by the Red Terror called fire, had made themselves at home as if they always had lived there when really they were only guests of the younger Beavers. But they were paying guests.

"These young folks have made a good start, but they have much to do to get ready for winter," said Mrs. Paddy after they had looked over the pond, the dam, the house and beginning of the food pile out in the water.

"So what?" replied Paddy. "We might stay here for a while and help them," said Mrs. Paddy. "My dear, we also have work to do to get ready for winter, and we haven't even started yet. We haven't even found a place where we can start," replied Paddy.

"Perhaps we can spend the winter here with these young folks and look for a new home in the spring. We could help them much, for like most young folks, they have a lot to learn but don't know it yet," said Mrs. Paddy.

Paddy shook his head. He shook it hard. "It won't do," said he. "I don't see why not," retorted Mrs. Paddy. "When they see what a lot of help we are and can that they'll be glad to have us stay."

"Of course they will at first," agreed Paddy. "Later they will be asking themselves whose home this is anyway. It will be too late for us to move on then; we'll have to stay."

"But it really will be their home just as much as if we never had come here," protested Mrs. Paddy. "True, my dear, but it won't seem so either to them or to us. Besides, we would be robbing them," replied Paddy.

"Robbing them?" cried Mrs. Paddy. "How you talk! What in the world would we be robbing them of?"

"Robbing them!" cried Mrs. Paddy. "How you talk!"

The most precious thing any one anywhere can have," replied Paddy.

"What?" demanded Mrs. Paddy. "Independence," replied Paddy. "Paddy looked unconvinced and Paddy continued, 'When you do for young folks things that they should do for themselves you take from them more than you give them. You cheat them of independence.'"

"Pooh!" The poor things have so much to learn about how to do things," said Mrs. Paddy. "They will learn faster through their own mistakes than by what we may tell or show them. Look at that dam over there. It needs to be made longer, and they are doing this but at the wrong end, and by they will find it out for themselves and know better than to make such a mistake again. While we are here we will help them all we can, but we won't stay longer than we have to. While I look for a place for ourselves you can help them finish their house, cut trees and make that dam longer," said Paddy.

"At the wrong end?" asked Mrs. Paddy slyly.

And this is just what they did do. They did their part and more of the work of getting ready for winter, thus becoming paying guests. And every day or night Paddy found time to slip away to "look around," as he said. It was a pleasing arrangement all around. The young Beavers were helping the older ones by sharing their home for the time being, and the older ones were helping the others with the work.

THE WRONG RAISE

As a rule, the more a player bids, the better hand he should have. There are, however, conventional exceptions — one of which may be found in the following typical deal:

South dealer. East-West vulnerable.

♠ K J 10 6	♠ 5
♥ A Q J 7	♥ K 6 4 3
♦ 10 6 5 4	♦ J 7
♣ 9	♣ K J 8 5

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1♠	Pass	4♠	Pass

South made two overtricks, even though he found the heart king "wrong."

It was North's improper response to the opening bid that was responsible for this failure to reach (or at least to investigate) the slam. A double-jump raise, such as North gave, is not as strong as a single jump, i. e., a raise from one spade to three, or from one heart to three hearts. The reason for this is that the one-spade — four-spade sequence has considerable value as a pure pre-emptive, or shut-out, and is therefore reserved for that purpose. It indicates a hand very long (but not necessarily strong) in trump support but with little, if anything, on the side. This, of course, means that the hand has little defense against an opposing contract—hence the need for a
