HALLAM'S WEEKLY MARKET REPORT—HIDES, SKINS, WOOL, JUNK.

TORONTO, Feb. 11.

Copper, heavy, 11c to 12c. Light 10c to 10-3/4c. Zinc 2-1/2 to 4c.

RAW FUR MARKET.

The increased prices has caused a large amount of raw furs to be marketed, some dealers feel that the late advance in prices was more than the market justified, but at the present, we cannot see any reason for that feeling. Manufacturers report that the merchants are ordering on a very conservative basis, owing to the uncertainty as to conditions next year.

UNION OF ALLIES VERY MUCH GREATER

LONDON, Feb. 8.—The official account of the conference between British, Russian and French Finance Ministers cannot be taken as a full revelation of the decisions arrived at, although it was probably as full as it was intended to be. Lately there has been a good deal of talk on an international loan by all three powers. In conjunction, such rumors, although not receiving much credence in best financial circles have had a weakening effect upon the present British war loans. The joint loan is to cover advances made to other powers. It is good news too. Allies are to act jointly in purchasing from neutral countries. The conference, in fact, is regarded as an excellent proof that union of three great powers, in financial sense, is stronger rather than weaker at end of six months war strain.

TALES TOLD BY MEN IN THE FIGHTING LINES ON LAND AND ON SEA

Our Cardiff correspondent writes:— Welshmen who have returned from the fighting in the Canopus, which was in the inner harbor, which they have taken part. Here is one from Sergeant Pugh, of the South Wales Borderers, a typical Welsh fighter of Abercynon, a colliery district. Pugh, who is recovering from a wound received during the distinguished Conduct Medal for gallantry at Ypres. Describing the fighting, he says:—

"We were literally blown out of our trenches by the enemy's artillery, which was then only 300 yards away from us. We lost our gallant Major Lawrence whilst the other sergeants in our platoon being laid low I had to take charge. That night we were relieved by the 60th Rifles and we fell back about two miles to the dug outs. Then the following day an order came to retake which had to be in the meantime being lost and the Borderers, the Queens, the Gloucesters and the Welsh regiments went into the charge together. In the twilight with fixed bayonets we went on for about 2,000 yards and had twice as far to go again, when I fell but had no more wind to go on. Private Bob Black, who was also exhausted, stayed with me. We had been there about ten minutes, when I heard a machine gun being fired, not far off, and I spotted the place where it was concealed. It was in a bush on the roadside. We proceeded to the spot very cautiously and having ascertained that there was no back door, we decided to rush the house by the only entrance at the front. We forced it open with a bang and found there in the kitchen a German officer, who said something in Welsh, and I, who had lost no time in making sure of his work, and having attended to another German soldier, we went upstairs, with bayonets still fixed and to our surprise there were concealed eleven Prussian Guards. We accounted for 13 in all by the use of our rifles. I fetched the machine gun back with us too. Like myself Bob Black received the D. C. M. but what pleased us most was the fact that we had avenged the death of poor Major Lawrence."

CANADIANS DETECTED SPY.

Writing from Jellabahad Barracks, Tidsworth, Wilts, England, under date of January 22, a member of the Nova Scotia regiment says:—

"Private Leitch and Lucas, members of the Toronto Company of the Nova Scotia Highlanders were instrumental in causing the arrest of a suspect spy at Bath during the second week of January. The men were on week-end leave and housed in a hotel of aristocratic Bath, when they observed suspicious signalling from a nearby window during the 'wee sma' hours.' It took these two Canucks about two minutes to get in touch with one Major Wrigley, of the local Safety League. He obtained telegraphic permission for the two Canadian soldiers to outstay their leave and a redoubt of their investigation and activity an arrest has been made which is believed to be an important one."

GAELIC SPIRIT IRREPRESSIBLE.

The Gaelic spirit is not deserted. Sgt. T. Cahill under fire. He writes: "The Red Cross girls with their purity faces and their sweet ways are as good men as most of us. They are not supposed to venture into the firing line at all, but they get there all the same, and a devil of one of us durst turn them away. Mike Clancy is that droll with his larking and bamboozling the Germans that he makes us nearly split our sides laughing at him and his ways. Yesterday he got a stick and put a cap on it, so that he could hold the front trench just like a man and the Germans kept shooting away at it until they must have used up tons of ammunition."

"BUSINESS AS USUAL."

Mike Clancy was not the only practical joker in the trenches, as the following from a wounded soldier shows: "Our men have just had their papers from home, and have noted among other things, that 'Business as Usual' is the motto of patriotic shopkeepers. In last week's hard fighting the Wiltsires, holding an exposed position, ran out of ammunition, and had to suspend firing until a party brought fresh supplies across the open under a heavy fire. Then the wag of the regiment, a Cockney, produced a biscuit tin with 'Business as usual' crudely printed on it, and set up before the trenches as a hint to the Germans that the fight could now be resumed on more equal terms. Finally the tin had to be taken in because it was proving such a good target for the German riflemen, but the joker was struck twice in rescuing it."

A MIDSHIPMAN'S LETTER.

A thrilling description of the fighting of the Falkland Islands has been sent by Midshipman D. N. M. Williams, a Cardiff boy, to his mother. Midshipman Williams, who is serving on board H. M. S. Kent says: "Our intention was to coal here as soon as possible and proceed at once to Port Stanley. We knew the Germans were hereabout somewhere, and we thought they were in the Magellan Straits, where we were going. We would have most probably picked up the Japanese fleet over there. I had just finished my breakfast and was taking a boat ashore to get stores, but just as I was going over the side the commander said I did better see the command of the Canopus, which was in the inner harbor. When I arrived on board the Canopus her after turret gun went off. The Canopus fired five shots, and the fourth shot hit the Scharnhorst. I went up to the main deck and then saw the top of the hill behind it and had a good view of what happened in the beginning. The Kent headed the line going out, followed by the Glasgow, the Invincible, the Indefatigable and the Carnarvon. The three German cruisers, the Dresden, the Leipzig and the Scharnhorst got ahead of the Kent, and rounded off the Scharnhorst and the Gaisneau, which had got together. The Kent, coming up to the Leipzig, gave her a few 'bills' and went on, leaving the Carnarvon and the Glasgow to finish her off. The Kent soon came up with the Nurnberg, and the Nurnberg opened fire, seeing that she could not evade us. The firing was very good on both sides. They found our range very quickly. We started firing at 6.26 p.m., and signalled them to surrender, as the Nurnberg was in a sinking condition, but they refused, so we continued firing until 7 o'clock. Many of her crew were on the quarter deck, and one of the last shells dropped amongst them killed at least fifty of their men. According to one of the prisoners, many of the crew were killed already. Her fore turret was knocked away in the coming tower early in the engagement. Their captain was killed early in the action.

The worst part of the whole thing was the picking up of their men after she went down. She heeled over to the starboard side. Our foretopgallant mast was blown away, and we had 21 fair sized holes. Luckily the gun room was all right. The wireless aerial was wrecked, owing to a marine topgallant mast coming down, and consequently we could not get into communication with the other ships as the Kent was out of sight about 150 miles from the island. We were also very short of coal and had to burn all woodwork such as ladders. We would only have had two killed if a shell had not burst outside A.3 casement. A Lyddite shell burst outside there, and the flames came in, burning all the men. The flames then went down the ammunition house into the ammunition passages. A marine picked up some burning lyddite and threw it overboard. Another marine in the passage picked up some cartridges and took them out of the way of the flames and brought a hose to play on the fire. Six were killed and eleven wounded.

INTERESTING LETTER FROM CAPT. WALKER

The following letter from Capt. J. S. Walker, formerly of the Charlottetown Police Force was read at the City Council meeting on Monday night:

No. 2 Stationary Hospital, First Canadian Expeditionary Force, Le Touquet, France, Jan. 8th, 1915. To His Worship, the Mayor and City Council, Charlottetown, P. E. I. Canada. Gentlemen, with pleasure that at this particular season I extend my greetings to yourself and honorable body. As you are all no doubt already aware the unit to which I am attached is now in France, namely that of Number Two Canadian Stationary Hospital, Lieut. Colonel A. T. Shillington, of Ottawa, Commanding.

After a short sojourn at Salisbury Plains, we were ordered to proceed to the continent during the early part of November last. Since that time we have equipped and fully established a hospital at this point. The town of Le Touquet, where we are situated, and have taken over a large hotel, is a sea-side summer resort in times of peace, and is patronized by some of the leading people of Europe. The surrounding country is old and quiet in appearance. The castle and the town are of considerable age, but centuries ago, but would as a matter of fact offer poor defence as far as withstanding modern warfare is concerned.

My duties as Quartermaster for the corps take me daily into the city of Le Touquet, a distance of twenty miles. We had our own carts, including rations, equipment, clothing, coal and general issue from the Military Stores there by means of large motor truck conveyances. The roads are the best that can be seen any place in the world. They are in fact perfect and appear to be built of concrete. The climate is inclined to be mild, in fact much more so than England, particularly at this time of the year. Just now we are experiencing the usual wet season, with some times a slight fall of hail. Occasionally we have our own fine days, like our spring in Canada.

The "Golf Hotel" which we occupy for our hospital is a very large and commodious hostelry, which caters solely to high-class tourist trade when open. Now of course all such places are closed. We have hospital accommodations for over four hundred sick and wounded patients at a time and have up to the present been kept very busy handling numbers as they are sent from the firing line. Our Christmas spread was quite good, considering this is war time. The patients with us were all given treats and delicacies and we made every thing as happy and pleasant for them as we possibly could. Before concluding I wish to extend to Your Worship and the members of the Council my very best wishes and compliments for the season of 1915, and remain,

Yours very sincerely, JAMES S. WALKER, Captain Q. M.

DAILY SELECTIONS FOR READERS OF THE GUARDIAN

DON'T SAY IT.

You can't always help your thoughts but every man should be master of his own lips. Because the Devil gets into the back kitchen is no reason why he should be entertained in the parlor or made to feel at home on the front doorstep. Vile-tongued abusive scolds are often excused as "not bad at heart," which is all rubbish. If the villainous does not come from the heart where on earth does it come from? Don't make any mistake; the goods in the window are always a fair example of what is in the store, usually much better. When you find a man exhausting the vocabulary of vituperation on his neighbor, you may put it down that he is not an angel himself.

How they point our memories back To the hasty words and actions Strewn along our backward track! How those little hands remind us, As in snowy days they lie, Not to scatter thorns—but roses— For our reaping by and by!

CHAPLAIN LEADS RUSSIAN CHARGE

PETROGRAD, Feb. 6.—Not for nothing does every regimental standard in the Russian army bear the text, "God is on our side," and when the "Gods go down" in a fight it is often the regimental chaplain, who, with the standard in his left hand and the cross held aloft in his right, leads the troops forward to the attack. Only the other day during one of the Russian attacks on the Borgilmo front a chaplain which had lost most of its officers was led on by the regimental chaplain. He was, of course, absolutely unarmed, and was wearing an ordinary soldier's overcoat. He brought the men back after as gannant a bayonet charge as any of those innumerable ones made in this troubled section of the Polish front.

On the Russian Christmas Eve in the trenches near Goumine, where the opposing lines were very near together, every effort was used to dissuade a priest from attempting to hold service, but without avail. The service began, accompanied by beautiful Russian songs. The German soldiers opposed to this section of the trenches ended in silence. Seven minutes after the conclusion of the service, when the Germans were satisfied it was over, firing was resumed as usual. The next morning a stone, wrapped in paper and attached to a string, was flung into the Russian trenches. The paper contained Christmas congratulations. In Russian the words, "Pull the string." A pull brought across the narrow space dividing the trenches a parcel containing some cigars and a chunk of cheese with more good wishes.

Advantage was taken of the Russian holiday feeling in another section of trenches a good deal farther north. The Germans sent over the message: "We have got some coffee, come and have a drink." This kind of thing is strictly forbidden, but the Russians were persuaded that it would be all right when the Germans proposed to send hostages over for the safe return of the Russians. Fifteen men went over to have a drink of coffee and fifteen Germans duly crawled, unarmed, as hostages into the Russian trenches. The Russians never came back, being kept as prisoners of war, and when the officers and a doctor overhauled the German hostages all were found to be suffering from typhoid fever.

SOLDIERS' HOMES FOR CANADIANS

MONTREAL, Feb. 6.—A project to establish soldiers' homes in the chief cities of the Dominion, is now under way and has the support of the Fenian Veterans' Association. The idea was inspired at the outbreak of the present war by a number of persons charitably inclined, who foresee the return of many a maimed and helpless man to Canada before the end of the war. It is pointed out that the very least the country owes these heroes is the guarantee of food, clothing and quarters, for the rest of their lives. The supporters of the project think it would be a source of comfort for these veterans to be together when they could discuss the days of their youth and strength, and comfort each other in their decline.
