Scouts' Santas Follow Kiddies To Newer Homes

OTTAWA, Nov. 24—(CP)—The Boy Scouts' toy shops across Canada which for the past 10 years have brought joy to the hearts of thousands of Canadian children on Christmas morning, will again be in full swing this year to play Santa Claus to less fortunate kiddies of the Dominion. It is announced by Dominion Headquarters of the Boy Scouts Association here that this movement for "Happyfying," which has developed steadily since 1924, will this year receive more concentrated effort and attention than ever before in order to meet increased demands.

"The need for this movement appears to be greater than ever before," said Commissioner John A. Stiles, at Scout headquarters. "Since 1924 our boys, seeking to do their good turn, have thrown heart and soul into this work in ever-increasing numbers and we hope to play Santa Claus this Christmas to well over 100,000 young Canadians."

There may be scoffers who doubt the existence of a Santa Claus, but it would be difficult to convince any of the half million children who, thanks to this Scout activity, have found there is such a benevolent spirit. In many cases it was despite the heart-breaking regrets of their parents that "they were afraid Santa Claus would not be able to get around this far this year."

Four Canadian Boy Scout toy shops first were operated in 1924—in Calgary, Ottawa, Vancouver and Halifax. Old toys were gathered, mended, given a fresh coat of paint, and distributed to more than 2,400 children, almost entirely in the local districts.

Following year the toy shops increased in number to 13, with additions at Three Rivers, Sherbrooke, Perth and Owen Sound in the East; and Stratmore, Carleton Place, and Vanover in the West. Names of needy families were obtained through charitable and welfare organizations in the various cities, and more than 10,000 children received toys from the Boy Scout Santa Claus.

The movement was becoming national in its scope. Among other incidents the Three Rivers, Que., troop shipped 50 packages of toys to Rev. W. W. Smith for distribution among the children of Magdalen Islands. There was one lone youngster in the Central Alberta Sanatorium, 10 miles from Calgary, but a special messenger from the 10th Red Cross met him at the station and brought him to the city for Christmas morning.

In addition to the work previously done, the Scouts in 1926, undertook to play Santa Claus to the children of newcomers to Canada, many of whom otherwise would have been forced to the conclusion Santa Claus had stayed back home in Europe. Accordingly, many immigrant children at Hamilton, Ontario, and Vancouver, B.C., were among the 15,000 who received toys from 23 shops in operation that year.

In 1933 there were toy shops operating in 175 centres in some cities. The 80,000 children who received toys more than 9,000 were children of parents who had been rehabilitated on the land following the hard knocks during the depression years.

All modes of distribution are called into use in delivery of the toys. The boys work in trains, automobiles, by sleigh and foot. Even the milkman on their routes are pressed into service. Last year the thrill of their lives was handed to kiddies on home-steads north of Saskatoon when Pilot Mayson of the Saskatoon branch of the Saskatchewan toy shop, came down from the clouds to play Santa Claus to them.

Publisher's Widow Has Disappeared

(C. P. By Guardian's Special Wire)
PORT HOPE, Ont., Nov. 24.—Police were notified tonight of the disappearance of Mrs. Donald Wilson, wife of the late publisher and editor of the Port Hope Guide who was believed by authorities to have been a victim of poison.

Blake Symonds, foster-father of Mrs. Wilson, told police Mrs. Wilson had disappeared and has taken her child. He said the woman was missed about eight or nine o'clock last night.

Provincial Constable William Carey of Cobourg, who is investigating the death of Wilson more than three weeks ago, was informed of the disappearance and authorities launched a search.

Except the bare revelation that the woman was missing police had nothing to say, although they appeared anxious over the latest development in a case that has concentrated police activity here.

Shortly after her husband's death Mrs. Wilson went to the home of her foster-father to reside. Yesterday Provincial Police conferred with the Symonds and Mrs. Wilson as they continued their inquiry into the editor's death. Police refused to divulge the conversation.

Today authorities announced an inquest into Wilson's death would be held Nov. 30, unless unforeseen developments occurred.

Wilson, 34 years of age, died on the morning of Oct. 28. The previous night he had returned to his home, eaten a meal which included some tinned salmon, and then left for his office. He later became ill and was rushed to hospital where he died in agony. Contents of his stomach were examined by Dr. Jocelyn Rogers, Provincial Analyst who announced pure arsenic had been found. Police later said there was enough poison in the man's stomach to kill 10 men.

The man's wife was reported to have declared she did not believe her husband had taken his own life and police also took this view and started a search in the hopes of finding where the arsenic was purchased. Authorities, resenting during their inquiry, conferred with friends of the young editor and were understood to have learned he was in good health and quite vigorous.

As the investigation continued it was considered probable the poison might come from the salmon until Dr. Rogers' report was obtained.

"PURPLE WOMAN" GETS WORSE, TURNS RED

KANSAS CITY, November 25.—Mrs. Edith Perry, the General Hospital's "purple woman," turned red tonight and physicians renewed their efforts to diagnose her case.

Physicians said the transformation of the 32-year-old housewife's body from purple to clear red was accompanied by an extensive scaling of the skin. Her fluctuating temperature reached a high of 102 degrees. She was reported to be in a better position to dispose of her pelts due to lower cost of raising the animals. A considerable competition has arisen for the Canadian product from foreign sources of supply. Norway this year it is expected will market some 75,000 silver fox pelts. Russia, Sweden and other European countries are also putting pelts on the market, he said, and all endeavour to dispose of their pelts before the Canadian skins arrive in Europe. Amsterdam, in Holland, will this year for the first time hold a silver pelt auction. A great quantity of fox pelts from the Maritime Provinces pass through Moncton each year, states F. M. Smith, Superintendent of the Canadian National Express and justified themselves. This court, before which she had fought for him, must in a moment dismiss him.

"Order," commanded a voice sternly. "There will be order in the court."

She saw Mr. Ellison and then Mr. Clarke. How pale he was! She raised herself to tiptoes and succeeded in discerning, however, that his right sleeve was pinned and his coat buttoned over his right arm. Mr. Ellison stayed at his right, carefully avoiding jostle against him.

The judge recognized them and spoke to the jury. Immediately Andreopolis, the foreman replied, reporting disagreement. The judge's voice again; other voices. Joan Daisy stood down from tiptoes, losing sight of Mr. Clarke except as she caught glimpses of his pale face as others between him and her moved aside. She heard the judge's voice distinctly and knew that the jury was dismissed.

"Every one turned, then, to Mr. Clarke.

"Your honor, the State asks leave," he said in his clear voice, "to nolle prosequi."

Joan Daisy, on tiptoes to see him better, caught at Herman Elmen's sleeve. "What does he mean?" she whispered.

"That's Latin," whispered Herman. "Latin for—"

Latin, she thought of herself, in her excitement, and not knowing it for the usual form, she imagined it an affection of Mr. Clarke, and she was thrown for the instant into her old hostility to him. Now she heard him speaking to the judge in English.

"The motion is allowed," announced the judge and Mr. Clarke turned away.

"That is all," said Max Elmen's triumphant tones. "You are free."

"Order!" commanded the loud, stern voice. "There will be order in the court!"

Some one kissed her. She was not his mother; for his mother was beside Joan Daisy, it was Lola Nesson who kissed him and who clung to him when he turned to them. Two other girls clasped him, and a man—it was Weigal—grabbed her hands. Joan Daisy dropped her tiptoes and waited with hot waves of blood warming her face and limbs; Ke's mother waited, also for these others to release him. But they did not and he could not or did not care to put them off, so they all pressed together to the doors.

CANADA'S UNSOLVED MYSTERIES
(By Sullivan Bruce)
(CANADIAN PRESS STAFF WRITER)

HAMILTON, Nov. 24.—(CP)—Eliel Kinrade met her death in the dining-room of the family home under the shadow of Hamilton mountain Feb. 25, 1909, by shot wounds inflicted by her own hands.

So decided a jury after 12 weeks of probably the most intensive inquiry Canada has ever known. That verdict has stood for 25 years, sum total of official pronouncement as to guilty persons in Hamilton's historic crime mystery.

The jury added the rider: "Owing to the fact of the unreliability of some of the evidence produced the Crown is especially requested to continue its investigation." The authorities after the lapse of a quarter century can only repeat "nothing new."

There were no arrests and no one was even charged with the crime. But the long inquest, involving many sessions, was attended by some of the sensations of a first-class murder trial. The mysterious aspects of the crime plunged the Hamilton of that time into a veritable nightmare. Public interest brought the story to the front pages of newspapers all over the country for weeks.

Eliel Kinrade was the 25-year-old daughter of Thomas L. Kinrade, principal of one of the city's schools and owner of considerable property. The members of the family were prominent in various social organizations.

Eliel and her sister Florence, two years younger, were alone in the home at 3.20 in the afternoon of the tragedy. Their mother had gone to police headquarters to request protection from a tramp who, charged by Moncton, was being held in the city beyond endurance. Suddenly the serenity of the residential district was shattered by Florence rushing to a neighbor's crying: "Eliel! Eliel! She's shot six times!"

Police found the young woman dead on the floor, her left breast riddled with revolver bullets, fired at close range. Florence told how an unknown man had pushed into the house demanding money. Afraid of his threats she went upstairs to get $10, on the way warning her sister to look herself in her room. Eliel did not heed the warning; she went downstairs to her death. Florence returned and handed the intruder the money. He made his escape as she discovered her sister's body in the dining room.

The attorney-general appointed George Tate Blackstone, K. C., one of the cleverest cross-examiners of his day, as special investigator of the inquest. One of the witnesses collapsed in the box under his grueling questioning. All Hamilton was tense with the excitement of the case and in Toronto, 40 miles away, extras were leased at 11 o'clock at night to catch theatre crowds with the news of the inquest.

The following officers were then elected: President, Mrs. Melvin McLeod; Vice President, Mrs. E. E. McLeod; Secretary, Miss Ella Semple; Auditors, Miss Ella Laird and Mrs. A. B. Stevenson; Executive, Mrs. J. B. Dickson, Miss Ella Laird, Mrs. R. W. Stevenson, Mrs. M. R. Perry, Dickson; Organist, Miss Ruth Dickson.

Mrs. M. McLeod invited the members to her home for the December meeting when roll call will be answered with Christmas suggestions.

A programme of music, contest and readings; and a dainty lunch was enjoyed by all.

Australia Spends Millions For Gas

Until 1935 mineral oils were practically unused in Australia. Today the major oil companies employ in Australia 10,000 men and have an aggregate sales bill of $125,000,000. Altogether 20,000 Australian-made gasoline pumps have been installed at a cost of $13,000,000.

The stability of this industry generally is indicated by the fact that $1,225,000,000 has been invested in the motor and allied activities. The annual cost of the maintenance alone of motor vehicles amounts to $18,000,000. For the five years ended 1932, $450,000,000 was expended by consumers in Australia on gasoline alone.
