ONTARIO MOTHER HELPS DAUGHTER

Mothers—watch your daughter's health. From the time she reaches the age of twelve until womanhood is established she needs your care and advice. Many women have suffered years of ill-health through lack of such care during this time.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a splendid medicine for girls and women. For nearly fifty years it has been helping mothers and daughters. Let it help you and your daughter.

Hamilton, Ontario.—"When my daughter was thirteen and until she was fifteen she suffered every month so that she could hardly move around the house and when she would have the pains in school she would have to be carried home. Besides the pains and the irregularity she also had headache, dizzy and faint spells, and soreness in her back. I saw your advertisement in the 'Hamilton Spectator' and got Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for her. She does not have the least bit of trouble now, and we both recommend your medicine. She works in a candy-shop now and seems well and strong."—Mrs. I. P. CLAUSE, 76 Walnut St., South Hamilton, Ontario.

MYSTERY IS CLEARED OF $29,000 ROBBERY

MONTREAL, Sept. 11.—The Dominion Textile paymaster hold-up mystery was cleared up in the courts today when one of the men held on the charge of assisting in the robbery of $29,000, on July 7, turned King's evidence and disclosed to Judge Cusson the whole story. The accused before the court was John Vulcuff, from Thorold, Ont., and the chief evidence was given by James Thomas, alias "The Toledo Stool-pigeon," whose trial on the same charge is fixed for September 20.

The evidence of Thomas was that a man named Penoff for whom the police are still searching planned the coup, and they went to Vulcuff at Thorold and got the use of his car, which was driven to Montreal and used for the get-away after the hold-up at the railway crossing. The proceeds of the robbery were divided up by Vulcuff, who took $9,000 as his share, while the remainder was split up in an equal amount between Thomas, Penoff, a man named Russo and another man who resided in Thorold.

The case was taken en delibere by Judge Cusson.

Islander Has Arrived Safely

Among the passengers listed on the steamer Victoria from Nome is Capt. E. T. McIntyre, trader and explorer who is on his way to the states to secure another outfit with which to invade the Siberian coast and Anydir country, on a trading and prospecting trip.

The outfit under the command of Capt. McIntyre, who is a son of the late ex-governor McIntyre of Charlottetown and brother of Mrs. Dr. A H. Smallwood, Souris, failed to reach its destination on account of being wrecked near East Cape the schooner Teddy Bear, being driven high on shore during a heavy gale. Refuge had been sought on the lee side of the Cape the small ship doing nicely. A sudden shift in the wind together with added violence, drove the small craft high and dry on the beach. Unable to return the Teddy to water the party was compelled to establish a camp on board, and, owing to a shortage of fuel the living conditions were anything but pleasant during the long winter. The party eventually arrived at Nome about the first of July making the trip by sail.

While in Seward Capt. McIntyre was required to undergo an operation to his right hand for the removal of a 22 calibre bullet, shot into his hand 22 years ago. Capt. Gillis, of the transport Buford performed the operation The missile was found partly dissolved by chemical action of the blood and nearly two teaspoonfuls of sugar of lead was taken from its lodgement place. The Captain is keeping the small chunk of lead as a souvenir.

It is the intention of Capt. McIntyre to return north as soon as he has selected a new trading outfit next year. He left for the south on the Victoria.

THE STORY OF A WOMAN'S TRANSFORMATION

By Marion Rubincam

BUD DOES NOT COME

Chapter 33

"I don't know what you've done to yourselves, but you certainly are two different people," Bud said one evening.

"It's my new dress,', Violet laughed.

"Aunt Enid made it. Isn't she clever? I look more like the other girls in the class now and I don't feel so——well, so conspicuous.

"You look fine," Bud agreed. I don't know about your clothes though. You always look good to me.'

Violet's cheeks turned vivid pink at the compliment awkward as it was.

"But Aunt Enid hasn't new clothes on and she looks different. She looks 10 years younger than she did back home." Bud said, regarding me suddenly with more serious attention than he had for a long time.

"Thank you George. I'd rather hear that than anything else,' I told him. And indeed, it was quite the most wonderful thing ever said to me.

For I began to see, at last a way out of the darkness—the darkness of ignorance and bigotry and selfishness that surrounded me all my life, from the time I was a young girl. It wasn't the cold cream it wasn't the pretty home, it wasn't anything material—it was because I was FREE, for for the first time in my life—free to follow my own will. The first steps were timid enough, yet the first are the bravest to take. And I had taken them.

I liked to leave Violet and Bud alone, part of the time at least. Much as they liked me, my presence was a restraint—For Bud talked more freely and Violet chattered more gaily when I was not there. So this evening I borrowed his paper and went into the other room. The paper was usually a great adventure for me. I had been working so hard that I had not had time to read very much.

But this evening my mind wandered from columns of news. Scraps of talk came to me through the open door.

"You're to be raised next week? Violet said.

"Yes it's promised for next week. To $18.'

"That's wonderful! There was sincere admiration in the girls voice. I could picture her looking up at him as she said it. her eyes shining blue with all the love that was behind them, her cheeks the adorable pink that came and ebbed in quick response to her emotions, her hair a shining mass of purest gold where the light from the lamp fell on it.

I wondered whether Bud appreciate the picture. I doubted it, for his voice showed when he answered that his eyes were turned in to himself and did not take in the beauty of the girl.

"It's not so wonderful. I really should have $20.

"Twenty! But that's a lot of money."

"Not much. Of course, back in Henly Falls, where there's no place to go and nothing to spend money on, it might be a lot. But in the city, it's not enough to keep even one fellow living decently."

"But you can save now," Violet insisted. "You live on $15 now; you can easily save the other three every week. That's $150 in a year.'

A hundred and fifty." Bud scoffed. "I could buy 20 shares of Torch Oil with that—after a year That's nothing. I want enough to buy a block of stock right now.'

"What's Torch Oil? Is it like kerosene ' Vi asked

"No, little country girl,' Bud's voice was teasing. It's a stock, just going on the Curb. The Curb is a part of the Stock Market, and shares go up and down, and some people make fortunes and some people lose. This stock is a winner.'

"How do you know?' Violet was often practical minded.

"Pete says so. He's on the inside "I don't know Pete.'

"He's working in another broker' office down on Wall Street. I meet him sometimes at lunch. We went out together last night. He's going to put me on to all the good things. He knows about them.

Violet in those days had as vast an ignorance of the ups and downs of Wall Street as I had. And she was enough in love to believe everything Bud said.

"Then you'll make money besides what you earn in the office she asked, timid of her lack of knowledge in these matters.

"Heaps," said Bud easily. "And when I do I'll buy you a diamond ring —or two of them."

There was a little sound like a surpressed, "Oh" that I knew came from the girl. A diamond ring meant to her—being engaged There was no open understanding between these two. and I was glad of that. They were both so young But secretly each knew that when Bud made enough money they would become engaged. And the diamond was the symbol——

"I'd like to meet Pete," Vi said "I have a date with him tomorrow I'll bring him down," Bud promised.

The next evening, Violet finished her work early and combed her hair in its prettiest fashion and then we sat down to await the arrival of our two guests. Vi was going to serve tea and some little cakes I had made that afternoon. Eight o-clock came, and then nine, and the boys did not show up. Nine-thiry, and Violet's face was white. She was sure of an acident. Ten o'clock we gave them up and a little later went to bed.

Hours after I awoke for no apparent reason. But so strong was the sympathy between the girl and myself, that I knew I awoke because she was unhappy. I called her name, and when she answered her voice was full of tears.

is a most satisfying drink.

Delicious flavor and aroma, beautifully attractive color, purity high quality;—the distinguishing characteristics of high-grade cocoa,—"Baker's."

The heads of the naval and military medical departments in England have been so impressed with the wholesomeness and superior nutriment of cocoa, that they have judiciously directed that it shall be served out twice or thrice a week to regiments of the line, and daily to the seamen on board H. M. ships. Medical men unquestionably admit that cocoa is nutritious.
