VAN WYCK MASON'S CASTLE ISLAND CASE With CANDID CAMERA CLUES by HENRY CLAY GIPSON

CHAPTER XX Thanks to a gift acquired many years before, Roger Alenby was able to wake himself around seven and change the dressing on a forehead which felt sore but which was not badly swollen. After first removing from the floor all traces of his blood, he employed rough mathematics to estimate the bullet's course and was able to deduce that the sniper had fired from a slope opposite Freebooter's Hall and slightly to the left of his window. Lips set, he arranged a small picture over the bullet hole and descended into the garden's perfumed freshness. As he searched, he thought of Barney.

When he noticed the bandage he started, "Good Lord, what's happened to you?" Alenby managed a convincing, shamefaced grin. "Clumsy bit of work. Slipped getting out of the bathtub and whanged my head against the wash basin. The wash basin won." "Looks like it," Ward sympathized. "Most bathrooms are regular mantraps. Follow me in China was a pilot in the war, knocked off eleven Boches and one bright day he slipped like you must have—broke his neck in a flash."

Grafton to run along and roll her hoop?" "Can't," Ward grunted. "Ever notice, Major, that money's pretty important in this life? Gail knows Barney's up to his ears in this Loja deal and—"

As if to mark the sniper's ambush, there lay an African daisy

Freebooter's Hall. Here a Negro gardener was humming softly as he weeded the kitchen garden. "Clip the Camera Clues" "I was looking for Creepy?" Alenby said. "Dunno where he is, sir. He might be down by d. bathhouse. Dat's where he lives. How did he make out with the rate last night?"

placid waters of Castle Harbour. "She's one of those people who are so goody-good that it hurts. Means all right, like the kid who loaded his father's gun on the Q. T. I say, have you noticed the cold shoulder she's got for the young Gibbons?"

Half expecting some communication from Bailey of the Inter-Ocean and not wishing such a letterhead to be noted, he resigned himself to patience. Once a neat mailmaid had brought in a pile of mail and then retreated, Alenby got a bad jolt. There serenely reposing amongst a mound of letters lay a small package.

What Do Men Think About Women? Dorothy Dix How Do Men Want to be Treated?

They May Think They Have a Set of Rules Which They Will Follow, But After All, the Women Themselves Will See That These Rules are Broken

What do men really think about women? What specific qualities do men want in women? How do men want women to treat them? What is the best method of catching and holding one of these elusive animals?

Also, he warns women against the suicidal folly of ever letting men find out that they know more than men do; or pay a better name of bride or golf, or draw down a better salary in business.

Now these revelations of the workings of a man's mind and affections as they appertain to females are highly interesting. But the trouble with them is that a woman would have to be a mind-reader, a prophetess and a self-abnegating saint to put them into practice.

This isn't dumbness on women's part. Is it just that nobody knows what a man thinks about women, or what he wants in women, or what he admires in women, because he doesn't know himself.

So, after all, what a man thinks of a woman is what she wants him to think. She puts the good thought on him. DOROTHY DIX.
