If You Could BUY CANADA—

If you could buy Canada today and sell it for what it was worth ten years hence—you would make a very substantial profit. Canada must, for a long time to come, continue to grow and prosper.

We are now offering a new British Type Investment Trust security which gives you this opportunity of sharing Canada's prosperity. The investments made by this company are in undertakings that form the very backbone of Canada's business and financial existence. An investment in this new Trust is, in effect, an investment in Canada itself—an investment which should inevitably grow in value as Canada grows in population and wealth.

May we send you full particulars?

Delightful Entertainment

The sixth of a series of entertainments given under the auspices of the I. O. D. E., which have been a pleasing and most instructive feature in Summerside social life this winter, was held in St. Mary's Parish Hall on Tuesday evening.

Rev. A. S. Weir of Alberton, was the speaker and delighted an appreciative audience with entertaining, humorous and sometimes pathetic sketches of Scottish life, entitled "Scottish Character Sketches." Ven. Archdeacon White very ably presided and, in introducing the speaker, said that it gave him great pleasure to preside at any function of the I. O. D. E., as he owed them a personal debt of gratitude. He assured the audience that they would not be disappointed with the programme which had been provided for the evening.

Mrs. Weir, who accompanied her husband, at intervals during the evening favored the audience with such classic songs as "Annie Laurie," "Bonnie Mary of Argyle," "Loch Lomond," and others, rendered in a most exquisite and rich voice, with a truly Scottish technique which delighted her listeners. Mrs. George D. Pope, in her very capable way, accompanied Mrs. Weir on the piano.

In introducing his subject, Mr. Weir stated that he was not going to speak of Dukes and Lords or the high born of Scotland, but of the simple every day folk and from which some of Scotland's most illustrious sons and daughters have sprung. The characters which he portrayed were largely taken from "Beside the Bonnie Brier Bush" by Ian MacLaren, the nom de plume of Rev. John Watson, a well known Scottish clergyman, who wrote a number of books on Scottish life and was pastor of St. Matthew's Church, Glasgow, in 1877. He also had charge of a church in Liverpool for a time. In his remarks the lecturer spoke of the Scottish people as being intensely religious, lovers of literature, and keen advocates of advancement of education. They have produced many famous men both at home and abroad. They have also figured largely in the development of Canada and the United States, of which a good many of the early settlers came from hardy Scottish stock who would allow nothing to daunt their courage.

Rev. Mr. Weir in a very interesting manner sketched such characters from the "Bonnie Brier Bush" as the country doctor "MacLure" and Mrs. McPadyen, the sermon critic; he also gave a delightful version of courtship in the glen and showed how the Scots, although spoken of as a hard people were capable of great emotional depths in his vivid description of the young minister, fresh from college, about to preach his first sermon, who discarded his carefully prepared discourse when he remembered his mother's dying words, "To speak a good word for Jesus Christ," and delivered instead a simple sermon choosing for his subject "Jesus Christ" which won the hearts of all the congregation.

Mr. J. M. Nicholson in moving a vote of thanks felt that everyone present had been well repaid for coming out in such inclement weather not only to hear Rev. Mr. Weir but the beautiful rendition of those old Scotch songs by Mrs. Weir was a pleasure which he was sure all appreciated. Mr. A. S. MacKay in seconding the motion assured the visitors of a hearty welcome to Summerside at any time. In a few complimentary remarks the vote of thanks was conveyed to the speaker by the chairman and gracefully acknowledged.—S

Cornwall Notes

What was undoubtedly one of the best entertainments in this district for some time was that which was put on by the St. Catherine's Dramatic Club in Cornwall Hall on Thursday night. The program composed of dialogues, readings and solos provoked much mirth and time and again had the audience in hilarious outbursts of laughter. The comic sayings, the humorous characters and the funny antics especially in the dialogues "Over the Back Fence," and "Love and Lather" brought forth great and prolonged applause from the delighted audience. To discriminate among the performers would indeed be a difficult task but worthy of special mention is the part played in this performance by Mr. Walter Shaw. Mr. Shaw, who is well known and who is exceedingly popular with all frequenters of entertainments, was never heard to better advantage than on Thursday night. His solos "Unconsciously" and "All By Yourself in the Moonlight," his singing in a duet in which he co-acted with Mrs. Shaw and his portrayal of the darkie barber in "Love and Lather" were especially pleasing to the audience. After the program had been concluded a sale of baskets was most successfully conducted by Mr. Seymour Scott in his usual witty and jovial manner. Mr. Gordon MacMillan in his customary competent manner acted as chairman for the evening. Following is the program:

Chorus: "How Do You Do."
Reading: Olga MacNevin, (encored)
Duet: Margaret and Walter Shaw. (encored).

Solo: Norman Stretch, (encored).
Dialogue: "Over the Back Fence,"
Violin solo: Leo Berrigan (encored)
Solo: Wilfred Stretch (encored).
Dialogue "Love and Lather".
Solo—Walter Shaw (encored).
Reading: Olga MacNevin.
Chorus: "The Song of the Bow".
Accompanists: Miss Mary Stretch, Leo Berrigan.

ADDRESS

sentiment, it is the honest utterance of a justifiable pride. Nevertheless I cannot admit the implication that the man who uses bait is consequently a creel stuffer, or deficient in the scientific accomplishment of the craft. Fly fishing and bait fishing are co-ordinate branches of the same study. Each must be thoroughly learned to qualify the aspirant to master the art. Each method of fishing has its advantages. One may be made available where the other is wholly impracticable. I utter no plea for the bait fisher who angles stolidly from stump to stump, there is neither sport nor science in his method.

Fly fishing gives more varied play and greater exercise to the muscles, it bestows a keener excitement, it intensifies the perceptive faculties, it requires nicer judgment than bait fishing, quicker and more delicate manipulation and greater promptness in emergencies. It is more humbling in its influences, it is beautiful in its associations, and poetic in the fancies it begets. For myself I boldly avow an unqualified preference for the fly, in all cases where its use is practicable.

There are days when the fish won't bite. It's either too calm or else too rough, it's either too warm or not warm enough. It's either too cloudy or the sun's too bright. The winds the wrong way or the moon's not right. It's either too wet or else it's too dry. Or for some other reason you can't tell why. But there's days when the fish won't bite.

But there's days when the fish will bite. When it ain't too calm and it ain't too rough. When it ain't too warm, but just warm enough. And the big old fellows. Oh joy how they fight. Your rod's bent double, as you keep your line tight. How they leap, how they run. Gee whiz but it's fun. On the days when the fish will bite.

It becomes the second nature of a thorough angler to note carefully all that transpires around him, his pursuits and associations make him a close student of natural history. By personal contact and observation he becomes thoroughly conversant with the habits and peculiarities of the creatures he pursues. He familiarizes himself with their haunts. He gathers knowledge from every leaf, finds instructive sermons in stories, secrets in the babbling brooks, and practical lessons of nature is an open revelation.

'Tis not from books alone, thoughts, pleasures flow. They are but aqueducts, which serve to bring The stream direct (meandering else but slow) As fresh it wells from Purian spring. But who would taste it pure at times must fling His books aside, and turn to nature's page. Open alike to peasant, prince or king, To man untaught, as well as learned sage, And 'mid its lessons deep his ardent thoughts engage.
