Delegation From City Council Meets Government - A delegation of the City Council, consisting of Mayor E. Blanche and Couns. Macdonald, LePage, McKinnon, Gay, Rogers, City Clerk J. A. Fullerton and City Recorder M. Martin met yesterday afternoon with the Executive Council of the Provincial Government. The first matter taken up was the request of the City for the removal of the Exhibition grounds known as the Kensington rifle range. It was pointed out by the City delegates that this land is situated on the east end of the City. The Premier informed the delegates that the Provincial Government had not yet taken over this land but that, when it did, the City's request would receive every consideration. The next question was the extension of runways at the Charlotteville airport and it was decided that this matter should be left to Premier J. Walter Jones and Mayor J. E. Blanchard for settlement. The third matter brought up was the increasing of the Provincial Government grant to the City Fire Department. The Government indicated that it was sympathetic and assured the delegates that every thing possible would be done to meet the request. From the very outset of the occupation the Japanese non-Christians did not know how to handle the religious question in the Philippines, only Christian country of the Orient. Their army religious bureau failed miserably in its attempts to gain the co-operation of about 13,000,000 Filipino Roman Catholics and several million Protestants for the "greater East Asia co-prosperity sphere."

Now Engaged In Economic Survey Of Farm Problems

Dr. J. E. Lattimer, Professor of Agricultural Economics at MacDonald College, has already begun the task, for which the Provincial Government has engaged him, making a fact-finding survey of economic problems confronting the agricultural industry of this Province. Dr. Lattimer has assistants who are now engaged in making a survey of Nova Scotia. He expects that the results of this study will be published shortly. As an indication of what such work may be expected to disclose, he pointed out that his survey of the Province of Quebec very strikingly showed that the further away the agricultural areas were from the large industrial centres and from areas of high population density, the smaller becomes the average income. Quebec County incomes For instance, four counties in Quebec, close to Montreal, allow their people an average income of $1,093 per year; thirteen, some further distance away, have a yearly income of $809; twenty-five, still further away from the big markets, have an income of $709; while twenty-four counties on the periphery of the industrial and commercial region had a yearly income for their citizens of only $491. One former county was also found to be the poorest in the province. Dr. Lattimer also found that it is always the counties with the highest average income which have the greatest increase in population. This connection between high incomes and population increase is never coincidental, Dr. Lattimer said, but always concomitant. Dr. Lattimer has already un- (delayed) some interesting facts with reference to economic conditions as they pertain to agriculture in this Province, but is feeling his way very carefully. The results of his studies will later be embodied in a report which he will submit to the Provincial Government. Next Monday he will address the Rotary Club of Charlotteville on the subject: "The Purchasing Power of the Farmer in the Post-War Period."

Sea Cadets To Camp

The Royal Canadian Sea Cadet Corps will go into camp next Monday at Camp Buchanan, P. E. I. Approximately ninety young officers will leave Prince of Wales College by bus at 9:30 p. m. Most of those attending will be on familiar ground from their training last year at the same place. Those who attend for the first time will enjoy the privilege of being in a regular Establishment operated by Naval Service and flying the White Ensign. The cadets will be under their own officers, and the divisional system will be continued giving both officers and men a chance to really know each other and develop the traditional Navy relationship of mutual trust and respect. Of course most of the training they will receive will be a continuation of what they have been doing throughout the year, but the emphasis will be on boatwork, seamanship, swimming, outdoor shooting, semaphore and Morse, all which will be taught by specially trained naval instructors. The daily routine will give the boys some idea of what to expect when they join naval service and enter one of the twenty new-entry training divisions in Canada. Royal cadets have already enlisted through H. M. C. S. "Queen Charlotte" and are serving at sea. De Gaulle Speaks From Peace Tower

Addresses Crowd on Parliament Hill

General Charles de Gaulle speaking to some 10,000 Canadians gathered beneath the mighty Peace Tower on Ottawa's Parliament Hill, declared that Canada's assistance had done much to help France stand upright and united again. France had found comfort and support in aviators, armed French soldiers, fed and clothed French prisoners. The French leader spoke in English and French, after being introduced by Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King and Hon. L. S. St. Laurent.

CAPTURED TWO - (Continued from page 1) second-in-command. The battalion got formed up for the Autlie attack and the Lieutenant-Colonel from Montreal, who was commanding the unit, called for artillery concentrations on Autlie. The guns hammered the village and the Maritimers advanced over the flat fields towards Autlie, less than a mile away. Right in front of the starting line they ran into another German trench position. The occupants of which lay doggo until the Canadians came near. Here, there was another fierce fight and at 23 Germans in these trenches were killed by grenades or bayonets.

Another 100 Yards - The regiment advanced another 100 yards to another German position which was wiped out in the same grim manner. Two companies of a Maritime battalion worked around to the west side of Autlie, fighting all the way, while another company went into the side of the village which had been smashed to pieces by shelling and was alive. But there was not fighting among the debris. About three o'clock that afternoon Autlie was in the hands of the Canadians.

As the Canadians consolidated their positions they came under heavy fire from enemy tanks dug-in on nearby slopes and also from enemy 88-millimetre guns. The towns of Blot and Cussy, which were not fighting among the debris, were also fired on by the Maritimers. The Canadians did not fall.

Their next task was Franqueville, a half-mile further south, which was also in the hands of the Maritimers. The attack was tied up. The Colonel called then for artillery on Franqueville and another trench was captured. The Maritimers' carriers raced over the field, first followed by the infantry.

Patrols went south from Franqueville to Carpiquet through an area full of German snipers and mines. The first troops these patrols met were from another Maritime unit which fought for and held Carpiquet with three other units.

Sunday morning the Maritime unit which had taken Autlie and Franqueville was ordered to push on to Caen and with a group of reinforcements to replace their casualties, they cut southeast, being shelled and mortared as they began their new advance.

On To Caen - Trails and narrow roads in that area were all mined. So the unit went along the railway track until they reached the Caen-Villers highway at a point in the south-west outskirts of the city. The Germans tried to stop them but they sank out and their patrols fanned out to the Odon river, near where it flows into the Orne.

The troops had no sleep Saturday night in their Franqueville positions and though weary from battle and the long harrowing march, they went right up the highway into Caen to link up with an Ontario regiment which entered the city first from the west.

The Maritimers took up their Caen positions and engaged the Germans over the river Orne, until the whole city cleared out and more Canadians moved in. The Regiment's Colonel had the highest praise for all men and officers and among them he mentioned the work of Major Forbes who after the Colonel's wireless had been knocked out in the advance to Autlie, took over command until the set was fixed.
