Malpeque

Sunday, December 2nd, was the twenty-fifth anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. John MacGillivray, Baltic, but their neighbors and friends numbering about sixty, wishing to have a part in such a happy event, surprised them on Saturday evening by presenting a couple. Mr. Archibald Woodside acted very happily as chairman. An address was read by Mr. Keir Crair and a presentation of some silverware and two Ealtau chairs was made by Mr. James Donald. Emphatic addresses, further voicing the feelings of good will of the community towards Mr. and Mrs. MacGillivray were made by Messrs. John Trafer and Wilbert Delaney. The words expressed and the accompanying gifts were gratefully acknowledged by Mr. MacGillivray. Music was enjoyed—special numbers being given by Mrs. George Reiley of Clifton and Messrs. Charles and Milton Woodside. Mrs. Chester Simpson was the accompanist for the evening. A generous repast was served and after several hours spent in real good fellowship, the friends departed extending many felicitations as to health and many years of continued happy wedded life.

The following is the address:—
Mr. & Mrs. MacGillivray,
400 Main Street, Malpeque, P.E.I.

We, your friends and neighbors assemble here tonight to congratulate you on attaining your 25 years of married life. We may further congratulate you on the fact that during this time you have had an airy prosperous journey through life, as you have had no deaths in our family and not a great amount of sickness.

As a neighbor you have always been obliging and ready to do all in your power when any case of need night arise, and you have been a good friend to your wife, who has managed well her own household.

One thing that speaks well of you both is the good will and esteem in which you are both held. Please accept this present as a token of the goodwill and esteem of our friends and neighbors, with the wish that you may have another prosperous 25 years and be able to celebrate your golden wedding.

Miss Marion Cousins, who leaves for Malden, Mass., was waited on at her home by about forty of our young friends on Thursday evening, Nov. 29th. An address was read by Miss Alena Woodside and a presentation of over twenty dollars was made by Miss Margaret Ramsey.

The following is the address:—
Dear Marion,
We, your friends, have assembled here, having learned with regret that you are about to leave us. We wish to express in some way the esteem in which you are held by us, and to let you know how much we will miss you.

Your kind and genial disposition has endeared you to everyone. Kindly accept this little gift as a memento of our good will. That you may be followed by good luck is the sincere wish of your many friends.

The address was followed by the singing of "For She is a Jolly Good fellow."

Music was furnished by our talented violinist, Mr. Charles Woodside, accompanied by Mr. Geddie Owen on the banjo, and several hours passed pleasantly in dancing. A dainty repast was served. It is regrettable that so many of our promising young ladies are leaving us for other parts, and it would be well if opportunities for financial advancement were sufficiently great to warrant their remaining home.

Miss Marion has been very popular in social life, and the good wishes of a host of friends follow her to her new work.

Among the recent visitors to Summerside were the following—Mr. Ralph and Mrs. Geo. F. Bearisto; Mr. and Mrs. L. D. MacNutt, Messrs. Thomas MacNutt, Sinclair MacJougan, Daniel Bearisto, Melville Donald and Wilbert Delaney and Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Ramsay.

Canadian

Literary Shrines

Ottawa Journal

Some years ago, an English critic writing on Canadian literature commented on the difficulty he had experienced in obtaining information about the authors of the Dominion and their work. "Nearly all the books written about the country," he said, "tell you something of nearly everything in it, except its literature." There were volumes pointed out to the history and progress of Canada, and not a few that dealt with the men who had played a part in the making of the Dominion, pioneers, politicians, railway magnates and agriculturists, but of Canadian writers there was scarcely any mention.

That condition has, to some extent, been corrected since by a growing appreciation of our literature, which has found expression in a number of critical and biographical studies of Canadian authors past and present. But while at least a need of lasting fame is assured to some of our poets and other writers by the very quality of their work there is still room for more adequate recognition of their claims to honor in a form that would preserve and perpetuate their memory in the localities with which they were individually associated.

We erect statues, monuments and tablets in honor of our statesmen, soldiers, industrialists, city founders, scientists and other men of mark in different spheres of life. In the preservation of historic sites and landmarks, recalling great men and stirring deeds of the past, excellent work has been accomplished by the various commissions and associations constituted for that purpose. Throughout the Dominion, there is scarcely a community that does not possess a public memorial of some kind to someone of a field of activity, or another. Yet in the multiplicity of monuments and shrines, it is exceptional to find one dedicated to a representative of letters.

There are, however, welcome indications of a disposition to remedy this neglect, and to ensure that fitting homage shall be paid to the memory of Canadian authors of tablet distinction. At Annapolis, a tablet preserves the name of Marc Les-carbot, the French historian, poet and dramatist, whose associations with Acadia marked the dawn of Canadian literature. In the Province of Quebec, a monument will keep green the memory of Louis Hemon, who, in the Lake St. John country, found the inspiration that created "Maria Chapdelaine." And now it is proposed that several of Ontario's poets be honored with memorials, appropriately placed, and worthily expressive of the reverence due to notable literary service.

The movement had its inception in a suggestion voiced by Arthur S'ringer, himself a writer of more than national reputation, that steps be taken to preserve as a memorial to Archibald Lampman the house at Cornforth, Kent county, in which that gifted singer was born 67 years ago. The idea has not only found ready acceptance in circles interested in Canadian literature, but has drawn forth a proposal that other Ontario poets be similarly honored. It is suggested, for instance, that the birthplace of Pauline Johnson, near Brantford; the boyhood home of Wilfred Campbell, at Wiar-ton, and the birthplace of John McCrae, at Guelph, to mention only a few of the homes and haunts of distinguished Canadian authors, might receive recognition in the form indicated.

In the case of Lampman, Morpeth, as his birthplace, as no doubt, the first claim to a memorial; yet Ottawa, too, might be worthy honoree of the poet, who spent so many years of his comparatively brief life in its midst, and there did most of the work that brought him fame. If the routine of a Civil Service position bore heavily upon him at times and city life often made him "weary of things," it was in the Capital, and its vicinity, that he developed, if he did not acquire, the ardent love of nature, the passion for the open air, and the absorbing sense of the beauty and majesty of forest, field and alluring landscape, which find such exquisite expression in his verse.

Other places have Lampman associations that may well be cherished. If the poet's heart lay anywhere, it was, perhaps, amid the pines of Rice Lake and Gore's Landing in the Trent Valley, the scene of his boyhood and schooling, and of many a summer holiday bright with golden days. But Archibald Lampman was essentially the Ottawa tradition, which has lent lustre to Canadian poetry, and there could be no more fitting site for a memorial than the city to which he came in 1883, where he lived and worked until his death in 1899, and where the call of his beloved Gathesau beckoned him to inspiration and achievement.

ANCIENT CASTLE RESTORED

Restoration of the historic Eilean Donan Castle, guarding the entrance to Loch Duich, Scotland, is nearing completion, and its owner, Lieut. Colonel J. MacRae-Gilstrap, expects to open it with a celebration in the near future. Work of restoration was started in 1913, but was interrupted during the world war. The castle was for a long time the home of the chief of the MacRae, MacKenzie of Seaforth. In 1331 the Earl of Morray warden of Scotland, sent an officer to the castle to prepare for his reception and the arrest of many captives, 50 of whom were put to death, and their heads hung on the walls. On May 10, 1719, three English men of-war sailed within gunshot of the walls and the garrison surrendered.

TRINITY UNITED CHURCH
R. H. Rogers

By direction of Presbytery, Rev. Hammond Johnson on Sunday preached in the pastoral Charge of Cornwall and West River, and Rev. E. M. Atken, B. A. of that charge occupied the pulpit of Trinity United Church in the evening. The purpose of Presbytery was to impress on each congregation its duty to the cause of missions. Mr. Atkens text was "God so loved the world that he gave." In an eloquent discourse he told the story of Christ's commendation of the poor widow who made her offering of two mites to the temple treasury, and recalled how in modern times William Corey, David Clingstone and the Gordon brothers who went from Prince Edward Island to the New Hebrides pioneered and sacrificed in the cause of missions. "If the church ceases to be a missionary church it will cease to exist," like anything in nature which fails to carry on its proper function. Thirty-three millions of people outside of Canada are looking to the United Church of Canada and the choir, in the evening "O Sweet and blessed Country" and "I heard a great voice" solos and choruses by Mr. A. R. Gillis and the choir.

In the morning service Rev. Dr. Ramsay preached on the significance of the cross of Christ, from the point of view of Christ himself, God the Father, and humanity.

The special music at both services was from the sacred cantata "The New Jerusalem" by Prof. W. E. Fletcher. The following numbers were rendered. In the morning, "I saw a new Heaven" solo by Mr. H. McPherson, and Jerusalem the Golden, solo and chorus by Mr. T. W. Bentley and the choir, in the evening "O Sweet and blessed Country" and "I heard a great voice" solos and choruses by Mr. A. R. Gillis and the choir.

In the Sunday School two girls from Miss Ayers class, Isabel Crawford and Jessie McLeod, joined in giving an account of the life and work of Rev. Norman Russel, missionary to Central India. As was reported, the attendance on the preceding Sunday was 512. During the present week the Ladies Aid, the Willing Circle of Kings Daughters and the Dorcas Society will hold their annual meetings for the presentation of reports and election of officers for the ensuing year.
