make such measures impossible. The Government announced it will introduce a bill in Parliament next Thursday which will give Premier Blum power to halt the flow of volunteers into Spain.

The Government's previous idea of a rigid bill has been abandoned but the measure is believed likely to deprive all Frenchmen leaving France to fight in Spain of French citizenship.

Francisco-German commercial negotiations, which officials hope offer the possibility of a general trade and financial arrangement between the two nations, already have begun, it was disclosed tonight.

While France and Germany discussed the forthcoming visit of Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, the Reich's Economics Minister, officials disclosed negotiations "through normal channels" were being carried on to increase commercial exchanges between the two countries.

This and a military inspection of Spanish Morocco eased materially French fears of German troop concentrations in the African territory.

SEEK ECONOMIC DEAL
BERLIN, Jan. 12.—(AP)—France and Germany soon may get together to effect closer economic relations and work out a European peace program, reliable advices indicated tonight.

The French Ambassador, Andre Francois-Poncet, and the Reich's Economics Minister, Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, already were agreed that an understanding is desirable between the two nations, high official sources divulged.

And with dispute over Spanish Morocco smoothed over by Franco-German pledges to respect integrity of the territory, the departure Jan. 16 of Francois-Poncet for Paris was viewed as a hopeful sign of forthcoming economic and political developments.

Schacht and Francois-Poncet are agreed in principle, high sources said, to the desirability of an understanding on trade relations, colonial distribution, armaments control and general cooperation for preservation of European peace.

Schacht laid the groundwork for rapprochement when he visited Premier Leon Blum last August, but found little support then in Nazi circles.

Now that the Moroccan crisis has brought the danger of war into prominence, Schacht's friends expressed conviction both Berlin and Paris would heed his advice, reinforced by Francois-Poncet's representations.

General Hermann Goering, co-ordinator of the Nazi foreign plan for self sufficiency, was believed also to figure in the program through a visit to Premier Mussolini. Goering was expected to discuss developments with Mussolini, to make certain Italy was sympathetic to the possibility of an economic alliance between France and Germany.

EXECUTED AS DESERTERS
Retreating Militiamen Put To Death Before Comrades.

(A. P. by Guardian's Special Wire)
FORT BOU, Spain, Jan. 11.—(Unconfirmed)—Reliable reports reaching here tonight said Madrid's defence administration had executed scores of militiamen who retreated from their positions. They were lined up before their comrades and shot as a warning, according to sources here.

The executions, it was understood, constituted a major reason why Madrid has held out for more than 11 weeks against the besieging Fascists.

The other principal explanation of the stubborn defence of the capital was the presence of volunteer brigades from other countries which have borne the brunt of the attacks, these reports said.

Reliable information indicated, however, the eventual conquest of the city should be but a matter of time—such as a great increase in foreign aid to the government—should change the whole situation.

ITS FREIGHT PLANES CARRY THOUSANDS OF TONS TO MINE AND TRAP LINE
BY JAMES MONTAGNES
Toronto.

Airplanes are the moving vans of Canada's northland beyond the railways, carrying everything from a carton of eggs to motor boats. Recently an entire mining town was transported from the end of rail and water transportation in Northern Ontario to a site nearly 100 miles distant in the virgin bush where a prospector had struck pay dirt.

Considered the largest contract order on record in Canada's aviation industry, nearly 800 tons of freight were transported to the mine site in four months. Four planes worked by day and night, guided by short-wave radio, in this region of bush and lake, where there are no telegraph lines, no towns and no landing fields, but innumerable small lakes.

Fifty men went in by air to put the town and the mining camp together. They unloaded from the planes ton-weight ore buckets, sections of Diesel engines weighing as much as dozens of drums of fuel oil, insulating material, barrels of nails, steel rails, a portable sawmill, hundreds of bags of cement, office furniture, all manner of tools from diamond drills to hand hammers, groceries for hungry men, dynamite and nitroglycerine in quantities to blow tunnels far underground at this new mining camp.

File Up Big Tonnage
Freighting in northern Canada accounts for the fact that latest government records show Canada's planes carrying six and a half times as much freight and express as all scheduled United States domestic and foreign lines combined. In the last year for which complete figures are available, 1935, Canadian planes carried 13,000 tons of freight and express. All signs point to an even more impressive total for this past year, with one company carrying 1,543,000 pounds in the first six months—three-quarters of its entire previous year's freight—while another carried 7,163,500 pounds of freight in the first ten months as against 5,275,000 in the previous twelve months.

There are some thirty companies engaged in this air transportation business into Canada's northland. Planes are now especially built to suit Canadian freighting conditions. They are provided with large hatches, sometimes on top as well as on each side, for ease in loading and unloading. The hatches are wide enough to allow boiler sections, hoisting winches and other bulky units to be carried with as little dismantling as possible.

The mining development which has been increasing each year for the past decade in northern Canada has resulted in the growth of active, prosperous communities in what used to be wilderness. Many of these towns now have daily air-mail and passenger service. Planes pick up grocery orders as well as orders for mining equipment on their way out, and frequently come back with a load of gold or silver.

From some of the remotest mines ore is transported by air to rail-head. One company keeps a plane to take radium-bearing ore from its mine on Great Bear Lake nearly 1,000 miles south to the railway at Waterways, Alberta. Another mining company uses planes to transport its own prospectors with their supplies for a week or two at a time to the Arctic islands north of the mainland to pick up bales of fur, and a load of $50,000 in fur is not uncommon.

Canadian planes also carry fresh fish in winter from northern lakes to urban markets as far east as Chicago, the fish being caught in nets strung under the thick ice. Pigs are frequently carried to northern camps, and even cows have been freighted by air to northern mining communities so that the children may have fresh milk. Live chickens, fresh vegetables, grapefruit for breakfast above the Arctic Circle, these are other items carried by air into the Canadian "wilds."

Evidence of big freighting operations comes from the Dominion's largest operator, Canadian Airways. This company reports that in September in the midwest mining area alone it carried 500 tons of freight.

Miners Thrown Out Of Employment
(C. P. by Guardian's Special Wire)
RIVER HERBERT, N. S., Jan. 12.—A serious unemployment situation faced miners of the River Herbert district tonight after 50 men were forced out of work by cessation of Longwall operations in the Maple Leaf Coal mine because the level on which they were employed was worked out.

Another level was approaching a fault and would have to be abandoned within a few days, it was believed, throwing 40 additional miners out of employment.

N. T. Avarad of Amherst, N. S., general manager of the mine, said after a meeting with a committee of the River Herbert local of United Mine Workers that a delegation would seek financial assistance from the Provincial Government toward opening of another level.

In Memoriam

MR. CORNELIUS CAHILL

There passed away peacefully on Oct. 6th, Mr. Cornelius Cahill, one of the oldest and most highly respected residents of Tyrone.

The late Mr. Cahill was born at Kingston eighty-five years ago, where he spent his life, engaged in farming, from which he retired six years ago and moved to Tyrone. Although not in the best of health for some time, the deceased was confined to his bed for only about a month previous to his death. Mr. Cahill was a man of sterling qualities. His kind and jovial disposition made for him a host of friends both old and young. This was evidenced by the large numbers of people who visited him during his illness and also came to pay their last respects.

During his illness he was frequently visited by his pastor Rev. Father Herrell who also administered the last rites of the Holy Catholic Church of which the deceased was a devout member.

Beside his faithful widow, the former Mary Wynne, he leaves to mourn his loss one son and three daughters, Richard of New York, Ella of Jamaica Plain, Mass., Mrs. Vincent McCloskey of Tyrone and Mrs. Francis McElroy of New Haven; also one brother and three sisters.

The funeral which despite the unfavorable condition of the roads was largely attended was held from his home to St. Ann's Church, which the remains of a loving husband and father were laid to rest in the adjoining cemetery to await the resurrection.

The pall bearers were, Messrs. James Murray, Joseph Gallant, Tobias Murray, Daniel Docherty, Becher Campbell and Patrick Murray.

May his soul rest in peace. (Patriot please copy)

THOMAS BAMBRICK

Sorrow and sadness are ever attendant upon the death of one whom we have known and loved, but it is the sadness of a temporary separation and a sorrow only for the family and friends bereft when the death is of one who abundantly possessed the beauty of character and purity of soul which can give to what is still human a ready a spark of life.

The Lord's work is varied, and varied must be the characters and qualifications of those who are called upon to perform it, but none of his laborers do more for his cause than the quiet saintly spirits who move serenely in our midst and whose faith and ready love, quick sympathy and patient resignation remains for us the character divine and reconcile us to what sometimes seems the tragedy of humanity.

The sympathy of all who knew this young man goes out to his bereaved family. He was a faithful member of the Roman Catholic congregation and during his last illness was visited by his pastor, Rev. Joseph Rooney, from whose hands he frequently received holy communion.

There are left to mourn his loss and treasure his memory, his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Urban Bambrick, five sisters, Mrs. Philip Baird, Morell; Mrs. Ralph Grant; Mrs. Joseph Myers, Donnelly's Road; Margaret and Patricia at home; six brothers, John Bambrick, Wellesley, Mass.; George, Schenectady, N.Y.; Ernest, Francis, Earl and Joseph, at home.

His funeral took place at St. Lawrence Church, Morell, his native parish, on Saturday, December 12th. Mass of Requiem was celebrated by the pastor, Rev. Joseph Rooney, who also officiated at the grave, and was attended by a very large number of sorrowing relatives and friends. The many mass cards and letters of sympathy testified to the esteem in which he was held by his numerous friends.

The deceased was a nephew of Rev. Fr. George Coffin, the Redemptorist Order, British Columbia. (Patriot please copy)
