WOMEN SHELVED IN RUSSIA TODAY

MOSCOW, Dec. 23 — Russian women are discontented and grumbling. The new order passes and the old returns. Immorality is on the increase. Romance is dying.

Madame Kolentay,— first woman diplomat in the world, head of the Soviet Mission in Norway, feminist, writer; twice married—and the only woman in Russia respected, even feared, as a leader by the others -- bewailed all this in an interview with me here just before her departure for Christiania.

"It's not a cheering story," she responded. "You see, when the revolution came women were put upon an equal basis with men. It was very simple. He who worked got a ration of food. The more members of the family who worked, the more food

"So the women became economically independent. Prostitution disappeared. Relations between men and women became freer, it is true. But certainly that is better than sordid vice -- such as is reappearing today in alarming proportions.

"Women gave their children into the institutes we provided. For we stressed it was the duty of women to be, at the same time, mothers and of labor use to society. In many homes women got more rations than the men— because they could do certain types of work better. So if men and women lived together it was because they wanted to live together, not because they were compelled to.

"Vice of course, could not exist. There was no money. Either you worked or you did not eat. But we could not continue communism. Our industry was in a wretched shape. We had wars and counter revolutions We could not continue So we changed our economic policy.

"Then — the old order of things returned. Men coming back from the war took women's jobs. There were no longer rations, but wages. We could not keep up the children's homes on a large scale. Women were compelled to resume their old status.

"Girls went out into the streets. Money was of value now, and the bourgeoise made it. No provision is being made for the independant woman. She takes her chances equally with the men, and she cannot do that and be a mother.

"So, naturally, Russian women are disatisfied. They fret at the loss of independence. Whatever they have won from the revolution is fast slipping and now to be a wife of a wealthy speculator means the enjoyment of luxuries, whether or not there is anylove lost between the two

"They protest. But at this moment it is in vain because social forces are against us. What we seek is the future. What we are afraid of is that the present tendency will flood us."

"But what I don't see—how you can figure all this is going to help me out with Beatrice.

Jeffery Nellson turned in his chair. "You can't eh?" You need spectacles.

"We'll need someone too cook and look after us, when we get up there. Who should it be but Beatrice? She wouldn't want to stay here; you know how she loves the woods. There wouldn't be any of the other boys up there to trouble you. You'd have a clear field.

At a little town at the end of steel Ben and Ezram ended the first lap of their journey.

A canoe was bought for a reasonable sum—they were told they had a good chance of selling it again whe nhe left the river near Snowy Gulch. For a ridiculously small sum which he mysteriously produced from the pocket of his faded jeans Ezram bought a second-hand rifle—an ancient gun of large caliber but of enduring quality—and a box of shells to match.

"Old Hiram left me a gun, but we'll each need one," Ezram explained.

They would have need of good canoe craft before the journey's end. the villagers told them. Ezram had not boasted of any such ability, and at first Ben regarded the plan with considerable misgivings. And it was with the most profound amazement that, when they pushed off, he saw Ezram deliberately seat himself in the bow, leaving the most important place to his young companion.

"Good heavens, I'll capsize you in a minute," Ben said. "How do you dare risk it—

"Push off and stop botherin' me," Ezram answered. "There's a paddle—go ahead and shoot 'er.

The waters caught the canoe, speeding it down-stream; and in apprehension of immediate disaster Ben siezed the paddle. Swiftly he thrust it into the streaming water at his side.

"Do you remember when you shot the Athabaska rapids?" Ezram had asked. It was al clear enough. In that life that was forgotten he had evidently lived much in a canoe, knowing every detail of river life.

Late afternoon, and they worked closer to shore. And now. in the gray of twilight, Ezram saw the place to land.

It was a small lagoon into which a creek emptied, and beyond was an open meadow, found so often and so unexpectedly in the North woods. Swiftly Ben turned the canoe into shore.

All at once a great clarity seemed to take possession of Ben's mind. Here in these forests, were the stimuli of which Forest the. alienist, had spoken;! and his brain seemed to leap. as in one impulse, to the truth. Suddenly he knew the answer to all the questions and problems that had been troubling him so long.

He sprang up his eyes blazing, "I remember everything," an audible voice spoke within him. Then he whispered, fervently, to his familiar wilds. "And I have come home.

CHAPTER IV
A Bolt From the Blue

Everything was as it should be and he and Ezra made the camp.

"It's all come clear again' he told Ezram. He remembered now that Ezram had always been the most intimate friend of his own family; a spry old godfather to himself and young sister, a boon companion to his once successful rival, Ben's father. Ben did not wonder now. at his own perplexity when Forest had spoken of Wolf Darby. That was his own name known throughout hundreds of square miles of forest and in dozens of little river hamlets in an Eastern province.

The journey ended at last. They saw the white peak they had been told to watch for, and soon after they came to a green bank from which the forest had been cut away. The pushed up and made landing on the banks of a small stream.

This stream, Ezram knew, was Poor Man's Creek, the stream of which his brother had written and which they must ascend to reach Spruce Pass, Only five miles distant. in a quartering direction from the river was Snowy Gulch the village where they were to secure supplies, and from Steve Morris, the late Hiram's gun and pet Fenris.

Before they were fully unpacked they made out the figure of a middle aged frontiersman, his back loaded advancing up the road toward them.

"Howdy,' Ezram began pleasantly.

"Howdy,' the stranger replied. 'How was goin'?

'Oh good enough.'

"Come all the way from Saltsville?"

Less Meat If Back And Kidneys Hurt

Take a Glass of Salts to Flush Kidneys if Bladder Bothers You

Eating too much meat may produce kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges. severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so that it no longer irritates, thus often ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to help keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus often avoiding serious kidney disorders.
