FERTILIZERS

Our farmers in general are not yet placing their orders for their fertilizer requirements. Conditions do not permit their doing so.

We have in stock and to arrive the latter part of April a full supply of chemicals and mixed fertilizers. We believe we are stocking enough to meet the full seasons demands.

We will supply your requirements now or later in the season if you prefer. Or we will take your orders now for shipment when you wish.

At the request of a large number of our best farmers we are this year shipping our superphosphates and mixed fertilizers in bags of 100 pounds cash. This makes lighter handling and simpler calculating.

All our goods are freshly ground at the time of shipment from the factory excepting sulphate of ammonia and nitrate of soda. This guarantees the goods delivered you in first class condition and packed in bags 100% sound.

Our prices are and will be in line with our competitors. And we guarantee you that our present prices will not be advanced while our supply now in stock and to arrive the latter part of April remains unsold. As already stated we believe these supplies will be enough for our seasons requirements.

We will be pleased to serve you.

The House of Dreams-Come-True

By Margaret Pedler

Jean was still silent as she and Nick re-entered the hall at Staple. It was empty, and as, by common consent, they instinctively drifted towards the fire Nick pulled forward one of the big easy chairs for her. Then he stood gloomily staring down into the leaping flames, much as Tommarin had stood the previous evening.

Intuitively she knew that he wanted to give her his confidence. "Tell me about it, Nick," she said quietly.

"May I?" The words jerked out like a sigh of relief. He dropped into a chair beside her.

"There isn't much to tell you. Only, I'd like you to know—to be a pal to her, if you can, Jean." He paused, then went on quickly:

"They married her to him when she was hardly more than a child—barely seventeen. She's only nineteen now. Sir Adrian is practically a millionaire, and Claire's father and mother were in low water—trying to cut a dash in society on nothing a year. So—they sold Claire. Sir Adrian paid their debts and agreed to make them a handsome allowance. And they let her go to him, knowing, then, that he had already begun to take drugs."

"How could they?" burst from Jean in a strangled whisper.

Nick nodded. His eyes, meeting hers, had lost their gay good humor and were dull and lack-lustre.

"Yes, you'd wonder how, wouldn't you?" he said. His voice rasped a little. "Still—they did it. Then, later on, the Latimers came to Charnwood, and Claire and I met. It didn't take long to love her—you can understand that, can't you?"

"Oh, Nick—yes! She is altogether lovable."

"But understand this, too,"—and the sudden sternness that gripped his speech reminded her sharply of his brother—"we recognise that that's all there can ever be between us. Just the knowledge that we love each other. I think even that helps to make life more bearable."

He fell silent, and presently Jean stretched out a small, friendly hand.

"Thank you for telling me, Nick," she said. "Perhaps some day you'll be happy—together. You and Claire. It sounds a horrible thing to say—to count on—I know, but a man who takes drugs—"

Nick interrupted her with a short laugh.

"You needn't count on Latimer's snuffing out, if that's what you mean. He is an immensely strong man—like a piece of steel wire. It will take years for any drug to kill him. I sometimes think—bitterly—that it will kill Claire first."

CHAPTER XI

"THE SINS OF THE FATHERS—"
A few days later, Jean, coming in from a long tramp across country in company with Nick and half a dozen dogs of various breeds, discovered Tommarin lounging in a chair by the fire. He was in riding kit, having just returned from visiting an outlying corner of the estates where his balliff had suggested that a new plantation might be made, and Jean eyed his long supple figure with secret approval.

Like most well-built Englishmen, he looked his best in kit that demanded the donning of breeches and leggings.

A fine rain was falling out of doors, and beads of moisture clung to Jean's clothes and sparkled in the blown tendrils of russet hair which had escaped from beneath the little turban that she was wearing. Apparently, however, her appreciation, for, after bestowing the parently, however, her appearance did not rouse Tommarin to any reciprocal appreciation, for after bestowing the briefest of glances upon her as she entered, he averted his eyes, concentrating his attention upon the misty ribands of smoke that drifted upwards from his cigarette.

Jean knelt down on the hearth, and pulling off her rain-soaked gloves, held out her hands to the fire's cheerful blaze.

"It's good-bye to all the skating, I'm afraid," she said regretfully. "Nick says we're not likely to have another hard frost like the last, now that the weather has broken so completely."

"No. It's April next month—supposedly spring-time, you know," returned Blaise indifferently.

He seemed disinclined to talk, and Jean eyed him contemplatively. His attitude towards her baffled her as PEG: Imagine it! A nice girl like Anne wearing her underthings a second day.

FRAN: And she's so dainty in other ways...

PEG: Of course she's awfully busy—

FRAN: But our way is so quick and easy! It just floats out the perspiration stains and odours... why doesn't she

Protect daintiness this simple 4-minute way:

All day long underthings absorb perspiration. To avoid offending, dainty women wash them in Lux after every wearing. Lux is especially made to remove perspiration acids and odours completely, yet to protect colours and fabrics. And it takes only 4 minutes, or less!

Wash this 4-minute way:

1. One tablespoon of Lux does all one day's underthings—stockings, too.
2. Squeeze suds through garment, rinse twice, shake out.

Wash after each wearing for perspiration acids left in silk fade colours and rot the threads. With Lux it takes only a few minutes—less time than it takes to wash your face and hands.

Never rub dainty lingerie with cake soap. Rubbing tends to streak colours and weaken fabrics. Lux removes perspiration acids and odours completely—yet leaves colours like new. If it's safe in water alone, it's just as safe in Lux.

Don't use too-warm water: Lux may be dissolved in hot water but make the suds lukewarm for washing.

Have You Tried LUX for dishes? Its wonderful suds work so fast... and keep hands lovely, too!... Costs less than 1c a day.

LUX for underthings keeps them like new... in spite of frequent washing such as ever. He was unflinching at stone-breaking. Fortunately for the preservation of peace, at this juncture there came the sound of voices, and Lady Anne entered the room, accompanied by a visitor. Her clever, grey eyes flashed quickly from Jean's flushed face to that of her son, but if she sensed the electricity in the atmosphere, she made no comment.

"Blaise, my dear, here is Judith," she said pleasantly. "I found her I'm afraid he's played me false. I wondering forlornly in the lanes, so I drove her back here. She has just returned from town, and for some reason her car wasn't at the station to meet her."

"I wired home saying what time I should reach Coome Eavie," explained the new-comer. "But as Mrs. Craig. My new acquisition, Judith," she went on contentedly. "A daughter. I always told you I wanted one. Now I've borrowed someone else's."

Jean found herself shaking hands with a slender, distinctive-looking woman who moved with a slow languorous grace that was almost snake-like in its peculiar suppleness. She gave one the impression that she had no bones in her body, or that if she had, they had never hardened properly but still retained the pliability of cartilage.
