Gossip and Proposal Parties.

The successful hostess of to-day must provide for her guests something more than the conventional dinner, reception, luncheon, card party, or dance of the days of our grand old lady's ingenuitly and originality; she fetes, launching excursions and picnics are not difficult to arrange. Winter for the ambitious hostess.

An amusing evening may be spent at her of girls and men must be present, each receiving a card with a numbered list of subjects for conversation written upon it—a lively piece of social news of the day, the announcement of a certain engagement, a striking or conspicuous costume in which "Mrs. So and So" appeared recently, or anything which might be discussed for a few minutes. There must be as many subjects as couples.

About the various rooms the hostess has arranged tete-a-tetes, each with a number above it. Each guest is asked to draw a number from a receptacle of each number, one for the man and one for the woman. These numbers are matched with those above the tete-a-tete until each guest has a seat and a partner with whom to gossip. When everyone is seated the hostess taps a bell and announces the first topic on the card, and for five minutes that particular bit of news is discussed. Again the mistress of ceremonies rings her bell and reads the second subject aloud. Each man then says au revoir to the girl with whom he has been talking and moves on to the next number to gossip about the second topic. This continues until the subjects are exhausted, and at the same time each man has talked with every girl in the party.

Pencils and slips of paper are distributed at the conclusion, and the girls scribe with them most interestingly. The men do likewise, and prizes are given of those voted most proficient in the art of gossiping.

This form of entertainment may be made pretty and picturesque by giving a garden or out-of-door effect to the rooms. Palms, flowers, hammocks, porch chairs, and other outside accessories scattered about over a green canvas floor covering lawn party effect. In case the latter idea is employed the invitations may read, "A Garden Gossip Party"—a more or less startling invitation in the midst of winter. Summer gowns add to the warm weather effect of this sort of entertainment.

Proposal parties are new and diverting when properly introduced. The hostess, when her guests have arrived, informs the girl in the room within a stated period of time. She also tells them they must do it in proper style, and take her off to one of the cosy corners or secluded nooks she has arranged about the rooms. She then takes her women guests aside and gives each of them half as many little red hearts of paper, flannel, silk, or any convenient material, as there are men in the party. She also gives each girl an equal number of tiny white mittens.

At the signal of the hostess every man selects a girl and asks her to marry him, pressing his suit until he is forced to leave her by the jingle of the hostess's bell. He then proposes to another girl, and so on until he has laid his heart at the feet of everyone in the party. The girls distribute the hearts and mittens, a mitten for a well-told confession of love, the end of the stated hour the men's counted and prizes are given them. The man with the largest pile of mittens is consoled with a pair of white woolen mittens. The men fare best at a proposal party, as the prizes go to them.

Large and lively parties are those which Lord and Lady Strathmore threw at Glamis Castle. Yet (writes a correspondent) whether owing to the untoward mysterious and serious delirium which characterizes the present moment of (shall I say?) uneasiness about the guests of Glamis, especially those who are staying there for the first time. Unexpected things do certainly happen there: witness an anecdote told me by a young lady visitor to the castle who was one of a large party assembled there an autumn or two ago. The season was an abnormally wet one, and on rainy afternoons the house-party used to play themselves in the billiard-room, racing in "Lothian" with billiard-balls wiling away a few hours in pleasant fashion enough.

On one of these afternoons, as the assembled guests were in the middle of an exciting and particularly noisy game of billiard-fives, they suddenly became aware that their host was standing in the midst of them, with that grave, aloof and melancholy look on his face which is so familiar to all who know him. "I want you," he said to the by this time perfectly silent and expectant guests, "all to go up stairs to your bedrooms now at once, and kindly to remain there until you hear a bell ring, when you will be quite at liberty to come down again." Without more ado the visitors, including my informant, silently in due time the bell rang, and the party reassembled to finish the game. But the incident was certainly an odd one.

Rule for Success.
"What is your rule of business—your maxim?" we ask of the Wall Street tycoon. "Very simple," he answers—"I pay for something that I can't get with money that I haven't got, and then sell what I never had for more than it ever cost."

THE CANADIAN STEEL AND COAL COMPANY Limited, was organized to mine and manufacture iron and steel in Canada, at Atlantic tide water. This raw materials for these manufacturers are:—
1. COAL.
2. IRON.
3. LIMESTONE.

The Company has acquired by purchase, immense iron deposits on the North Shore of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, about 350 miles from Sydney. The deposits are estimated to contain 20,000,000 tons of ore above sea level with probably as much more below that line. The iron can be handled for $1.00 per ton or less. Quantities of this ore have been shipped to Great Britain and United States where it has given great satisfaction, and we can sell large quantities of, a. b. at the properties, netting us a profit of $2.00 per ton. This ore makes the finest steel.

When in full operation the output is expected to be about as follows:
1. IRON.—200,000 tons iron ore shipped direct from property, showing net profit of $2.00 per ton, total 200,000 tons fine iron ore shipped in briquettes, showing net profit of $4.00 per ton, total 100,000 tons steel blooms showing net profit of $3.00 per ton, total 600,000 tons coal, showing net profit, at least, $1.00 per ton, total 3. AIDS.—Government bounties (averaged) added to above per year for 6 years

Total net annual profits, LESS FIXED CHARGES: 5 per cent interest on bonds 7 " " on preferred stock Sinking Fund Incidentals

Equivalent to yearly dividends of 30 per cent, or 15 per cent, half-yearly on total capitalization. If the capitalization was increased to this estimate would still show a dividend-earning capacity of 10 per cent, per annum. The capitalization of the Dominion Coal Co. is earning fully 12 per cent, and is paying 8 per cent, guaranteed dividends on this enormous sum. The capitalization of the Dominion Iron and Steel Company is on which it is believed 6 per cent dividends will be earned. The capitalization of the Canadian Steel and Coal Company is, it is believed, equally valuable properties, and it is reasonable to expect much larger dividends. Within the last few months Dominion Coal shares common rose in market value from $40 to $144 per share, and Dominion Iron and Steel Company's shares common rose over $30 per share in market value. With such low capitalization The Canadian Steel and Coal Co's shares would show tremendous profits; and it is confidently believed they will.
