Gruesome Evidence At Hamilton Trial

(By Alan Randal, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

HAMILTON, Oct. 15—(CP)—In her fourth statement to police Mrs. Evelyn MacLean Dick, charged with the slaying of her husband, repudiated two earlier statements and declared truthful a third, in which she claimed William Bohozuk told her "we got him at last."

The third statement, read in court today, told of delivery to her of parts of John Dick's body and said the reason the 40-year-old street car motorman was murdered was that he did not like her having anything to do with Bohozuk, a burly young steel worker who was angry at Dick "scandalizing his name."

She learned Dick was dead, the statement went on, through a telephone call from Bohozuk on March 6 and later that same day a man named Romanell delivered parts of Dick's body to her garage at 32 Carrick Ave.

Throughout the statement ran the name of William Bohozuk who at conclusion of the Hamilton widow's trial will stand trial himself, along with Donald MacLean, father of Mrs. Dick, charged with the same murder.

All four statements were read into court today before an Ontario Supreme Court jury to-day the seventh day of Mrs. Dick's sensational trial, outgrowth of the slaying which shocked this community by its brutality when the headless limbs of the slain man was found on Hamilton Mountain on March 16 last.

Looked Bored

Through it all—the reading of thousands of words of testimony—Mrs. Dick sat looking downcast, sometimes even bored and once she yawned.

The 26-year-old defendant's statements were loaded with details. She told how Romanell drove to her garage in a car which she had borrowed earlier in the day and loaned to him.

"I received a call from Romanell who said, 'I'm bringing the car back.' He brought the car into the back lane. I remarked that there was a lot of blood on the car and he said: 'That will come off all right.'"

"I stepped up in a place of cloth was a part of the face which was all smashed and some other parts which he said they had tried to burn and were not able to succeed in."

"Romanell removed the parts from the car and put them in the garage. He told me I was too bloody slow and was very mad because he wanted to get back up town."

Then, the statement said, Mrs. Dick drove Romanell up town and returned home.

"I told my mother that John had been fixed, put out of business and she said, 'well, they tried long enough' or words to that effect."

"She asked me: 'Is there anything out there?' and I told her there was a couple of pieces that they couldn't dispose of. She said: 'You had better get them out there.' Nothing was done and I was expecting someone to come and clean up the garage but they didn't show up."

She then told how last October the accused was seeing Bohozuk to the annoyance of John Dick and said she was intimate with Bohozuk on Oct. 8, only five days after she had married Dick.

"In Bumping-off Business"

Last November "Bill started to talk about getting rid of John because John was scandalizing his name among his friends... he went on to say that he was in the bumping-off business and I can get my gang to do it."

The statement said Bohozuk conferred with the gang during last Christmas week and "liked the job over" and she gave $200 to Bohozuk for a "down payment to the gang to do the job."

Statement number 4 was merely to the effect that she wanted to declare statement number 3 and number 2 false but that was the correct version and that she could not add anything further because she had been told by her counsel to keep her mouth shut "and nobody will shut it if I know what it means."

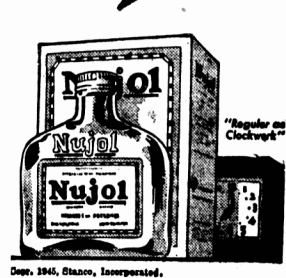

Statement number 1 told how John Dick had been slain by men she identified only as "a Windsor gang" and said the leader had asked her to meet him in a borrowed car and with him she drove to Hamilton Mountain where the torso of her husband was thrown. In this statement Bohozuk went unmentioned.

Then in statement number 2 she said she loaned Bohozuk money to dispose of her husband. It said Bohozuk "detested" her husband and they were bitter enemies; that Dick had nearly caused Bohozuk to lose his job as a steel worker.

Statement number 2 went on to recount how on March 6 Romanell and a man she did not know took John Dick for a ride in a car, during which there was some drinking. Dick became suspicious and said: "I won't come with you again, you Wop," and with with Nujol The easy-action laxative for ordinary constipation that Romanell let him have it" The statement said the car then was driven to a home in Hamilton's north end "and they stayed there for a little while disposing of parts of the limbs."

DURBAN PUTS STOP TO MONKEYSHINES

DURBAN, South Africa, Oct. 15—(CP)—Durban city has set aside $4,000 to trap all monkeys which are a danger or a nuisance to citizens. In recent years Durban's monkey population has become so numerous and so bold that housewives in some suburbs complain that it is not safe to leave anything out of doors. Bands of monkeys raid gardens and verandahs, making off with anything they can carry, especially fruit or vegetables. There have also been cases when monkeys have come through an open door or window and raided the pantry.

Efforts by ratepayers to trap them in the past have failed for the animals are too clever, and it now has been decided to pay an expert animal trapper to do the job and remove the monkeys to an estate well outside the city. The mayor, Senator S. J. Smith, said in council that the monkeys could not be shot as the public would never allow this.

Colonies of monkeys have for years lived in the bush bordering Durban's sea front and come up to people who have food for them. They can be seen climbing on a visitor's shoulder, feeling in his pockets, and exploring his car. The wise man empties his pockets of everything and locks his car before feeding the monkeys.

In parts of the Cape Province baboons are plaguing farmers because the eradication of a favorite baboon food—the prickly pear—has brought the animals out of the mountains into the flats in ever increasing numbers.
