Postoffice Savings Banks

Postoffice savings banks have increased in Canada from 81 in 1868 to 1,133 in 1910. During the same period, the deposits have grown from a comparatively small amount to the immense total of forty-three million dollars, of which one-half is in the old Government savings banks, and one-half in the postoffice savings banks proper. This seems satisfactory until the details are examined.

The first feature to be noted is that the annual deposits are steadily declining. In the year 1908, the people deposited twelve million dollars in the postoffice savings banks proper. In 1909, they deposited only nine and a half millions, and in 1910 a little less than nine millions. In other words the annual savings of the people, as shown by the deposits made with the postoffice have shown a remarkable decline. Is this due to a period of extravagance, or to a decline in the popularity of the postal banks?

In the second place, the unfavorable situation is rendered worse by the fact that the withdrawals exceed the deposits. In 1908, the people drew out $1,390,000 more than they deposited. In 1909, they drew out $3,700,000 more than they put in. In 1910, the withdrawals exceeded the deposits by approximately three million dollars. This is a situation which calls for examination of a serious nature. Either our people are getting careless, or there is something in connection with the postoffice savings banks which requires a remedy.—Canadian Courier.

Laurier and Bourassa.

In the fall of 1893 Sir Wilfrid Laurier personally introduced Mr. Henri Bourassa as the Liberal candidate for Labelle County, Quebec, and made a number of speeches in the riding in order to give his young friend a good send-off. In August, 1907, Mr. Bourassa, then a member of the House of Commons, attempted to denounce Sir Wilfrid in the latter's own Quebec constituency. On that memorable occasion, accompanied by Mr. Armand Lavergne, he started to speak from a platform on the Jacques Cartier Market square, St. Roche. A great crowd assembled, refused Bourassa a hearing, pelted him with stones, and raised a great disturbance in the neighborhood until far into the night. In the most recent act of the drama of Federal politics Mr. Bourassa appeared once more as the villain, so to speak. He has seen the star of the piece, his old chief and sponsor, dispossessed.

YOUR MORNING MAIL.

It May Be Dangerous to Open it at the Breakfast Table.

Did you ever hear that it is dangerous to open your morning mail at the breakfast table? According to a Berlin scientist, Professor Kron, and the London Lancet, it is dangerous—very. Professor Kron has succeeded in tracing several cases of contagion to the old custom of waiting until you sit down at the breakfast table before opening and going through your morning mail. He calls attention to the fact that the average man or woman goes down to breakfast with hands and face scrupulously clean, teeth scrubbed and throat gargled. In that condition he is prepared to eat without danger of swallowing more disease germs than may have possibly escaped the watchful attentions of the cook.

But instead of doing that he handles letters and papers which have passed through many hands before reaching his own. Between bites he opens envelopes and wrappers and in doing so unthinkingly paves the way for the absorption of all kinds of germs which may or may not do him a great deal of harm.

It has long been the custom in many well regulated households where the breakfast hour is fixed somewhat late and where the mail carrier gets around before breakfast is served to place each person's morning letters by his or her plate in the dining room. This, says the Lancet, is a custom which should be abolished at once. Letters should be opened and read either before or after breakfast, but never at the table during the handling of food.
