

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY OF CHARLOTTETOWN

Ladies and Gentlemen:

Having been solicited by a large number of the citizens and tax payers of Charlottetown to offer as a candidate for the Mayoralty at the forth coming election, I have consented to offer for the office and beg to solicit your support and influence.

An extended report of the past year's work is now before you. You will observe that we have succeeded to make revenues and expenditures meet and have a balance to the good.

My work at the Council Board is well known to most of the tax payers of the city and I think that I may fairly assume that the result of my work meets with the approval of the majority of the citizens.

Many of my friends believe that I am entitled to the position on account of my length of service to the city, having served for a greater length of time than any member of the Council Board and have performed the duties of my office in a fair and efficient manner since becoming a member of the Council.

If you do me the honor of election there will be nothing negative with regard to my policy for the forth coming term. I will use every effort to promote all and every good work undertaken by the Council for the general welfare and betterment of the city.

Charlottetown has made much progress in civic betterment in the past several years and I believe that I can claim a fair share of the credit for the progress that has been made. I will be unable to see personally the electors before polling day and rely upon the citizens of Charlottetown, whose sense of fair play and justice is well known, to rally to my support.

Yours respectfully, D. J. RILEY.

A SUMMONS TO MARION CHAPTER 43.

For just a moment Robert hesitated. Then he said, "The message is from Marion. The message is from Marion. Marion is sick and wants to see me." "One would think you were her father confessor," I spoke as lightly as I could. Invariably I tried to conceal my jealousy of Marion.

"Oh, Robert! I can't disappoint Mary. Her heart would break if she did not accept her invitation to dinner." "So would mine! I will go with you, then after dinner will run over to Marion's for a while, then come back after you. You will enjoy a quiet chat with Mary."

"I said nothing either for or against his plan. He had decided what he would do, I would not object. I may have been wrong in my ready acquiescence to all of Robert's ideas, but he was so visibly unhappy over his loss of a position, that I had no heart to oppose him in any way.

Before he went to bed, I saw him surreptitiously take the message from his pocket and read it again. Then he turned up. I felt hurt that he had not shown it to me instead of telling me what was in it; but I said nothing, and pretended to be busy fixing my waist. I had decided to wear my tailored suit and an old waist so that I might help Mary with her work.

"What are you fixing that old thing for? I thought you told me it was worn out long ago. Got to wear old clothes now that you have a big husky husband to support!" he said with bitterness.

"Nothing of the sort! I said this waist was too shabby to wear in the shop, but it is freshly laundered and with a little fixing, I can wear it tomorrow. Then I can help Mary do up her work without feeling I am spilling my clothes."

"Explanation accepted," Robert replied humbly. The morning dawned bright and lovely, as we were not to be at Mary's until 2 o'clock, I proposed to Robert that we take a nice long walk. He was so restless, so uneasy, that I too was nervous watching him fidget.

"One would think I was hunting an employer instead of a job," he explained indignantly. "Well, aren't you hunting an employer?" I replied laughing. "Maybe! they aren't falling over me."

each other looking for me." "Come on, lets walk up through the park. We can rest as often as we like, and still reach Mary's on time."

"The lovely day seemed to have its effect upon Robert's spirits, and we were soon chatting and laughing together as we had not done in days.

"Seems good to go out alone once more, doesn't it, Gerry?" he asked, as we sat under an arborescens trellis, resting.

"Indeed it does! Really, Robert, I think you aunt nearly made us twice glad," as Mother used to say.

"Three times would be better. You were awfully good to her, Gerry."

"Why shouldn't I be? I really tried to do everything I could for her, Robert. I hope she won't think too hard of my sending her home."

"She'll get over it, and so will we. It's a quarter of two. We will have to hurry or Mary's dinner will be cold—that is, if she has it on time."

L. B. MILLER'S CARD

To The Electors of Ward Five, Ladies and Gentlemen:—For three consecutive terms you have done me the honor of electing me as one of your representatives at the Council Board, and now in obedience to a general request, I gladly comply with your wishes to nominate again, and take this means of soliciting your support on the 11th inst.

The Ballot Act was framed for the protection of the voter. I have always respected it by refraining from a personal canvass.

Much as has been done for the Ward during the last few years, much remains to be done, and to accomplish it in part without involving the City is impossible.

The General Pitt Rivers, owned by the city, MUST be opened up, it contains in abundance the material required on our streets, and quite within the means of the civic finances.

The Dominion Housing scheme should be taken up at once with the Provincial Government for the housing problem is becoming serious in Charlottetown.

Having succeeded in getting a lease of a large portion of Bridge Hill from the Military authorities, and the building houses erected there in, it can be made into a delightful Park for old and young at little or no expense. The eastern portion of the city is entitled to it. A gentleman has already offered to supply a fountain—now that arrangements has been received and the place with water.

I believe in improvements, constant with our means. Trusting that my work in the past warrants a continuance of your confidence, I am, Obediently yours, L. B. MILLER.
