

SAVE THE CHILDREN and YOU SAVE THE WORLD

European children by the millions are dying of starvation or cold. This winter's need is desperate! We must send them food, clothing and medicine. A cheque from you—no matter how small—will bring some relief.

Here is an opportunity to help through the Save the Children Fund, an organization of world repute and continuously in operation since World War I. Chief Justice McRuer of Toronto is Chairman of the Canadian Committee, and Mr. J. O. Hyndman is the Prince Edward Island representative on said Committee.

Second Export Bacon Show Charlottetown, February 19th.

A second Export Bacon Show, sponsored by the P. E. I. Swine Breeders Association and supported by the Provincial and Dominion Departments of Agriculture will be held in the Market Building, Charlottetown, on Tuesday afternoon, February 19th. The annual meeting of the P. E. I. Swine Breeders Association will be held on the evening of the same day at eight o'clock.

All Island hog producers are invited to make entries in this Show with one hog constituting an entry by each producer. Each entry must be delivered to Davis & Fraser Limited on February 12th or February 15th. Truckers and loading agents are invited to solicit entries from their patrons. All hogs entered in this Show will be slaughtered promptly and the selection of twenty-five carcasses nearest the ideal export weight of 150 pounds will be made from the total entries. The twenty-five carcasses thus selected will be eligible to compete for prize money.

Producers intending to enter hogs at this Show should promptly secure application forms which should be completed and returned as soon as possible and preferably not later than February 9th.

This show is sponsored to present a clear picture of the suitability of Island hogs for the Export Market. This Show should be of distinct educational value and producers who have market hogs of suitable type and approaching desirable market weights are invited to support this important event.

Application entry blanks as well as additional details pertaining to this Show may be obtained by writing to S. D. Irvine, Secretary, P. E. I. Swine Breeders Association, Box 489, Charlottetown.

Hampton

Mr. Elmer Inman returned this week after having a successful operation in the F. H. I. Hospital.

Mr. Harry Campbell who spent the last few months in the Nova Scotia woods, has returned to his duties in the Hampton garage.

Miss Emma Dugg and Miss Lilla Jenkins, teachers of South Melville and Hampton, spent the weekend at their homes in Millview.

Mr. Robert Norton who recently returned from overseas is spending a few days in Hampton guest of his father-in-law, Mr. George Cannon.

Mr. and Mrs. David Cameron returned this week from a visit to Halifax. They were called there because of the illness of Mrs. Cameron's father, Mr. Herbert Farrow.

Messrs. Charles Dunford, Bill MacQuarrie, Donald MacQuarrie and Miss Mildred Myers, students at Prince of Wales College, spent the weekend at their homes in Hampton.

A large crowd attended the game in Victoria rink on Tuesday night between Victoria Unions and Charlottetown Canadians. Keep up the good work boys, and let us see more games soon. It is understood the Victoria rink will be closed for this season.

Mr. Lorne Ferguson entertained a number of friends to a chicken supper at her home on Monday, Jan. 28 in honor of her small daughter, Buelah, it being her 8th birthday. An enjoyable time was had by the guests who departed after wishing Miss Buelah many more happy birthdays.

Many attended the funeral of the former Union Church pastor, Rev. D. J. Morrison which took place in the Union Church on Feb. 2. He was well beloved by all who knew him and the sympathy of the Hampton people will be with Mrs. Morrison and family in their great loss.

Most of the Hampton boys have returned from overseas. Messrs. Clifford Best and Arthur Myers are in Halifax at present getting their discharge papers while Willard Pail, Russell Campbell, Rowan Ferguson, Ralph Cameron and James Ferguson have already received theirs and are hard at work again. Cpl. Elton Dunford is the only boy still in Germany.

On Thursday evening, Jan. 31 a number of friends gathered at the home of Mrs. Ferguson and Mrs. Wilfred Ferguson, Hampton, on the occasion being their 23rd wedding anniversary and also the 81st birthday of Mr. Ferguson's uncle, Douglas MacKinnon. The chief event of the evening was a delicious supper prepared and served by Mrs. Ferguson in a room which cannot be surpassed.

The evening was spent in congenial conversation and pleasant conversation. Before the guests departed a vote of thanks, which was graciously accepted by Mrs. Ferguson and seconded by Mr. MacQuarrie was tendered to the host and hostess for their hospitality. Mrs. Ferguson responded in her usual gracious manner with a few well chosen words, after which all sang "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows" and "God Save the King". Then all wished their way home and departed wishing Mr. and Mrs. Ferguson and uncle Douglas many more happy anniversaries.

CHAPTER II

Rupert had spoken to Kitty's host and hostess as the party reached the hotel entrance. There had been a street brawl and the police had thrown a guard around the almost deserted car. He had never since left the car. And he looked at Kitty with a cold stare. He wasn't flirting. He was very sober and direct about the whole thing. The woman was suddenly and intensely a part of his heart and nature. He waited to protect her, if she would have it. Kitty would. She had looked at him and said simply, "How very kind you are to know her."

They dropped their friends at the village, went on to their cafe and danced a little, talked till dawn, then walked bare-headed, Kitty with her dress coat around her shoulders, through the narrow cobbled streets at sunrise to watch the last fair day of the year. Three nights later Rupert asked her to marry him.

It took Kitty exactly forty-eight hours to say "yes." She had time to think of "Lawrence" and "My freedom" and "Rupert's first wife" and "Godfrey's suicide" and "That month in Italy" and "Suburban life" and a sigh, "Oh, ban life!" and then, "The Past." The fact of Rupert's son had caused her a concern at all. She was sure from his description that the boy was fine and gay and that they would be great friends.

As she stepped on the floor of her room Kitty went on taking a mental inventory. Some of the things she had seen and heard through the window were rather different. Now between them was this bridge and the house, and the house, and the house. She had seen the bridge, the house, and the house. She had seen the bridge, the house, and the house.

She thought of Rupert sometimes happily, sometimes with a rush of sadness and queer foreboding far out of her mind. This sprang from the thought of his first wife, the innocent enduring shrine of a heart as she, Kitty, to compete with her. She had seen the bridge, the house, and the house. She had seen the bridge, the house, and the house.

Soft bright melodies drifted up to her. The obnoxious hubbub of a cocktail party, the strains of a waltz, the strains of a waltz. She moved to her window, saw the pink, hanging by his tail, her downy hair, his eyes upon her, eating a ripe fruit beyond him the sun-drenched grape of the Riviera, pink, comely on the soft west wind, past her thoughtless eyes the full sails of a regatta sailing across the white-flecked Mediterranean.

She thought, "This is my life. All the sounds below me, music, laughter, slang, wit, cocktails, the zip and sting of good conversation, the inner decency of conduct, the outward carelessness and ease among the men and women of my world. Rupert is from another. He is strong, powerful, kind. He will be a gentle lover yet I know the passion which his gentleness will bring with the gentleness. At least at thirty-nine I have the power to hold the fire in my blood at peace. He will bring me other compensations. I shall be proud, and oh, I shall be true!"

And then she was startled to find herself crying for herself, her two hands, the beautifully shaped blood nails, the green emerald.

Britain Acclaims Canadians Poetry

TORONTO, Feb. 9.—(CP)—Charles Bruce, Canadian newspaperman, has just come out with a second book of verse. He calls it "Grey Ship sailing."

The 16 poems done over the last dozen years include "Personal Note," a tightly-written columnar poem in verse which set down in 1941 Bruce's "statement of belief" at a time when the world was in turmoil, many of his friends were overseas, and he was in Toronto. Within three years he was CP's London Superintendent overseas and against the time he had been in Belgium with a flat-hit bomber's crew.

This working Canadian newspaperman's verse is acclaimed in Britain, where "Grey Ship sailing" is published simultaneously. After its publication in the English poet, Wilford, says Bruce's work "like that of Walt Whitman and Robert Frost, is vital with the very stuff of life, and never merely a rehash of literary reminiscences."

In his 20 years as a newspaperman Bruce never went literary. Now General Superintendent of "The Canadian Press," he started out to be a reporter and wound up handling other men's copy. He explains his leisure-time poetry thus: "It is perhaps only natural that a desk man, who rarely gets a chance to go out on a big story, should sometimes feel like having his own." Under the circumstances it is not unusual if the form in which he says it differs radically from that of the writing he turns out. Under the circumstances it is not unusual if the form in which he says it differs radically from that of the writing he turns out.

Against white, pressed against her fluffing temples, half-covered in the sifting honey-colored hair that fell wearily across her cheeks and stayed out two days later and the Captain gave them a champagne supper with left-over souvenirs from previous ship's benefits, much to Kitty's amusement. BRITONS BUILD LONDON —(CP)—About 500 to 600 houses are built every week in the United Kingdom, and the Ministry of Health has stated that there is sufficient timber in the country to satisfy all building demands for at least a year. Plans have already been made for the provision of more afterwards.

BACK TO THE TOWER
 LONDON —(CP)—The Tower of London, open only to servicemen during the war, now is accessible to the general public. The Tower received 15 direct hits from high explosive bombs during the war, but the damage was so slight that it was dropped within its walls, but no vital damage was done.
