Is a Man of 30 Foolish to Step Out With a Woman Who is Separated From Her Husband?—Distracted Husband of Bridge-Playing Wife—Warning to Hopeless Lover

Dear Miss Dix—A pal of mine, a likable young fellow of 30 is stepping out with a woman ten years his senior—a married woman who has not lived with her husband for three years.

correct thing to do. He can see no harm in it and asks my reasons for objecting.

Answer:

If the woman were living with her husband, it would certainly be very wrong for your friend to pay her any attentions which might tend to win her heart away from her lawful male and fill him with jealousy.

It has always seemed to me that there were no more dastardly men and women than the home-wrecking crew whose fiendish work we are called upon so often to behold.

We have all seen a woman, who, for the sake of gratifying her own vanity and for the cruel delight she had in torturing a sister woman, flatters and cajoles a married man until she makes him fall in love with her.

But when a woman has been separated from her husband for three years she automatically takes on the status of a divorcee and there is no reason why any man should not pay her attentions if he wishes to.

He is in no way responsible for the break between her and her husband, and he does nothing to augment the trouble between them.

Your friend's age, too, should make a difference in your attitude toward the subject. If he were a young and inexperienced boy, you would have reason to think that it was a foolish thing, and one likely to get him into trouble.

Dear Dorothy Dix—I am a young man, married, and with a darling baby. Our home should be a happy one, but it is miserable because my wife's only aim in life is to go from one bridge party to another.

No. When a woman is lazy and pleasure-mad, nothing short of a miracle will change her and I have no magic by which I can work such big medicine as you require.

I often wonder if there is any other man in the world who gets such

Illustrated Dressmaking Lesson Furnished With Every Pattern

By Annabelle Worthington

Delightfully young and smart is this new slim-line model.

Since crepe silk both plain and print is so charming 'neath the fur wrap, it was chosen for this fascinating model.

It is sapphire blue spotted in a deeper tone. The soft crushed scarf collar gave it much distinction in plain white crepe.

Another ideal suggestion is plain brown crepe with chartreuse green. Black with white is always chic.

You'll find it very simple to fashion, and the cost unbelievably small. Style No. 899 is designed in sizes 16, 18, 20 years, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust.

Be sure to fill in the size of the pattern. Send stamps or coin (coin preferred).

Price of pattern 15 cents.

a jolt in matrimony as the one who marries a pretty spic-and-span young girl, who has always been alert and interested in everything, and who finds when he gets her home that he has got a sloven who doesn't think it worth while to keep herself or her house neat, and who is a quitter and a slacker who just simply lies down on her part of the matrimonial partnership and refuses to carry her share of the load.

Certainly there can be nothing more disillusioning to a man who has always been used to a clean, orderly home and well-prepared food than to come back to a house that is as dirty as a pigpen and to sit down to food that would kill an ostrich.

What to do with that kind of wife is a problem that is hard to solve. Certainly a man does not help matters by meekly putting up with it and doing the cleaning and washing and cooking that she should do.

Because very few women want to give up their homes and to have to go out into the world and support themselves instead of having a husband to do it. They know that they are better off married than single, and if they had to give their husbands good food and a clean hearth, they would do it, rather than go back to standing behind a counter or pounding a typewriter.

Failure to support is a ground for a divorce for women. Failure to be good housekeepers should be an equal ground for divorce for men, and if women knew this a lot of them would take to sweeping under

Dear Miss Dix—I am in love with a married man with one child. What shall I do?

LOUISE.

Answer: Do as you would want some other woman to do if she loved your husband. You would want her to let him alone. You would want her to refuse to see him or to think about him or to have anything to do with him. Try that.

BUTTERSCOTCH SHORTCAKES WITH CREAM Cream 1/2 cup of butter; beat in 1

Butterscotch Sauce

Turn 1 cup of cream, 1 cup of sugar and 1 cup of dark corn syrup into a double boiler. Mix thoroughly and let cook over boiling water for one hour; then beat in 1 dessert-spoonful of butter and 1/2 teaspoon of vanilla extract. Garnish the dish with whipped cream.

The canvasser was concluding his talk. "Well, Mrs. Jones, I hope I can count on your husband's supporting me," she said. "Supporting you," replied Mrs. Jones, "why 'e ain't even supported me for the last five years!"

PREVENT Coughs - Colds Scott's Emulsion

She turned homeward at last, saying half aloud:

"Heavens, what an unearthly muddle life is! And where's the truth to be found?" It was a cry from the depths of her poor, puzzled heart, and she felt the sting of tears in her eyes.

On reaching the flat, she found a fresh and unexpected perplexity awaiting her; Oliver Ames.

He was just going up to the door, and turned as he saw her approaching. Her heart quickened, and she forced back the tears that had been fighting to master her. But the necessity for quick thinking steadied her. (To Be Continued)

"Oh, Lucy, I was racked with jealousy, I admit it I had thought he was so absolutely mine. Remember, that only an hour before he had been... well, letting me think that nothing could ever take him from me..."

Jocelyn bowed her head into her hands. "It's so awfully hard on us both," came her muffled voice. "So awfully hard, Lucy. To miss the only thing in life that is worth while..."

It was rather hard on Lucy, too; but that aspect of it didn't seem so hard to her. And Lucy had determined to think only of Jim, and so she didn't let it strike her either.

"Jocelyn," she said slowly. "Will you leave things as they are for a while? Perhaps only for a day or two... Just to give me time to think and get this clean. It isn't altogether easy to straighten things out, all in a moment..."

Jocelyn looked up sharply. "What do you mean by leaving things?" she asked. "We'll, don't try to see Jim..."

what has happened to-day. I must think. But I promise you, I'll try all I know, to make things easier... to be fair to you—both." Her voice shook slightly. Jocelyn was silent a moment; then she said: "Then you are not going to speak to Jim about it?"

"You are right," put in Jocelyn, instantly. "Much better to leave it for a while... I will be brave..."

There was a silence; then the might know I couldn't," she said, in sound of Lady Cordelia's voice from the hall made Lucy start for the door.

"Your mother," she said quickly "I can't see anyone... I'll go..." Her lips trembled badly.

Jocelyn started up and caught her arm. "She'll go to her room before coming here... Wait a second to give her time..."

There Lucy hesitated; then turned swiftly, caught Jocelyn's arm and said quickly:

"Jocelyn, you have told me the truth? You wouldn't... you couldn't say such things if they were not true?"

Jocelyn's queer, perky little face look on a hurt almost martyred look.
