ELOQUENT SERMONS.—In the absence of the pastor, Mr. Turner of Charlottetown occupied the pulpit of the Pownal Methodist Church on Sunday morning and evening. The subject of the morning's discourse was the 1st v. of the 59th Ch. of Isaiah "Behold, the Lord's Hand is not shortened, that it cannot save; neither His ear heavy, that it cannot hear." The text was handled by the speaker in his usual forceful and convincing manner. In the evening the text was from the 15th Ch. of St. Luke, and the last word of the 17th v. "Hungen." This text taken from the parable of the "Prodigal Son," was dealt with in a clear, concise, eloquent and masterly discourse, which was listened to by the large congregation with rapt attention and at the close the speaker was heartily congratulated by many on his splendid presentation of this much preached parable, all pronouncing it the best exposition on this subject that has been delivered in the church. It is some time since the congregation has had the pleasure of having Mr. Turner with them, and he received a right hearty welcome.—Com.

HAZELBROOK MEETING.—The annual meeting of the Hazelbrook Dairying Co., was held in the schoolhouse at Hazelbrook on January 23rd quite a large representation of shareholders and patrons being present. THE MINISTER'S WIFE

"Her husband is known in the gates when he sitteth among the elders of the land."
A preacher can put a poor sermon over a congregation easier than he can a poor wife. The modest but essential requirements of the ordinary minister's wife are piety, health, economy, education, zeal, tact, style and wisdom. She should know how to sing and sew to pray and play at prayer-meeting. She must be good-looking and adapted to wearing plain and cast-off clothes. She must be poor in spirit, long suffering and a confirmed pacifist. She must wear low heels and high socks. Blessed are the peace-makers, and she shall be one of them. Her husband draws the salary for his services, and she is thrown in for good measure. At receptions, where he gets gold rings, travelling bags, learned books and verbal puffs, she sits in the corner and is content with a few pinks. Like the moon, she seems to shine with borrowed light. John Wesley wrote tactfully to his amiable wife: "Be content to be a private, insignificant person, known and loved by God—and me!" Her rewards are ten per cent off at the department store, her obituary read at the Conference, a honary (for the first time) in heaven where she generally arrives, much the worse for wear and somewhat in advance of her husband.

The itinerant discipline is particularly severe on women. Parsonages queens frequently feel anything but queenly about moving time. Tipping up your carpets from the floors and your children from the schools, while your few surviving friends fall on your neck and scald your back with hot tears, and then speeding away on top of an auto truck, or in a freight train to the Lord knows where, isn't exactly designed to set even an angel to singing, "In Living in Beulah Land." But the minister's wife is expected to do so.

A crafty presiding elder who liked to be invited to supper at the parsonages in the district, and therefore wanted to stand in well with the "queens," once bid for favor and at the same time punctured his preachers, by expressing in his Conference report the following sentiment:—"Would God these devoted sisters had married husbands to match." The reaction was at once so obviously and painfully true as to gain general assent. Moreover, no preacher present dared refuse to join heartily in the generous applause. The elder "got their goats." If a preacher-man had a particularly able and brilliant mate he felt that everyone at that moment was looking at him and knew that the best way to cover his embarrassment was to join without delay in the popular merriment. If, on the other hand, he had loved (and married) not wisely, but too well—still it was prudent not to show that he knew he was "hard hit. It was a coup d'etat. The wives got their full deserts for once. But that elder never knew why he lost at one blow two-thirds of his popularity with those preachers.

As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is a wife with an independent income to an itinerant preacher. As seven palm trees and three wells of water to travellers in the desert, so is a wealthy woman in the parsonage to a poor church. She can have a maid and sealskin sack without sin, and verify the heart of her husband doth safely trust in her.

The preacher seldom experiences any difficulty in obtaining a mate, so great is the heroism of modern woman. But in the resurrection, whose wife would she be?—Tobias Good-enough, in "The California Advocate."
