Wednesday In The Provincial Legislature

Mr. Lea then said that a statement which he was said to have made, that he "would take the people by the nose and pour their medicine down their throat," had never been made by him.

Mr. Lea expressed himself as being somewhat surprised at the senator member of the City of Charlottetown, one of the proprietors of the "Guardian"—saying such a thing. Mr. Lea particularly objected to such a statement—and thought that when a newspaper is so small as to refer editorially to the English of a member of the House, it was pretty bad.

Some rather lively and interesting crossfiring here ensued about this statement.

Hon. Mr. Lea—then went on to discuss his visit overseas, explaining that the delegates were continually on the move—either meeting officials or being entertained.

The Danish settlers in New Brunswick are an excellent class of men. But the first consideration is to keep our own people on the land, or to get those of them who have gone away to resettle on the land.

What revenues have we now? The revenues have been reduced $70,000.00 over what the Bell government was receiving. They had in mind, no doubt, that they could more than make up this amount by revenues accruing from the introduction of Government Control.

The Minister of Agriculture went on to condemn Government Control as a means of raising revenue saying that we shouldn't put a mark of respectability on such a business.

Gentlemen said in the election that because Prohibition could not be thoroughly enforced it should be repealed. On this line of argument one would say that because enforcing cannot be completely suppressed, the revenue laws should be abolished—Oh yes! I haven't finished what I was talking about, the revenues of the province.

The Government Control proposition was turned down, and with a premier enforcement of Prohibition, the loss then will be $57,000.00 added to the $70,000.00. We are getting $165,000.00 and the incorporated towns are claiming a portion of that. And we are losing in all about $130,000.00. Where are we to find the revenues? It is proposed the school teachers organize for more pay.

Such is the propaganda put forth by these six professional men (the members of the Opposition). Then where could we find the money for Old Age Pensions? Taxes should be greater each year, rather than less. Revenues must increase. And yet these gentlemen threw away $70,000.00. They are a cheap class of politicians!

I'm not going to go on to the level of my hon. friend from Charlottetown. He isn't the word record yet. I believe that is held by the Dictator of Turkey, who spoke eight hours on the floor of the House. My hon. friend should go into training to beat him.

Our hon. friend has thrown on us the burden of conducting this government with greatly decreased revenue in the face of greatly increased demands. It is necessary for us to press for all we can get from Ottawa.

Mr. Lea here adverted to the Duncan Award, claiming that this was due to the Liberal Government at Ottawa.

"Well," he went on to say, "we are prepared to carry out our platform. We will enforce Prohibition to the best of our ability. (Here the speaker quoted testimony to the effect that the enforcement was effectively driving the bootleggers out of business.)

It isn't the opinion of my hon. friend from Charlottetown, who is an able debater, in my own opinion we are getting opinions from the Members of the Incorporated towns, the Chief of Police of Charlottetown, and from many clergy, several of whom were not in favor of Prohibition, that enforcement was much improved.

Mr. A. MacPhee (Lib.)—After extending his compliments to the speaker and the mover and the sender of the Draft Address and paying a tribute to the ex-members of the House who had passed away, said that he couldn't understand why any man should spend a whole day in talking. He felt that if Dr. MacMillan had condensed his speech to an hour's length, it would have been better. He was in favor of limitation in the length of speeches, similar to that in force in Ottawa.

The speaker went on to enumerate the manifold blessings that Providence had vouchsafed our land. He made fitting allusions to the visit of our distinguished guests, and spoke optimistically of Canada's future.

He alluded to some of the obstacles to the Island's growth in the past, with special reference to the winter service. (It being 6 o'clock the House adjourned till 8 p.m.)

(The House resumed at 8 p.m.) Mr. MacPhee, continuing his address, thought it was evident that, in this Province, we must go in for increased breeding of horses.

Every farmer should at least feed enough for his own use. Western horses, he claimed, were on the point of becoming scarce. He predicted that within five years, they would be quite high in price.

Hog Grading.—Mr. MacPhee did not think the farmers would be in favor of compulsory grading.

Prohibition.—The hon. member thought that there was no need of a deceptive canvass, as he and his colleague could have been elected if they had just stayed at home and done nothing. He favoured Prohibition, and had always been sincere about it. Conditions, he claimed, were much worse before the law had been adopted.

Hon. G. S. Inman.—Referred in enthusiastic terms to the wonderful progress which our country has made between 1867 and today. The century is indeed our century.

Mr. Inman was of the opinion that the visits of distinguished guests did much to bring us nearer to the heart of the Motherland. Particularly was he pleased with the visit of Premier Baldwin. Premier Baldwin and his party stated that outside of Toronto, they had received the best reception on Prince Edward Island. And they thought, also, that outside of Toronto, they had never seen a finer body of people than that which greeted them on Queen Square that memorable night.

Prince Edward Islanders went. It would be better, get into the habit of looking on our delegates, not as party delegates, but as provincial delegates.

During the whole of the deliberations there was not an unkind word or a harsh remark. The proceedings were largely informal, and the third of the propositions were made without the speakers rising to their feet at any time.

The Duncan Report.—The hon. Leader of the Opposition stated the Duncan Report was due to the efforts of the Maritime Board of Trades and other bodies. Mr. Inman thought it was rather due to the interest taken in the matter by Premier King and advanced some arguments which had already been put forward by previous speakers.

Prohibition.—The hon. Leader of the Opposition said this is a closed book. But notice that as far as the Conservative press is concerned it is a very open book, which of these speak for the Conservative party, the leader, or the party press? Either the leader hasn't got his press very well in hand, or he is out of tune with the party itself.

The Liberal and Conservative parties have each got a history on the Prohibition question. But the Conservative party, in adopting the policy of Government Control has gone back on its history. Both parties, at different times, wished to take credit for having passed it, or amendments to it. Thus, in 1918, the Conservatives passed an Act much more drastic than the original act had been.

With regard to enforcement, in 1917, Premier Matheson established a Commission "in order that the enforcement of the liquor law might be untrammelled by political influence." Mr. Inman went on to give a resume of the methods which had been used to enforce the law. The speaker then read an editorial from the Guardian of November, 1926, proposing to show the adhesion of the Conservative party to the Prohibition law at that time. Like other speakers on the government side, Mr. Inman thought a plebiscite held at the same time as the election would have been the right policy.

The Hon. Leader of the Opposition says that he did not take it to the country for political purposes. He had a majority of fifteen. Why did he not pass his Act through the House?

Dr. MacMillan.—We believe in consulting the people. Mr. Inman—I am sorry it has been brought into politics. Other measures should have been taken to settle it. Let us have the plebiscite in 1929, settle the matter, and get back to politics again, and have done with the unseemly wrangling which surrounds this question.

The speaker went on to say that it was not correct to say that seven of the provinces had gone "wet." They had only had "dry" laws since 1918, and had simply returned to conditions they had had before. Prince Edward Island, on the other hand, has been dry for twenty-five years. So a compensation is not fair.

Hon. Jeremiah Blanchard.—Repudiated the charges of carrying on an unfair campaign which had been charged against his party. The agents of the Conservative party had committed every political crime that it is possible to commit. He then gave certain instances of what he considered to be unfair campaign practices, of the Conservatives which had come under his own personal observation.

He said that Conservatives alleged that a certain passage from Isaiah, printed in the "Temperance Bulletin" was designed by its authors to cast discredit upon the Roman Catholic clergy. They used this in their canvass.

The speaker went on to criticize the Conservative policy in cutting down taxation, quoting certain deficits they had as a result of this. Did they do anything, in their regime to assist the teachers? Mr. Blanchard then went on to deal with the questions of the failures in Prince of Wales College.

Provincial Conference.—Mr. Blanchard went back some years, and charged the former Conservative governments of the past with negligence in pressing the claims of the Province.

With reference to the Duncan Commission the speaker covered much the same ground as had been traversed by foregoing speakers on the government side of the House. The action of the late government in lowering taxation, he claimed, would embarrass the Province when they asked assistance from the Dominion Government in the way of larger subsidies.

Mr. Blanchard brought up the question of Government House, and asked what had become of the furniture. He claimed it was looted. He expressed the hope that as the Conservatives lived in glass houses they would not throw any stones at the Liberals, when it came to the Budget debate.

Prohibition.—The speaker expressed himself as being proud of his stance. He was content that the mothers of the children of this country would never vote to have open liquor shops in this province—in the plebiscite of 1929. If people take so much trouble to get liquor now, what will they do when there is open sale.

He claimed that in their campaign the Conservatives were very vague as to the quantity of liquor which might be obtained under a permit, and also the cost of the permit. He claimed that the large majorities he had received, were largely due to the speeches of the Honourable friend from Charlottetown, (Dr. MacMillan).

Hon. Mr. Butler.—Repudiated accusations of unfair campaign methods. He explained that, at a
