The Woman Who Loved and Earned

BY JANE PHELPS
A Modern Story of Home and Business

UNCERTAINTY

CHAPTER 74.

I realized that a business woman could not always be at her best socially. I was often so tired I scarcely could drag myself home and once there would have liked to flop down on the couch as I formerly had often done, and remain there all the evening, utterly relaxed. But I never had allowed myself that luxury, I knew that Robert was sensitive—foolishly, I thought—on the subject. He wanted me to be as gay—or to act so at least—as the other women we knew, who lived quietly at home; or he blamed my being in business for my lack.

Really, when I thought things over, it seemed to me that Robert had blamed my being a business woman for everything disagreeable that had happened, and it was unfair of him. I never had done as I well know some women do—talk of my salary, what I earned. While we had had no real arrangement, which ever one had money with them at a time he had given every cent he would when we were married. I must do something to give him back that faith—but what?

Naturally, I predicted either his success or failure upon the salary he received. He had been earning $40 a week, soon after we were married. Now he got $20—just half. When one thought of it—why it was discouraging, to me as well as to him. More so, because I had married him believing him a clever fellow, who would soon make a pronounced success as a high-class salesman, a very good position nowadays, and one which gave a man a good standing.

It may seem strange that as my disappointment in Robert increased, my love for him grew also. But it was a different sort of love. Pride in his achievement was gone, and in its place a sort of mothering that real mothers often give incapable children, had come. I felt a certain devotion to him, instead of a dependence upon him.

There was one thing I didn't then understand. Now I know it was because I didn't bring my common sense to bear upon it. Robert had loved me devotedly before we were married, and during the first few months of our married life. He may have loved me still just as much but he did things he would not have done then. I had changed in no single particular. That he had expected me to be different, I could not imagine; that his love had changed when conditions were the same, was an enigma I could not solve.

"I do love you just the same, Gerry," he had replied the only time I had mentioned this feeling. But there had been no real warmth, no spontaneity in his answer. Frankly I felt more certain than ever that he had changed, and was sorry I had spoken.

It wasn't easy to visit with Robert any more, not in the old chummy way we had done when first married. He was impatient short in his answers if I asked a question, seemingly uninterested in most things I proposed. He wouldn't enthuse over anything—and his enthusiasms had been one of his most lovable traits.

"I wish we might have a nice long talk-just like we used to," Robert, I said one night, when after he finished reading, he started for bed.

"There's nothing to talk about except your success, and I know all about that."

"I sold Mrs. Van Duzen three hats today. Madame Leets was delighted. My sales this month have been really enormous. I think I am in line for another raise, or at least a commission on all over a certain amount."

"You don't seem one single bit interested! I can't make you out."

"Don't seem very well acquainted with myself lately," was all he said.

Tomorrow—Bitter Words.

HORSES WITH ITCHY MANES

My horses seem to rub out their manes and tails. I thought this might be caused by some kind of an itch. Can you advise me in this matter?

J. M.
Reply: Prepare an ointment of equal parts by bulk of vaseline and sulphur, adding about 5 per cent carbolic acid. Mix thoroughly. Wash the mane and tail well with soap and water and when dry, rub in the ointment. Repeat the ointment in three days.

Appendicitis is rare among persons of less than ten years of age or more than fifty years. These limits, however, are far from being absolute.

BATTERY CHARGING FROM EXTERNAL SOURCES

Battery Manufacturers' Instructions Should Be Followed

Every battery bears a plate upon which a maximum or starting charging rate and the finish rate are given in amperes. The former is the largest amperage that should be put into the battery and should not be continued long after the cells give off gas freely. The latter is a safe rate to use when a cell is already charged to the gassing point and is used for long periods in restoring a badly sulphated battery. The procedure in recharging is something like this: Fill all cells to normal level with distilled water; apply charging current at starting rate until the liquid bubbles freely, then reduce the current to the finish rate and continue it until the liquid level in the hydrometer or until the readings cease to increase with further charging. How long current will be kept on, depends upon the condition of the battery. Batteries that have lain discharged may require the finish rate for days or this rate may have to be applied for long periods to bring up one "dead" cell. In charging from a direct current supply circuit, its positive wire must be attached to the battery terminal marked positive (and vice versa) and in no other manner. By holding the bare ends of the two charging wires apart in a glass of slightly acid water, gas will be given off freely from both ends and will be freely from the other. The latter is the positive and should be connected to the positive terminal of the battery. The gas formed when a battery is bubbling is highly explosive and open lights or sparks should not be allowed in the vicinity.

CHEESE PRICES LESS; IS HARD TO SHIP

MONTREAL, March 8.—Prices on cheese are somewhat easier, and new cheese is being quoted to the small trade at 22 1/2 cents per lb. The sterling exchange arrangement is altogether a serious impediment to shipping overseas, and while there have been enquiries from Belgium, France, and other points, it is stated that the exchange rates have precluded the possibility of business being done in a large way while these conditions last. While recent shipments have totalled up better than expected, the approach of the new season will tend to so increase supply here as to provoke more favorable prices, or, in other words, lower prices to the trade. It is understood that holders will suffer considerable losses in cheese which has been held, and which was bought before exchange rates took so drastic a turn.

MRS. ROSE SPANG'S DAUGHTER GIVEN $2,000,000 ESTATE

NEW YORK, March 9.—Mrs. Rose E. Spang, the widow who left the bulk of her $2,000,000 estate to three executors for the establishment of a home for babies, in a will made out the day before she died at the Waldorf-Astoria, June 22 last, was insane at the time she made the will, a jury in the surrogate's court has decided.

This verdict, which was reached after the jury had been out for twelve hours and fifteen minutes, substantiates the contention of Mrs. Mabel Crome-Ancker, daughter of Mrs. Spang, that her mother, in cutting her off with only a small annuity, was insane at the time of the will, and that the will should be declared void.

Under the terms of a previous will Mrs. Crome-Ancker is left an annuity of $100,000, as well as the largest part of the estate. The second will provided that the bulk of the Spang estate should go to the establishment of a Rose E. Spang foundation, named George W. Wickensham, Colonel Michael Friedsam and Dr. Henry Dwight Chapin as trustees. Mrs. Spang was seventy-six years old at the time of her death.

When Charles Spang died leaving an estate of $8,000,000, most of which went to charity, he bequeathed an annuity of $20,000 to his daughter, Mrs. Spang's death would have the daughter receive an additional $10,000 annually for life. Under the former will, which may now be probated, the daughter would get the bulk of the $2,000,000. If no will were ever probated, the daughter would inherit the entire estate as the only child.

Testimony given at the trial was unusual and sensational. Witnesses for Mrs. Crome-Ancker, testified that her mother, who was the widow of Charles H. Spang, a successful Pittsburgh steel merchant, treated her husband "brutally."

Mrs. Crome-Ancker hastened to this city from Copenhagen, Denmark, when she learned her mother was dying at the Waldorf, but arriving on the day before her death, she refused to attend to the request of Mrs. Spang, who said she did not want to see her.

Among other peculiarities of the widow, who lived alone in a sumptuous suite of rooms in the hotel, as brought out in the evidence, was that she was accustomed to tell risqué stories to her husband's physicians.

Before her husband's death, witnesses testified, Mrs. Spang referred to him as an "old blind fool," as he had lost his eyesight some months previous. After his death, although she was left an estate of well over $1,000,000 witnesses said, Mrs. Spang was in constant fear that she would spend the last of her days in the workhouse, and fear of becoming poverty stricken.

Then she would lip newsboys as much as $1 or give 5¢ to waiters for serving her at one meal. Throughout the trial the evidence referred to her alleged cruelty to her blind husband.

PRESENT AND ACCOUNTED FOR

(The Home Sector)
Ex-Doughboy (inter-viewing his former boss about his old job): I gave up a good chance to stay in France, sir, and I think you ought to consider that in fixing my salary.

How did you happen to turn down the opportunity?
"I was sick the morning my command went over the top."

The Markets in Montreal

MONTREAL, March 9.—Markets hold pretty steady, although revisions are recorded in some lines. Hogs are firm on account of poor supplies and beef is strong and very firm. Market for cooked meats has ruled steady and prices are unchanged. Ham and bacon is in fair demand on an unchanged price basis. Margarine is not active and prices are unchanged. Lard holds steadily and without change as far as prices are concerned, although the tendency is inclined downward. A decline of one cent per pound in the price of shortening has been effected and the demand is stated to be fairly steady. Butter is unsettled and there has been an easing of the basis for the past while. Declines in cracker and a lower grade of butter are effective this week. Eggs are down to from 71 to 72 cents per dozen and further declines may be looked for in view of the car lots arriving from Chicago. Cheese is slightly easier and is quoted to the retailer at 23 1/2 cents per pound. Poultry is firmer this week. A shortage of live poultry is manifest in the market and advances may be expected. Fish is in active demand and frozen fish in particular will tend to decline as soon as the cold weather is broken.

STARTLED COMMISSION WITH STORY OF EXPERIENCES

KAPUSKASING, Ont., March 6.—William Hearst Kiligan, married with six children, four of whom were dependent upon him, today startled the commission in charging the soldiers' camp here, with a story of his experiences since his arrival in April, 1918. He has a lease, 20 feet by 34 feet, a stable, four cows and two horses, one of which is owned by the government.

"We have seven months winter, three months black flies and three months snow," said Hearst. "Snow fell last year on September 22nd. I have been drawing logs this winter and have earned $4 a day out of which I had to pay $3.15 for my meals and for horse feed. It's an awful condition. I can't even buy a pair of mitts."

"I have four cows but I can't afford to feed them, and as a result all we get is a pint of milk a day. I can't sell them because no one wants to buy them because of the conditions here. The climate conditions were such that it was impossible to grow anything. He had practical experience in farming and a farm in Waterloo County to settle in the colony after the had read government advertisements and newspaper accounts of the prospects of the colony.

GEDDES DENIES PUBLISHED REPORT

LONDON, March 8.—April third has been tentatively fixed as the date of departure of Sir Auckland Geddes, the new British Ambassador to the United States for New York.

Sir Auckland told The Associated Press this morning that he had been misquoted in what purported to be interviews with an appearing in New York newspapers in which it was declared he had characterized the Sinn Fein movement as practically a "religious scheme designed to secure power for the Roman Catholic Church." Sir Auckland declared:

"In the first place, I have granted no interview since my appointment to the Washington post. What I was quoted as saying must have been from my conversation of Tuesday, in which I employed the platitude that Sinn Feinism is an intensely national movement."

"I have always believed the Irish complexities more political than religious. I think my reported optimism over the new Home Rule Bill is understandable, since I participated in its framing."

Overflow Cattle Sale

BUNBURY FARM, CHARLOTTETOWN, (3 MILES FROM THE CITY), MARCH 16, 1920, at 1.30 p. m.

Despite yearly dispersals our herd has again increased to fifty which is more than we can handle. We now propose to sell our remaining select grade cattle—thirteen in number. Four are newly freshened; the remainder are bred to freshen in May, June, July, and the autumn months. Some of these heifers are double crosses of our imported bulls and are from excellent dams. We can recommend them.

To make the sale more attractive and to encourage the starting of more pure-bred herds, we offer the following:

PURE BRED HOLSTEIN-FRIESIAN CATTLE

1. A cow and her 8 months old heifer calf. The cow is by a very well known bull a son of the first Canadian cow to exceed 33 lbs. of butter in 7 days. The calf is by our imported bull—Sir Dekol Pontiac Jewel.

2. A cow and her 4 months old heifer calf—bred similarly to the above.

3. A 3-year-old imported cow due to freshen in April, 18 to Roycroft Pictet Echo. We would pay the calf from this cow at $75.00 if a heifer.

4. A 4-month-old bull out of Pauline Prilly Colathua—one of the finest cows in H. J. Kennedy's grand herd.

5. A 10-month-old daughter of Sir Segis Walker Kornodyke—a bull bred by Dr. A. A. Fairwell, Okanawa, Ontario.

6. A 2-year-old, newly-freshened heifer, sired by Prince Colathua Canary A, whose 5 nearest dams averaged 10 1/2 lbs. of milk a day, and over 32 lbs. of butter a week.

7. A price will be put on several others—young bulls and heifers. If the yearling bull ABBEGWEIT TIDY ABBEKER JEWEL is not sold previous to the sale he will be offered. His dam is the Island's greatest cow with a 3-year-old record of over 26 lbs. of butter in 7 days, over 52 lbs in 14 days, and a 5-year-old record of over 30 lbs. She is capable of beating her own record and possibly trying the Maritime record of over 32 lbs. held by her mother's full sister—Maple Grove Patti.

The Honorable Walter M. Lea will give an address on Dairying. A silo demonstration of O.P.V. silage will be given. We believe that O.P.V. Silage will take much of the hard labor and cost of production out of dairying. See how it is made and possibly try it. TERMS—Announced at sale. Eight months credit allowed at current bank interest.
