MR. JOHN SOBEY

On March 20, 1940, there passed peacefully away at Hampton, Mr. John Sobeys at the advanced age of 87 years. The late Mr. Sobeys enjoyed a fair measure of health and strength enabling him with the help of his faithful partner, to take care of his own home with its many duties and cares. ## Canadians Evacuees In English Midlands

HARTWELL, Northants, England, April 8.—If you want to survive the cold of winter as an evacuee in England, it is a big help to hold world records for fire-stoking and endurance. We Canadian evacuees from London would certainly take on all-comers now.

For seven weeks we fought a most vicious and spell the worst in 40 years. We fought it in a 40-year-old farm house with more doors and windows to the square yard than I have ever seen before—and none of them fit. We won the battle by means of five coal fires, six oil stoves and sheer hard work. It meant a fresh assault each morning for the first three days in the house capable of staying in overnight.

Despite our efforts the front hall remained like the North-West Passage and the room where the babies slept would have made a good refrigerator. One morning we awoke to find the whole water system frozen solid.

On top of this, roads were blocked for nearly two weeks by a heavy snowfall. As most of our perishable supplies come from Northampton, eight miles away, we went without for four or five days. The rest of the household goods we got from the village store 1-2 miles distant—and how distant that is when every step plunges you knee-deep in snow! Fortunately owing to our isolated position, we always keep a well-stocked larder and we didn't lack anything vital in the food line.

On the whole we have found the ration allowances adequate because we are a large household and we are cooking out of four ovens. The butter weekly per person amount, the bacon ration, half-pound piece, is sufficient. Sugar is 12 ounces per head, runs a bit close. Wherever possible we use treacle as a substitute in cooking. We are not so optimistic about meat rationing, which is worked out on a value basis, allowing us about 10s ($2.25) weekly. That doesn't buy much meat for four children and two adults. Fish has risen in price so much it is almost beyond our budget. On the whole the cost of living has risen 30 per cent since the war and it takes planning to make a pre-war income, or one that is much less than pre-war, feed you and clothe you as well as before.

CHILDREN HAPPY

The same problems confront those who have taken in evacuated children, although a rise in Government allowances for youngsters over 12 has helped them. The children are all happy in their new surroundings. They have taken to country life in a manner which proves conclusively the country is the child's natural habitat. When they arrived here last September, you could distinguish them from the villagers' children by their white faces and strained eyes. Now they're so healthy, strong and rosy-cheeked you cannot tell them apart.

Half the time they probably forget the reason they are here. There are no visible reminders of war for them to see. No sandbags around the churches and schools, no air raid shelters. The blackout only means drawing the curtains for in the country it is always a blackout after dark. If it weren't for the newspapers and the radio we should feel as if we lived in another world.

We have only once sighed for the blackout of London. It was after a particularly hard session of trying to keep the weather out of doors. Then we felt a wave of nostalgia for that modern flat where keeping simply warm meant twiddling something on a radiator or switching on an electric fire; not as at our farm, heaving coal and lugging coal oil all day and half the night. Aside from that you can have London. I'm staying evacuated.

Canadian Medical Unit Shows Ingenuity In Providing Office Needs

(By Sam Robertson, Canadian Press Staff Writer)
ALDERSHOT, England, April 9.—(CP)—Medical supplies that are so vital to an army flow to various units of the first Canadian division from a barracks-office apply called "the packing case problem." The Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps stores depot is piled high with packing cases containing everything from medicine and tablets to latest remedies for ailments of the human machine. But that is not why the supply base is known by its unique name.

It is because the furniture was made from packing cases, due to the resourcefulness of its senior officer, Major J. A. McDonald of Sarnia, Ont., and the ingenuity of a carpenter-soldier on his staff.

When the major, his eight other ranks and the medical stores worth a small fortune arrived from Canada, the furniture they required wasn't available at Aldershot. However, Major McDonald turned his staff and private Cecil John James Jones on the packing case that had carried the medical supplies from Canada and in about two weeks it takes to say "shake and stir" the furniture was ready for use. An office that now is noted for its efficiency.

"BOOTLEGGING" PARIS STYLES

PARIS, April, 10.—Paris models today donned their uniforms of evening and sport dress, shouldered their corsages, unbuttoned their hats and prepared to defend the honor of the country on fashion's Maginot Line.

How they hope to save their latest fashions from the fate of the earlier ones is obscure. The Germans were charged with reproducing Paris styles in "ersatz" materials and selling them at cut prices on the markets at Brussels, The Hague, Bucharest, Belgrade, capitals.
