TREE-TOP STORIES

PEEKING

ONE evening Emily was 'out walking' around the block. She walked as softly as she could so the baby birds and EH babies wouldn't wake up.

When she came to the big square house on the corner she saw a little poplar tree peering in at one of the light windows.

"What do you see, Little Tree?" Emily asked.

But the little tree didn't answer. It kept very quiet. Then suddenly it began to shake its leaves and wave its branches excitedly.

"Oh it's laughing!" Emily exclaimed. "What ever could it be seeing!"

Simple Application That Dissolves Blackheads

No more squeezing and pinching to get rid of those unsightly blemishes, blackheads. There is one simple, safe, and sure way to get them out, and that is to dissolve them. Get about two ounces of peroxide powder from your drugist—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet cloth—rub briskly over the blackheads for a few seconds—wash the face and every blackhead will be gone. Pinching and squeezing only blackheads make larger pores, and you don't get all of the blackheads out this way—while the simple application of peroxide powder and water dissolves every particle of them and leaves the skin and pores in their natural condition.

Premier King And Lapointe Exhibit Righteous Anger

House of Commons in an Uproar When Points of Order Are Raised

OTTAWA, June 3.—The rush to prorogation stubbed its toe and stumbled a couple of times yesterday. And the subsequent proceedings proved beyond a peradventure that this assembly of orators is never too tired to talk.

The first jolt came along in the afternoon. The House was somewhat languidly discussing an amendment to the Immigration Act. Sial amendment repealed legislation passed at the time of the Winnipeg strike which gave the immigration Department the right to deport British-born citizens working at sedition without the formality of a trial by a jury of their peers.

Sees Another Bargain

Then Donald Sutherland, of South Oxford, arose and in his own blunt Tory way charged that the amendments under discussion were the result of a bargain between the Government and the two Winnipeg Socialists, Heaps and Woodsworth. The Socialists were to get the amendments and the Government was to receive the support of the Socialists.

Premier King came to his feet as indignant as only he can get, when he feels that he is being found out. He applied the word "intrude" to the Sutherlands' declaration. Mr. Manion raised the point of order and for nearly an hour thereafter the House had one of those spasms which a member recently described as a "Beer Garden." Only this time it was worse.

Deputy Speaker Duff ruled his Premier quite in order. Mr. Meighen agreed, but protested that the opposite had frequently been ruled against members of his following. He appealed from the ruling in order to get uniformity of rules.

Appeals are Useless.

Speaker Lemieux called in, upheld the ruling of the chair, held he was bound to do so.

"Then," argued Mr. Meighen, "appeals are useless."

A few minutes later Mr. Sutherland was called to order when he attempted to read a Woodsworth statement from a previous debate. "I am not at all surprised at your ruling," declared the Oxford Tory. "In view of rulings that have been given this afternoon and other rulings."

It was Hon. Ernest Lapointe's turn to grow indignant. He can do it almost as well as his leader. "I demand a withdrawal," he said. Also he said it lately. Right there the House woke up. Chairman Duff didn't think the censure was fair. Mr. Lapointe roared for a withdrawal and appealed to Mr. Meighen to help him get it. Mr. Sutherland, his Scotch patience tried to the limit, said through with:

"If it will please your lordship and other members I will say, I am surprised, very much surprised, at the ruling."

Caused General Roar

Then the roar became general. The chairman insisted on a withdrawal. The rumblers came in on the chorus, "Withdraw, withdraw."

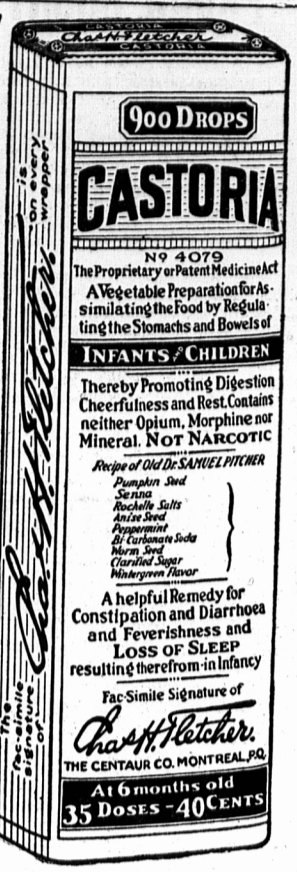

Mr. Meighen brought in the argument that the speaker would be useless, the member must surely be allowed to comment on rulings. Mr. Lapointe roared that Mr. Meighen was impairing the dignity of the chair. Amid the general crossfire, Mr. Sutherland was heard to say that he would absolutely drop the word "surprised."

Even that did not satisfy Mr. Duff. Lucien Cannon helped along the row by lecturing Mr. Meighen on deportment. Robert Forke also assisted by preaching a sermon on the way Parliament should be run. In twenty-five years spent in the municipal council he had never seen anything like this. Honorable members hinted that he should say it over the radio.

When the racket had died down a bit, Mr. Sutherland insisted he had withdrawn, and Mr. Duff apologized for not having understood him. So that was that, and the afternoon was over.

Got After Heenan

In the evening the Government went out on a new tack and endeavored to get into supply. This time it was Heenan, of Kenora, who tangled up the works. Somebody in the Government had loaded Peter up with a lot of files in regard to troops at the Winnipeg strike and he had been jumping around all afternoon trying to inject them into Hansard. This was

Children Cry For Fletcher's CASTORIA

When Baby Complains.

There are many ways a baby has of expressing any pain or irregularity or digression from its normal condition of health and happiness. A short sharp cry, a prolonged irritated cry. Restlessness, a constant turning of the head or of the whole body, fretful. In these and other ways a baby tells you there is something wrong. Most mothers know that a disordered stomach, or bowels that do not act naturally are the cause of most of baby's sufferings. A call for the doctor is the first thought, but in the event of any delay there should be ready at hand a safe remedy such as Fletcher's Castoria.

Castoria has been used for baby's ailments for over 30 years and has merited the good will of the family physician in a measure not equaled by any other baby's medicine because of its harmlessness and the good results achieved.

And remember this: Castoria is essentially a baby's remedy and not a cure-all for every member of the family. What might help you is too often dangerous when given to a babe. Fletcher's Castoria safely relieves freely referred to, which unfortunately gave rise to the impression that it had been used by Sir John Adams. This word "patois" applied to the French language of Quebec is especially objectionable as implying a charge of illiteracy. But Sir John Adams did not use the word "patois." What he did use to designate the language of Quebec was "dialect" which to a linguist knowing the history of the French of Quebec would seem not at all inappropriate.

To us who were aware of the acute sensibility of the people of Quebec to any adverse criticism or slighting reflection on their beloved language by so eminent a linguist as Sir John Adams the feeling of resentment—for it really amounted to that—which his criticism evoked was not at all surprising. And though the situation was rather tense yet in the discussion that followed, led by Senator Belcourt, there was not a little self-restraint, and certainly no lack of appreciation of the thoughtful and brilliant character of the address—barring, of course, the reference to the French language. It was a regrettable incident, felt to be so no less by the English than by the French section of the audience and somewhat marred the effect of the scholarly address of Sir John Adams.

A few paragraphs back it was suggested that while out of this incident there may have come some sense of bitterness, there was also an element of sweetness. And although I have already exceeded my space-limit I want to refer to this element of sweetness as a thing pleasant to think about and a delight to remember.

When Sir John Adams had finished his address the chairman, Dr. Edouard Montpetit, Registrar General of the University of Montreal in referring to the address expressed himself thus: "There may be some in the audience who may not have understood the reference made by Sir John Adams to the French language. But I understand it, because I know Sir John Adams." Now this expression obviously admits of two meanings and an ordinary person might very well have added a word of explanation which, while bringing out the sense more definitely would deprive the passage of its suggestiveness and might have reduced it to the commonplace and so changed the quality of its flavor. That word was not spoken however, but the spirit of it was sent across the platform on the wings of a charming smile to where Sir John was sitting and where there received in the spirit in which it had been sent. The remark was uttered on the spur of the moment and was evidently unpremeditated. It seemed to issue from a clear spring of intuitive discernment. Here one felt were met two gentlemen thorough in their meaning of true courtesy—a rare thing to meet in the common intercourse of every-day life.

Had the incident ended there we should have left the hall carrying with us the memory of an exquisite bit of pure courtesy, or to change the figure, and to borrow a fine phrase of your own, Mr. Editor in another connection we should have left the memory of seeing enacted a charming bit of "prose lyric" such as one occasionally meets with in the pages of R. L. Stevenson or Sir James Barrie. But unfortunately the incident did not end there; and this refined gem of courtesy was, I fear, dissipated in the heat of the discussion that followed.

RED SILK EMBROIDERY ON GRAY TWILL COAT

By Marie Belmont

Embroidery is one of the fashion features of the hour. And it is used in many unusual ways, especially when it is done in color.

Above, a street coat of gray twill is embroidered down its sleeves in dull red silk. One large plaited jabot falls from a huge button which closes the coat at one side. Jabot is allied to the coat by its red etichery. Gray felt hat worn with this coat.

Your gums like coral to contrast them—just remove that dingy film, see what happens.

Modern dental science now has found a way that restores "off-color" teeth to cleanness, that gives toneless gums a healthy coral tint.

Famous movie stars use this way before going on a scene. That's why movie smiles glisten so. Leading dentists urge it widely. For it protects the teeth and firms tender gums.
