AT CAPITOL, SUMMERSIDE

How are your nerves?
If they can stand thrills occurring with staccato speed, excitement that rises like a tidal wave, and suspense that will have your spine a-tingle, "Charlie Chan at the Opera," the Twentieth Century-Fox picture that opened yesterday at the Capitol Theatre, will provide you with a solid hour of thrill-packed entertainment, highlighted by hilarious comedy and youthful romance.

With Warner Oland as Charlie Chan, the arch-enemy of crime, coming face to face with Boris Karloff, the king of terror, the picture is the highspot of the wily Chinese sleuth's career and the acme in mystery entertainment.

The film, which features Keye Luke, Charlotte Henry, Thomas Beck and Margaret Irving in the supporting cast, opens with the murder of an insane asylum guard by Karloff, an inmate, whose warped mind recognizes a picture of his wife in a newspaper. Karloff completes his escape and goes to the theatre where his wife is appearing in "Faust." Attacking the baritone, Karloff dons his Mephistopheles costume and usurps his role on the stage, disguised by the costume and mask.

Charlie Chan, hot on the trail, appears backstage at the opera but is unable to prevent two more murders. When the madman's reign of terror strikes at two young lovers, Chan craftily apprehends him and in a surprise denouement, unmask which we trust Mr. Gomez will succeed in doing for the pleasure of all music lovers, not only in Charlottetown but eventually throughout the Province.

Very enjoyable also was the students' contribution to the programme in violin, clarinet, and cello solos, and in ensemble. The progress made by the students who appeared in last year's concert was apparent last evening, and indeed all who participated are deserving of credit, and of the hearty applause which they received.

Two of the most pleasing numbers on the programme were string quartets. The cultivation of this form of music, particularly by the young, are inexhaustible. The works selected for performance were in both cases of classical charm and beauty.

The first was a Minuet by Jean Philippe Rameau, a French composer and harpsichordist of the great age of Bach and Handel. Born in 1683, two years before his famous contemporaries, Rameau outlived them both. When he died in 1764, Haydn was thirty-two years of age and Mozart eight. The principal works of Rameau are operas—he was Court composer to King Louis XV—and if his music may be said to be "dated," at least it dates from a glorious period. The interpretation of his Minuet by the youthful MacKay and Gomez sisters, dressed in costumes of the period, was delightful.

Mr. Gomez himself took the first violin part in the slow movement with variations, in mention with special pleasure, and appreciation the Trio in G Major for violin, cello and piano, by Mozart, played beautifully by Nan Reay, Norma Gomez and Sandy Brehaut, who also appeared in costume. Mozart's
