RELIGIOUS SERVICES

THE BAPTIST CHURCH

Continuing a series of sermons on "Growth in the Christian Life," Dr. A. C. Vincent spoke yesterday morning on another of the factors that make for growth, the Divine Ordinance of the Lord's Supper. Taking as his text 1 Corinthians, 11: 27, the ordinance was spoken of as an emblem of initiation into the Christian life and a symbol of sustaining therein. Not as giving salvation, but as testifying to salvation, the Master's memorial bridges the time between His sacrifice and this day. Differences of opinion, matters of disagreement there are in regard to this holy ordinance, but in one sentiment all are agreed "this do in remembrance of me."

It is a matter of obedience, it is a loving memorial, it is a symbol of His abiding presence, it looks forward to His triumphant return.

The Sunday School had another day of fine attendance, showing the usual advance over the same period last year.

Dr. Vincent spoke again at the evening service, in a thoughtful and eloquent address.

HOLY REDEEMER CHURCH

Yesterday morning the single men, who were on retreat last week, received Holy Communion in a body at the 7.30 o'clock Mass. The children's Mass was at 9 o'clock, and at 10.30 o'clock High Mass was celebrated by Rev. R. I. McKenna, C.SS.R. Impressive sermons were preached at all the Masses in the morning by Rev. Paul G. Fisher, C.SS.R.

The retreat for the single women opened last evening at 7 o'clock, and will be brought to a close on Friday evening next. An eloquent and inspiring sermon was preached last evening by Rev. Father Fisher, who took as his subject "Faith in Our Life." The service was concluded with Benediction of the Most Blessed Sacrament.

Exercises of the retreat will be held each evening this week at 7.30. Masses in the morning are at 6.30, 7, and 7.30.

ST. DUNSTAN'S BASILICA

The masses at St. Dunstan's Basilica yesterday were at the usual hours, 7, 8, 9.30 and 11 o'clock.

At he 9.30 and 11 o'clock mass Rev. Dr. McMahon preached.

Solemn High Mass at 11 o'clock was celebrated by Rev. Dr. Ellsworth of St. Dunstan's University, assisted by Rev. Eugene Murray, Deacon of the mass and Rev. Earl Dalton, subdeacon.

In the evening at 7 o'clock, the annual May procession in honor of the Blessed Virgin was held.

Some 800 boys and girls of the parish participated in this tribute of devotion to the Mother of God—which culminated in the crowning of Mary the Queen of the Mass and the placing of baskets of flowers on the beautifully decorated shrine erected inside the sanctuary rail.

His Excellency Most Rev. J. A. O'Sullivan preached the sermon, speaking to the children on the love and devotion that they should have for her, who is the Mother of God, and who has been given to them and to all to be their mother.

He said: These beautiful flowers you are placing on the shrine, are but an expression of your love for Mary.

All the children joined in the hymns during the devotion which closed with Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament. Rev. Dr. McMahon being celebrant assisted by Rev. Eugene Murray and Rev. Frederick Cass.

Rev. F. L. Mullally and Rev. Dr. Ellsworth were the Bishop's chaplains.

The procession was under the direction of Rev. Louis A. Dougan, while Rev. Dr. Gillis directed the singing.

Miss Bessie Blanchard presided at the organ and was assisted by a stringed quartette.

ST. PAUL'S CHURCH

The Sons of England with band and banners made a colorful parade to St. Paul's Church yesterday morning. There they were joined by the Scout Troop and Cub Pack associated with the Church. The Morning Prayer Service conducted by the Rector featured special prayers for Dominion and Empire, and Mr. Charles Earle's solo at the offertory was especially suitable for the occasion. The text of the sermon was Psalm 16: 6—"I have a goodly heritage." It is easy to be proud of being an Englishman, Mr. Raymond said, in days of Jubilee when we have been listening to our King rededicating himself to the service of his people, and have listened to messages of responding layalty reaching around the world. Looking at the pages of history for a moment he found the outstanding characteristics of English life to be the fear of God; the love of Liberty; the love of Truth. The preacher remarked that Scouting had added a characteristic to the life of the Empire which will not be lost, viz., the Scout's Good Turn.

Mr. Raymond remarked that Sunday, May 26th, was the 1200th anniversary of the death of the Venerable Bede, the father of English history, and told briefly the story of his scholarly life in the monastery at Jarrow, culminating in his completion of the translation of the Gospel by St. John into Anglo-Saxon at the very hour of his death.

The congregation was reminded that Englishmen and Canadians understand one another better since the days of the Great War had opened their eyes to one another's best qualities. There will be no more little Englanders or little Canadians, but both will love together and labour for a great Empire.

Concluding he pointed his hearers to Christ, in whose life and example the best qualities of citizenship are built.

At the evening service the Rector's sermon was based on our Saviour's question, "Will ye also go away?" emphasizing the value of life's choices and the need for decision of character. Mr. Percy Williams sang during the taking of the offering.

TRINITY UNITED CHURCH

Rev. Hugh Miller preaching in Trinity United Church yesterday morning took as his text the words written by St. Paul to Timothy shortly before the former's death—"Preach the Word". It was the advice of age and experience to youth and inexperience.

The Gospel is to have precedence over all else. The first duty of the Christian ministry is to preach the Word. It is said the only time St. Paul failed was when at Athens he gave a philosophical address instead of preaching the Gospel.

Sometimes preachers fail because they are not content to preach the word but must defend it, minutely interpret it and explain it. All these are involved in preaching, but preaching is much more than any or all of these together. The Gospel is to be preached in its simplicity and its entirety. Nations burdened with the cost and fear of war need the Gospel. A civilization threatened with extinction needs the Gospel. It needs to be preached on the boulevards and in the slums. Every great age has been an age of great preaching. Preaching has its place in the programme of God. "He that hath ears to hear let him hear."

The evening service was conducted by Rev. J. W. Barbour, who took as his text the story of Abraham as told in the Epistle to the Hebrews—"By faith Abraham when he was called to go out—obeyed. By faith he sojourned in the land of promise as in a strange country.—For he looked for the city which hath foundations."

We are living in a time of change. We hear people say that democracy has failed, but it is the people who have failed. Greediness must be dug out and a new, less selfish loyalty must take its place. Those who suffer as a result of the tyranny of the existing system are increasing in number. This is one of the great forces driving us into a new country, a more equitable system. But the greatest force is not that which drives, but that which draws. Abraham went out looking for the city that hath foundations. The desire to see fair play, justice, righteousness and truth is leading us on. In changing hearts and lives we shall find salvation.

The morning anthem was Callcott's "Give peace in our time, O Lord," and that of the evening, "The heavens are declaring" by Beethoven. Mr. Harvey McPherson was soloist.

CENTRAL CHRISTIAN CHURCH

The subject of the morning sermon was "The Expediency of the Ascension" and was based on John 16:7, "Nevertheless, I tell you the truth; it is expedient for you that I go away, for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come, but if I depart, I will send Him unto you." The salient features of the discourse were as follows: "The Ascension culminated in the exaltation of Christ to the headship of the Church." "It marked the beginning of Christ's Intercessary Office." "It made Christ our Fortification against temptation." "It has made Christ's constant companionship possible."

The special music included a duet, "The Dawn of Eternal Day," by Mrs. Milton Stewart and Mrs. Herbert Platts.

The subject of the evening sermon was "The Temple and its Glory" and was the last in a series of three Sunday evning sermons on the "Temple of the Lord." In developing the theme "The Perverseness of the Materials" and the "Excellency of Christ's Workmanship" were discussed.

In closing it was stated that the glory of God's Temple is "ethical" and involves the custom, usage, manners, and habits of God's people. Godly character is what is meant by the glory of the Temple. Consequently, the most pertinent question which faces the Christian is this: "Do you by your customs, usage, manner and habits dishonour God, or do you glorify Him?"

The anthem of the evening was Woodward's "The Splendours of Thy Glory, Lord."

called Confederation "compact."

But the Quebec Resolutions as passed at Quebec only received the assent of one Province, namely, the Province of Canada (comprising, as mentioned, Upper and Lower Canada). Those Resolutions were definitely rejected by the P. E. I. Legislature. The Resolutions were never in fact submitted to the Legislature of New Brunswick or Nova Scotia. Yet Resolution 70 of the Quebec Resolutions declares, "The sanction of the Imperial and Local Parliament shall be sought for the Union of the Provinces, on the principles adopted by the Conference." This never took place. It may be mentioned also that the B. N. A. Act differs from the Quebec Resolutions in several important respects, and the Province of Canada which had accepted the Quebec Resolutions was not consulted about these changes. The Resolutions of the London Conference also differ from those of the Quebec Conference.

As to any approval given to the Resolutions by the delegates at Quebec, it may be pointed out that so far as the Maritime Provinces were concerned, the provincial delegates were never authorized by their legislatures to consent to a union of the Provinces of British North America, and approval of their respective legislatures was required to any proposal they might make.

When P. E. I. entered Confederation its terms were arranged with the Dominion. How can it be said to have made a separate arrangement or entered into a separate agreement or agreements with the Provinces? The same may be said of British Columbia.

These are some of the difficulties to be met and answered by those who set up the "compact" or treaty theory.

It has been stated by a student of our constitutional system:—

"The entire procedure by which the Canadian confederation was accomplished is without parallel in the history of federal government. There never was any ratification of the actual terms of union either by the Legislatures or by the peoples of the federated provinces."

Without referring further to the arguments on the subject it may be sufficient to state the conclusions of some of those who have given the matter careful consideration.

Prof. Rogers, of Queens University, after lengthy discussion, states of the Quebec Resolutions:—

"The use of the word 'treaty' as applied to the Quebec Resolutions in the Canadian Legislature" (the legislature of the Province of Canada) "was either purely rhetorical or was adopted as a means of confining discussions to the acceptance or rejection of the resolutions in toto. . . . The so-called compact of the Quebec Resolutions is without historical or constitutional basis."

Speaking of the Constitution resulting from these resolutions and the resolutions of the London Conference, Prof. Rogers states:—

"It does not follow that the Constitution growing out of this agreement should be regarded as a treaty or binding compact in relation to any future alteration of its terms."

After referring to the various amendments which have since been made to the B. N. A. Act, Prof. Rogers states:

"To sum up, the practice hitherto adopted with respect to the amendment of the British North America Act is definitely against the implications of the compact theory."

In an article written in March, 1933, referring to "the untenable doctrine of unanimous consent," Prof. Rogers states that if this doctrine (the theory "compact" or agreement) prevails, "Canada would have the most rigid federal constitution on the face of the earth."

Prof. Norman A. MacKenzie of the University of Toronto, in November, 1933, writing on the subject of "The Federal Problem and the B. N. A. Act," stated:

"As a lawyer and a student of history, I have no hesitation in saying that the British North America Act is not a compact, and from a legal point of view could be amended by Parliament without considering the desires of the Provinces."

Other writers agree.

It is true that the positions of P. E. I. and of British Columbia, which came into Confederation by Imperial Orders-in-Council pursuant to Section 146 of the B. N. A. Act, are different. With regard to those Provinces certain terms were agreed to, and there is strong argument for the claim that the special terms set out between the Dominion and British Columbia, and between the Dominion and P. E. I., constitute covenants. Even so, the covenant thus entered into would, in P. E. I.'s case, be one between this Province and the Dominion, and would not be a covenant or compact between this Province and the other Provinces individually so as to require their consent or the unanimous consent of the Provinces to any change of terms which might be agreed to between this Province and the Dominion.

I am not unmindful of the fact that the word "compact" is frequently used in a colloquial sense, to represent generally the negotiations, resolutions or statutes which resulted in Confederation, and not in its strict sense of embodying a treaty or agreement. In what I have written in this letter, however, I have dealt with the word, not as used colloquially, but in its strict legal meaning as an agreement, treaty or binding obligation.

The subject of the amendment of the B. N. A. Act or of an alteration of provincial subsidies requires, however, to be further considered from the point of view of Section 118 of the B. N. A. Act, since that section declared that the arrangement made about subsidies should be "in full settlement of all future demands." That question will be dealt with in a future letter.

LIBERAL CHALLENGES

Sir,—There's a something that "wastes its sweetness (or foulness) on the desert air." One of them is the perennial Liberal "challenge" for a general election. It commences immediately after their party is defeated at the polls, and automatically continues as long as they are in the cool shades, fenced away from the pork barrel.

This fad they carry to absurdity. They know that within three months an election is unavoidable, that public business is speeded to make ready for it, and yet for the mere show of bluster and affected bravery to face expected defeat, they broadcast from parliament this imbecile challenge. It will come too soon to please them, and when it does many of them will do their challenging and wailings in the privacy of their homes.

I am, Sir, etc.,
COMMON SENSE.

DIFFICULTY AND DANGER

Sir,—Will you call attention of whoever is responsible to the gaping holes in the MacIntyre Highway? They are a danger to travel. There is no pleasure to the autoist who must wiggle from side to side on the road hunting for safe ground, and when a car is coming in an opposite direction, worming its way in like manner, the annoyance would bring swear words to a saint.

A highway costing $28,000 per mile to build, and a further ten or twelve thousand in repairs, should at least be as safe for travel as the ordinary graded clay roadway.

I am, Sir, etc.,
TRAVELLER.

BALANCING THE BUDGET

Sir,—Hon. Mr. Lea is promising to balance the budget. What a wonder man he would be if he could do it? And what a change in his past record, and the record of his party, if he even tried to do it! He and his party promised this at every election, and when in power did the directly opposite.

It can be done only in one of two ways. Reducing expenditure, or increasing taxes. Which of these does he propose?

Is he going to cut down highway improvement, depriving men of employment, and allow us to travel over quagmires and through car smashing ruts? Or will he impair education by carrying out his resolution in the Legislature to reduce teachers salaries? Has he the Hepburn thought of disgracing the Province by repudiation of any of our national obligations? Does he intend to starve our hospitals or dependant public charities? Will he reduce our aids to agriculture? Will he do any of these things, or will he spend and squander as he did when in office before? Unless he does these things and cuts deep he cannot balance the budget in this way.

Will he do it by taxation? If he does it at all, it will be by more taxes on an already overburdened people. Past experience shows that the more taxes he collects the more he spends, and the budget remains unbalanced. In his Bell Government, and his own ministry, it was supposed that "everything tangible and intangible" was taxed. Has he found anything since that escaped his party's tax bills from which he can get more taxes—to balance his budget?

Don't forget his famous prescription for collecting. Truthfully in part, he said,—"People don't like paying taxes:" therefore, "like giving castor oil to the child, you must hold its nose, and force it down its throat." This is probably the way he will attempt to "balance the budget," if you give him the chance. But there will be no balance, but the same old orgy of spend and more spending.

I am, Sir, etc.,
VOTER.
