

IF BABY HAS COLIC

COLIC comes suddenly. Your first intimation that something is wrong may be a warning cry in the night. If you have a bottle of Castoria handy you needn't worry, for a little of this pure vegetable remedy will soon have baby his happy self again; let him go back to sleep.

Castoria is always the sensible thing to give an ailing child. When a child is restless, fretful, with coated tongue, bad breath and lack of appetite, it is a mother's standby. Most mothers give Castoria an important place in their homes. Ready for sour stomach, constipation, or upset. When buying Fletcher's Castoria always look for Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the wrapper. This identifies the genuine product.

What the Fashionable are Wearing Illustrated Dressmaking Lesson Furnished With Every Pattern By Annebelle Worthington

All Tinsey models are created and sketched in Paris and the patterns are made in New York.

There are so many things about this graceful dress which the matron will find helpful and charming. Its long V bodice opening, its hip line pointed in front, and prettily ar-ranked skirt with its shirring and points are all slimming and exceedingly becoming.

Soft black satin—not too shiny—was used for it, while the crossover vestee was white satin. The shoulder bow can be white or black lined with white, or instead two camellias or gardenias can be posed there.

At each side of the skirt shirring, the skirt is folded over to form an inverted pleat. This creates a kind of narrow panel down the front, length giving and slenderizing.

A strass buckle finishes the belt which can be worn natural waist-line or lower.

This pattern may be obtained for 15 cents in sizes 16 to 30 and 34 to 44. It is ready for immediate delivery. It is hand cut.

Can the Love Thief Be Adequately Punished By Law?—Why the Sons of Self-Made Men Are Seldom Go-Getters—Bachelor Girl vs. Old Maid

Dear Miss Dix—Is there a man-made law to punish "the woman in the case"? We know there is a God-made law that will surely be enforced in the hereafter, but why can a woman with the subtlety of a serpent and the allurements of youth step in and take the husband from the wife, the father from his little children, the son from a mother, rob the man of his honor and respectability, and go unpunished? If there is no such law, why is there not? Why let it be there is no such law, why is there not? Why let the woman go free to do over again her hellish deeds? Why legislate against any crime and let the most damnable of all go unpunished? T. D. N.

Answer: We have a law that permits the aggrieved husband or wife to sue the home-wrecker and demand a monetary consideration for the alienation of the affections of the errant spouse.

You can hardly pick up a paper in which you do not read of some man who is demanding forty or fifty or a hundred thousand dollars as the price of his wife's love, which some other man has stolen away from him, or of some woman who is not suing some other woman for a large sum for having purloined her husband's affections from her.

It is a grotesque and a sordid thing to assess the damage done in breaking up a home in dollars and cents, to try to heal a hurt with a poultice of greenbacks. But so far it seems to be the only method we have been able to devise for punishing those who commit the most dastardly and the most terrible of crimes.

For the sheik and the vamp are worse than thieves and murderers. Those who rob a woman of her husband and little children of their father have taken from them something infinitely more valuable than gold or jewels. Those who slay a woman's faith and love have done something far worse to her than if they had killed her body.

But there never can be any man-made law that can deal adequately with such criminals, because home-wrecking is always an inside job. The love thief has an accomplice. There is always the husband or wife who was accessory before the crime. They, at least, opened the window and left the door unlocked.

To save his face, every man whose wife is unfaithful to him pretends that he was the helpless victim of some man who captured her and bore her shrieking away from him. Every woman saves her vanity by trying to believe that her husband is the helpless victim of some siren who, by some black magic, won him away from her and his children and made him forget his honor and his duty.

But this is never true. The really virtuous woman who loves her husband is as safe from Lotharios as if she were locked up in a steel vault. Every wife who goes astray meets the seducer at least halfway, and the fault is no more his than hers.

So also with men. The world is full of adventures seeking as their prey married men with fat pocketbooks; but no man need be captured by one of these plagues unless he desires to. No man need surrender to them if he is willing to flee from danger or put up a fight against them.

Undoubtedly the woman who uses her youth and beauty to win a man away from his wife and children and who ruthlessly breaks up his home in order to gratify her own desire for what he can give her deserves to be punished. But so does the poor, weak, miserable creature who lets himself be flattered and cajoled into forgetting the vows he made at the altar.

He who turns traitor to his own flesh and blood commits a sin greater than that of the woman, because he had his obligations to his wife and children, and she had none. DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Dorothy Dix—What do you think of a man who, when he was very poor and who had to work hard to climb up the ladder to the height he now occupies, but who indulges his own boys in everything they want and who encourages them in idleness? What effect will this have on the children? F. E. L.

Answer: It is, perhaps, natural that parents who have had hard lives themselves should wish their children to have everything soft and easy and that those whose youth knew bitter poverty should be overlavish to their children. But the result is disastrous.

It gives us the "second generation" who are wasters and spendthrifts, who throw away the money that their hard-working parents have earned, who seem to be without either stamina or morals and who make true the old proverb; that in America it is only three generations from shirt sleeves to shirt sleeves.

These fathers and mothers who are so over-indulgent to their children forget that, try as they may, they cannot satin-line life for their children; that their boys and girls must meet the same sorrows, the same disappointments that every one else does; that they must make the same struggle that others make, and that, if they have not been disciplined at home, if they have not acquired grit and courage, they will go down when they come to grips with existence.

You seldom see a self-made man's son who is worthy of his father or who can fill his father's shoes when the "old man" dies. The reason for this is that his father made things too soft and easy for him. He did not have to struggle as father did. He did not learn self-denial. He did not have courage and the fighting instinct bred in him, so he failed when the test came.

We do not train prize-fighters by having them loll on silken cushions. DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—What is the difference between a bachelor girl and an old maid? MAE MURRAY.

Answer: The term "old maid" is obsolete. It is used now only by ignorant or provincial people. It was formerly used as a term of reproach to designate a woman who lacked attractiveness to men, and who, in spite of the most strenuous endeavors, failed to catch a husband.

The women to whom this epithet was applied resented it so much that many of them married men who were absolutely repulsive to them in order to escape it.

The bachelor girl is a woman who has passed 40 years of age and who, for reasons of her own, has elected to remain unmarried.

It indicates that the woman so designated had good common sense, courage and a love for freedom and instead of being a term of opprobrium it is one of admiration and honor.

The old maid was pitted by other women. The bachelor girl is generally envied by her sex. The old maid was a woman who couldn't get married. The bachelor girl is one who wouldn't. DOROTHY DIX.

TRY NEW METHOD IN EMIGRATION

LONDON, Nov. 5.—(By the Canadian Press)—Lord Middleton, who recently toured Canada as Chairman of the Yorkshire Voluntary Migration Committee, says the scheme for a co-operative effort for settling young men in large groups to embark on genuine mixed farming was received in Canada with warm approval. One well-known head of an organization which has settled some thousands of young immigrants on the land said: "The scheme strikes exactly the right note; (a) proper supervision, (b) community life; (c) opportunity of ownership under the most favorable circumstances; (d) a chance of matrimony reasonably soon; (e) a right sort of farming rather than a gamble and land starvation."

"If the first try-out meets with the success that we confidently expect, said Lord Middleton, "then there is no reason why it should not be extended to any extent. A substantial area in Canada would come into cultivation, and we would have a first-rate outlet for the best of the youth of our country whose prospects in England are moderate in the extreme, plant?"

"Let it not be thought that I am decrying existing schemes of land settlement. I am satisfied that the great majority of those whom we have sent out in the last few years are happy and prosperous, and in far better case than that they would have been at home." Lord Middleton expresses the opinion that the prestige of British settlers has risen considerably in Canada in recent years.

Commander J. B. Adam and Mr. Charlesworth, a coal owner, both of whom have interested themselves in the scheme for emigrating boys from Yorkshire to Canada made an interesting joint talk which was broadcast. Mr. Charlesworth paid a tribute to the type of Ontario farmer with whom most of the boys made their homes. In almost every case he found the boys treated as members of the family, and being well taught in practical farming.

He could not help reflecting on the physical improvement of North Country boys after sometimes only a few months of Canadian fare. He mentioned the case of a Yorkshire mining family who had previously lived in a dilapidated cottage, with two boys and a girl out of work, and the father on short time, and contrasted that life with the happy state in which they were living now at Ivanhoe, Ontario. Another point mentioned was the interest shown by all sorts of Canadian people that the boys on their farms should save money, and so qualify for a Government loan by the aid of which they could buy their own farms.

"I can't get along with my wife. All she does is ignore me." "Ignore you?" "Yes. And if there's anything I hate it's ignorance."

Tobaccoist (to complaining customer): But that cigar is made from the choicest leaf. Victim: Yes, but what kind of legend are moderate in the extreme, plant?"

A Morning Smile

RASTUS DIDN'T KNOW

A dealer in South Georgia carried Rastus Johnson during the spring and summer so that Rastus could make his cotton crop. It turned out to be a good year and Rastus had enough money to pay his account at the store and still have some left over.

After paying his account he went across the street and bought quite a lot of goods for cash. The dealer who had given Rastus so much credit learned of this and the next time he saw him said: "Rastus, I carried you all spring and summer and now you go across the street and buy stuff for cash. What's the idea?"

"Why, Mistah Boss," replied Rastus in a surprised tone. "Ah didn't know you all sells fo' cash."

PROGRAMME HAS NINE POINTS FOR PARENTS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—A nine-point program for parents to follow in training their children has been proposed by the children's bureau of the Labor Department. Explaining that "to be a good father or mother is one of the hardest jobs on earth" but that "it is the finest, biggest job too," the bureau made the following suggestions to parents: "Tell and act the truth to your children.

"Keep your promises, good or bad.

"Decide which things are most important for a child to do and then be consistent about seeing that he does them. Do not nag him about little things that do not matter much.

"Do not say 'no' one time and 'yes' the next time for the same thing. Your child will never learn that way what is good to do and what is bad.

"Break up bad habits by keeping the child busy with interesting things to do that he forgets the old habit.

"Pay no attention to him when he tries to get what he wants by temper tantrums, by whining, or by vomiting.

"See that he gets things (if they are good for him) only when he is quiet and happy and polite.

"Keep cool and quiet yourself. Speak in a quiet voice.

"Show the child you are pleased when he tries"
