Eye Comfort

for eye workers is a matter of vital importance. From early morn to late at night we "crowd" our eyes relentlessly, from one job to another.

How long will they stand it? Are you now enjoying that efficiency and comfort which ought to be yours?

Consult us if you are not. You have much to gain, and nothing to lose.

In any case the knowledge gained from an examination, makes it well worth while.

IN MEMORIAM

MRS. JOHN A. CLARK

There passed away in No. Weymouth Christina A. Clark, wife of John A. Clark, on May 15, 1933. Although she had been in failing health for some time her death came as a shock to her family and friends. She was an active member of the Congregational Church, in Weymouth Heights, the Ladies Benevolent Society and Past Chief of the Pythian Sisters of Merry Mount Temple.

She was of cheerful and patient disposition and displayed great patience in suffering. She will be missed in the home and also in the community where she was always eager to aid in any movement for the improvement of community welfare. Many and beautiful floral tributes testify to the love and esteem in which she was held by her numerous friends. Besides her husband, she leaves to mourn her mother, Mrs. John Gillis of Flat River, P.E.I., J. Herbert Gillis of Flat River, Mrs. M. Cameron, of Wallaston, Mass. and Hector A. Gillis of Weymouth.

PETER'S ROAD

Mr. E. J. McFadyen, Somerville, Mass., a former resident of this community is visiting relatives and friends here. At Peter's Road, Miss Lucy Johnston; at Murray River, Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Johnston; at Murray Harbor North, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Johnston and family. Before leaving his native province, Mr. McFadyen pledged his trade as a tinsmith in this community. We understand Mr. McFadyen is accompanied by some members of his family.

Miss Helen Beaton, Mrs. Hugh McLean and daughter, Belle, (Mrs. A. Sowrey) and Mrs. Forest Beaton of Boston, Mass., are visiting at or near their former homes here and at present are the guests of relatives Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Beaton, Peter's Road.

Central Creameries, City, has established a well patronized cream delivery route via Murray Harbor North and Peter's Road, making bi-weekly calls.

Mr. J. H. Hicken, Murray Harbor North, is the efficient collector of eggs for the Murray Harbor North branch of the Egg and Poultry Association, P. E. I.

Mr. J. McOutgan, mail courier on the Montague-Murray Harbor North R. R., is giving excellent service.

The closing examination of the Point Pleasant school was held on Friday 29th June.

A large number of parents and visitors were present. The pupils were examined in the different subjects by their teacher, Mr. Benjamin Beck, assisted by Mr. W. L. McLean. The results were much appreciated by those present, and

Rowena Rides The Rumble
By Ethel Hueston

Rowena leaned over. "I'd rather use my own name, Peter," she said. "For—professional reasons."

Peter crossed out what he had written and wrote "Miss." Then he scratched that out and wrote "Rowena Rostand." But it did not look just right to him so he carefully inserted "Mrs." over the scratched-out "Miss."

The clerk studied the name, the telephone girl looking over his shoulder as he did so. The large man in the slouchy clothes studied Peter.

"New York, eh?" said the clerk. "Yes," said Peter. "Yes, indeed," chimed Rowena. "Motor out together?" "Yes," said Peter and Rowena in well-timed chorus.

The clerk frowned over the room chart. "I'm afraid we're full up," he said slowly. "Not a thing left."

Peter leaned over the desk and his mild face looked quite grim and ugly. "You said you had two rooms," he said in a low voice.

"We did then," said the clerk smiling. "But just now"—he shook his head—"I'm afraid not." The telephone girl snickered a little and one of the men sitting near by rustled his paper. Rowena flushed and caught a sharp breath, covering slightly, but Peter suddenly showed a sly and efficient.

"Oh, yes, you have," he said. "Two rooms, and we'll take them. We've got a marriage certificate, if that's what's eating you!"

"Yeah?" "Rowena, get the certificate!" Rowena hurriedly took it out of the side pocket of her bag. The clerk read it slowly and handed it to the large man in the slouchy clothes who looked it over and nodded cheerfully.

"Denver, eh?" inquired the clerk. "To-day, eh?" "Yes," said Peter. "Some other people drove out with us," Rowena hastened to explain. "And they were unexpectedly called back to New York—and so—the rest of us—Peter and I—just got married."

"We've got a very nice suite on the second floor," suggested the clerk.

"All right," said Peter grimly. "No," cried Rowena, faint but firm. "Separate floors."

The clerk grinned, not unsympathetically. "All right, all right," he said. "Don't be nervous, lady. We'll put him on the top floor—Congratulations, Mr. Blande. She's certainly a beauty. She'll get over that nervousness."

Peter muttered unspoken things deep down in his throat, and the boy came in and took their bags and led them off to separate rooms on separate floors. A loud gust of laughter swept up the elevator shaft in their wake.

In the doorway of the room assigned her Rowena turned and held out an appealing hand.

"G-good night, Peter," she said sadly.

SIXTH INSTALMENT

Although Peter was furiously angry, highly humiliated, and blaming Rowena for everything, he was kind at heart and could not resist the plaintive pathos in her voice, usually so crisp and cool.

"Good night, Rowena," he said more pleasantly than she had any right to expect. "Don't worry. Everything'll be all right."

After a sleepless night Peter was down in the lobby at an unbelievably early hour. But early as it was, he did not precede the interested smiles and stares of the day staff which had replaced the night workers—clerks, telephone operators and elevator boys.

Even at that unreasonable hour there were loungers in the lobby. And each and every one of them, and even the head waitress smiling in the door of the dining-room, knew all about the young New Yorkers married the day before in Denver who demanded rooms on separate floors. Confusion stung his face with burning red.

He went up-stairs, walked up, to Rowena's room and knocked sharply.

"Yes—who?" called Rowena in a bright voice that had obviously been schooled to register good nature in the face of adversity.

"Me," he answered surlily. "Chuck your things into your bag and let's get out of here."

"How about breakfast?" "The hell with breakfast."

"O. K. by me," called Rowena, in the maddening voice of one who has stoutly enjoined one's inner soul to smiles and sweetness. And indeed even in her sleep Rowena had been reminding herself that she must be very patient with Peter for a few days, as he was apt to be just the least bit in the world cross about the state of affairs.

Within an hour they were hurling the dust of Cheyenne from the

Self Posed Girls

"The modern sinner," continued Miss Hughes, "simply wants a mechanically-produced photograph and will insist upon posing herself."

Her Majesty, unlike the modern miss who thinks she knows better than anyone else was always willing to follow the slightest suggestion and left the pose entirely to me.

"And I am proud to think that I have been able to produce some very beautiful photographs. There is one of the Queen taken with Princess Elizabeth of York of which her Majesty is very proud.

"She is devoted to Princess Elizabeth, and I will remember that on one occasion she said to me, 'Isn't she a beautiful child?'"

"Of course, I agreed—who couldn't—but I added 'and so was Princess Mary, Mam,' 'Yes,' replied the Queen, 'she was.'"

FOR PRIZES WON

She Owes a Lot to CERTO

"During the last four years I owe a lot to Certo for prizes won by my jams and jellies at the Calgary Exhibition."

Mrs. Fred Brigden,
Prominent Calgary Jam and Jelly Maker

JAM and jelly making there is no such thing as failure when you use Certo. This easy method pleases me and the flavour is better as you do not need to boil it all away. In 1931 I won first prize for jelly. In 1932, first prize for collection of fruits," says Mrs. Brigden.

Take advantage of the marvellous results you can obtain in all your jam and jelly making through the use of Certo. Start using Certo and be as successful as Mrs. Brigden. Certo never fails if you follow exactly the recipes found in the booklet under the label on every Certo bottle.

You may use any fruit you like—fresh, canned or diced—or fruit juice. That's variety for you! Save time—get better jam or jelly—with Certo.
