STRIKE SITUATION AGAIN VERY SERIOUS

PROGRESS OF ATWOOD IN HIS FLIGHT

Special to The Guardian. CASTLETON, N. Y., Aug. 23.—Shortly after his arrival at Castleton aviator Atwood announced that he would await the arrival of pontoons for his machine from Fort Plain and probably would start for New York about 9 o'clock.

UNEASY AS TO HIS FATE

Atwood ascended at Lyons with a purpose of flying in the air line 98 miles to Utica before night. Just after he started he decided to turn four from the course which he had been following along the tracks of the New York Central railway and cut across country to give the crowds at Auburn an opportunity of seeing him.

THOUSANDS WAITED HIS COMING

The usual ten minute report of the aviator's progress was lacking. No telegraph or telephone communication could be had with the farm houses in the country over which he had disappeared. It was at 4.24 p. m. when Atwood left Lyons. At 5.20 p. m. he suddenly appeared over Auburn and landed there. Fearful of again being lost, since he was away from his regular course, Atwood did not venture to land at Auburn until 6.45 p. m., when he ascended uncertain as to his destination for the day. Then began another exciting search for him extending all the way from Auburn to Utica.

MOST EXCITING EXPERIENCE

"It was the most exciting experience in the air I ever had," said Atwood. "After ascending at Lyons I looked at the map and concluded I could find my way to Auburn, where I knew a lot of people would be disappointed if they did not see the aeroplane. I had gone ten miles away from the railroad tracks when I was completely at a loss to know where Auburn was. There was no sign or road or anything to indicate the direction. I kept on going sometimes rising to a high altitude in a hope of seeing the town from afar."

During the night the negro approached Antone Vargas, the deck watch, who, believing that the negro intended to commit suicide, grabbed him about the body. The negro retaliated by inflicting eleven knife wounds. Salvator Daboro, a Boston Italian, interfered in the struggle and was stabbed twice near the jugular vein. The negro broke away and disappeared, but bloody tracks on the rails of the steamer indicated he had jumped overboard.

While walking past the prisoner's cell a deputy noticed the old man of mystery stuffing a roll of bills which he could not reach around with both hands. After a while he began throwing the bills through the bars as the dealing pack of cards. A search of the old man's clothing brought forth more than $3,000 in bills and bank books showing deposits of $3,300. Last night he mumbled in Norwegian that he had come from Canada and said his name was Torsten Isaacson Asgaard. He could not give his home address.

LLOYD-GEORGE GAVE SOCIALIST LEADER A RAP

LONDON, Aug. 22.—There was a lively passage between James Kier Hardie, the socialist leader, and David Lloyd-George, the chancellor of the exchequer, in the house today. Hardie accused the government of taking the side of the railway directors in the strike, and said if the government had brought the same pressure to bear on the directors as it had on the men there would have been no strike.

FIRE WAS STILL SMOLDERING

Lloyd-George replied that the great conflagration had been put out, but that there were still smoldering fires here and there about the country which at any moment might burst into flame. He declared he knew nothing which was more likely to bring about such a disaster, and perhaps cause the men to fling away what their leaders had claimed was a triumph for them than "such grossly made by Mr. Hardie's speech."

JUSTICE DONE BOTH PARTIES

He asserted that it was due to pressure brought to bear by the government on the directors that induced them to meet the representatives of the men face to face. The government, he added, had used its whole power to see that justice was done both parties to the dispute. Lloyd-George then referred to a speech made by Mr. Hardie in which he said the socialist leader had told a big meeting of men that the premier was prepared to shoot down every striker. The chancellor stigmatised this charge as baseless and contemptible.

THE POPE WANTS TO HOLD AUDIENCES

ROME, August 22.—A return of the oppressive heat wave yesterday prevented Pope Pius from taking an intended outing in the Vatican gardens. Despite the rise in temperature, however, his holiness headed mass and conversed at length with Cardinal Merry Del Val, the papal secretary of state, and afterwards worked longer at his desk than at any time since he has been ill. Pope Pius yesterday expressed a desire that he be permitted to commence again the holding of private audiences, as there are some persons who have been waiting to see him since the beginning of his illness.

A PLEA FOR PLAYGROUNDS

Plenty of room for dives and dens, (Glitter and Glare and Sin) Plenty of room for prison pens, (Gather the criminals in!) Plenty of room for jails and courts (Willing enough to pay) But never a place for the lads to race, No, never a place to play! Give them a chance for innocent sport Give them a chance for fun—Better a playground plot than a court And a jail when the harm is done! Give them a chance—if you stint them now. Tomorrow you'll have to pay A larger bill for a darker ill, So give them a place to play. —Denis A. McCarthy.

WOMAN MAYOR TO STICK TO POSITION

WICHITA, KAN., Aug. 22.—"I never said politics is not a woman's game. I have been misquoted in that, for I never said it and don't believe it." Such is the statement of Mrs. Ella Wilson, Mayoress of Hunnewell, Kan. Mrs. Wilson was very willing to be interviewed, and stated in detail what she does think about politics in general and Hunnewell politics in particular.

"I don't intend to give up at all," said Mrs. Wilson. "I think women have just as much business in politics as men, and I wish a lot more of them would get into it. I would do a world of good if they would. For myself, you may say that I intend to stand pat, as the men say, and will be Mayor of Hunnewell under the next election, no matter what happens. I don't vary much, though, if I have the same councilmen at the end of the term."

Asked in regard to this veiled threat, Mrs. Wilson said that she had been in Topeka for a personal interview with Governor S. B. Roberts, and had his promise that the refractory councilmen would be brought to terms. She mentioned other proceedings as the Governor's plan.

"What has caused all the trouble, anyhow?" Mrs. Wilson was asked. "Just because those councilmen are contrary," replied Mrs. Wilson. "They are the most contrary men I ever saw."

But why will the Governor bring out proceedings? On what ground. "Because they are not congenial to me," Mrs. Wilson replied with an air of finality.

Then returning to the original question Mrs. Wilson said: "You just make it good and plain, though, that I don't intend to quit at all and that I don't think I am out of place in the political game, as you call it. I mean to stick through my term here in this office for the moral effect it will have if anything else. Why, people are talking about this all over the world and I have received letters from lots of foreign countries, as well as from all over this country, telling me not to give up. I don't want the report to go on either, that I think I am in anything that is not a woman's game. I fully believe in this movement and I intend to stay here until the end of my term. The councilmen will either have to come to terms or quit. I won't."
