ITS MERIT IS PROVED

RECORD OF A GREAT MEDICINE

A Prominent Montreal Woman Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Completely Cure Her.

The great good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is doing among the women of America is attracting the attention of many leading scientists, and thinking people generally.

Mrs. M. A. C. Letellier

The following letter is only one of many thousands which are on file in the Pinkham office, and go to prove beyond question that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound must be a remedy of great merit, otherwise it could not produce such marvelous results among sick and ailing women:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"Soon after my marriage my health began to decline. My appetite failed me I was unable to sleep, and I became very nervous and had shooting pains through the abdomen and pelvic organs, with bearing-down pains and constant headaches, causing me much misery. The monthly periods became more and more painful, and I became a burden and expense to my family instead of a help and pleasure. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cured me within three months. Soon after I began using it I felt a change for the better, and at the time of my next period I noticed a great difference, and the pain gradually diminished until I was well. I am stronger and look better than I did before I was married, and there is great rejoicing in the house over the wonders your medicine worked." Mrs. M. A. C. Letellier, 732 Cadieux St., Montreal, Quebec.

If you have suppressed or painful periods, weakness of the stomach, indigestion, bloating, pelvic catarrh, nervous prostration, dizziness, faintness, "don't-care" and "want-to-be-left-alone" feeling, excitability, backache or the blues, these are sure indications of female weakness, or some derangement of the organs. In such cases there is one tried and true remedy—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

THE GUARDIAN SHORT STORY

Announcing an Engagement

By BEATRICE STURGES

Copyright, 1906, by Beatrice Sturges

Daisy Leonard and Jack Rawlinson had been engaged for two years and nobody knew it. It was Daisy's own idea to keep the affair a secret. There seemed to her a deep romance in having what the novels termed a "hidden love," and besides a girl could have so much more fun when she was not tickeled as belonging to some one particular man, and so checked off the list of possible girls to be invited to picnics and escorted to dances by all the other nice young men.

She was sure of Jack, who adored her, and way down beneath the frivolous surface of her heart she loved him very much, but at the same time a girl who has always had her own way and been the center of a crowd of admirers does not want to give it all up.

At least Daisy didn't. She was a spoiled child and was quite accustomed to having her own way. All her life she had done what she wished rather than what her mother had told her. Finally Mrs. Leonard wearied of struggling along without a husband and with a headstrong daughter for so many years. In June she had married again and gone abroad for the summer, and Daisy had been sent to the mountains with her aunt and a family of cousins.

Jack, who worked in the city, came up now and then for a day or two, when Daisy treated him just about as she did some half dozen young men who were all her devoted admirers.

One day she and Jack had strolled off to a big rock which overhung the lake and was well surrounded with trees, and here Jack had protested.

"I say, Daisy, you ought to give me a show."

"Goodness, Jack, how unreasonable you are! Didn't I give you a trip to the glen this afternoon on purpose to stay with you? They didn't like it a bit, either."

THE LAUNCH MEANTIME WAS SPEEDING IN THEIR DIRECTION.

"They? What are they to you and me, Daisy? Aren't we everything to each other? I'm sure you're the whole world to me, sweetheart," he added, taking her hand.

She let him hold it while she pulled idly with the other at a fern growing out of a cleft in the rock. It was very nice to have such a splendid big fellow as Jack so devoted to you and all your own, but it was fascinating to go rowing one day with Tom, and riding next day with Jim, golfing with Will and playing tennis with Dick. It made life exciting, and she intimated as much to Jack.

"These fellows here are too much, anyway, and I don't like the way you go around with so many of them," he objected.

"Would you rather have me go with one all the time?" asked Daisy, mischievously tickling his cheek with a piece of feathery grass.

"Yes, and I should be the one. Dear, it's time we settled this thing—either you are engaged to me or you are not. If you are, then matters are going to change, and I intend to look out for you and to have it understood by your aunt and everybody at this place. If not"—

He broke off and sat looking across the lake with a firm line around his lips that the girl had never seen before.

She drew her hand away. Indeed, he had dropped it when he had first begun to speak. She stiffened, although her lips trembled, and if he had looked at her probably everything would have been different, but he sat and gazed moodily at a white sail across the blue lake.

"If the engagement is irksome to you," she began stiffly—

He turned to her now impatiently. "For heaven's sake, Daisy, don't talk nonsense. I want what is due me, that's all. I came up this time chiefly to tell you that I have been transferred to the western branch of our business and have to be there in six weeks. Will you come with me, sweetheart? You know how I love you, and I want you now for my very own. You will, won't you?"

She might have said yes, but as luck would have it voices and steps broke on the stillness of the wood, and in an instant two girls and two young men were climbing on to the rock beside them. After a few moments of the usual nonsense Jack rose.

"Will you come?" he asked, showing too plainly that he was bored.

"Not just yet," she answered. She could not bear to have the others see Jack "order her around," and, besides she observed a launch approaching and she knew that in it was Dick Carter looking for her, and she wanted the pleasant ride home.

So Jack went alone in anything but a cheerful frame of mind.

That night at the hotel hop it seemed to Jack that she was unusually gay. He danced with several other girls before going to her, and then she stood with the young launch owner just as the fifth waltz was about to start. He put out his hand with a commanding gesture.

"Will you give this to me, Daisy?" he asked.

The other man looked rather ruffled and then said jestingly: "Too late. Miss Leonard belongs to me"—

Jack broke in: "I beg your pardon. Miss Leonard is my"—

But before he could say it Daisy put her hand on the other's shoulder. "Mr. Rawlinson is mistaken. I have promised this to Mr. Carter."

She danced late that night, but saw no more of Jack. He spent two hours in the bowling alley and then took the two mile walk around Star lake. The next morning he paid his bill and arranged to leave on the 8 o'clock train. To fill in the time he took a canoe and was soon pulling out by himself toward the center of the lake. It was a day of brilliant sunshine and crisp breezes. It seemed strange that one could be unhappy with so much beauty in the world.

Presently across the water he saw Dick Carter's launch with Daisy and several others aboard, and his wrath burned anew. They were coming in his direction, and he slowly rowed off toward the camp, which was opposite the hotel. A young boy was out in a frail canoe, and Jack wondered if he was able to manage it in the stiff wind that swept around the point. The next minute the little boat spun round, turned over and the boy went down.

Jack pulled several long hard strokes before he reached the spot and jumped in after the little fellow, who had gone down twice. He managed to grab him the next time, however, but meantime the canoes had both drifted away, and the only thing to do was to swim with the boy to the camp. It was a fair distance, and the water was almost icy cold, after the manner of mountain lakes.

The launch meantime was speeding in their direction, and Jack knew that he could hold the boy up until they came, but he was beginning to feel numb himself. His breath came with labored gasps and he was whispering to the boy to float when he saw that six more strokes would get them to shallow water where the nurses' camp had a dock. He took five and then lost consciousness.

It was fully ten minutes before he came to himself again. He was inside a log house, rolled in blankets, and a white capped woman was holding some brandy to his lips.

"Is the boy all right?" he whispered.

She nodded. Then there was a noise on the dock and presently on the steps of the little house. The nurse went out. There was a sound of men's voices and also of women's, but Jack heard just one rising above all the rest in excited tones.

"But I'm different," she said, "and I must see him. I—I'm engaged to be married to him." It was the sweetest thing he had ever heard.

In a moment she was bending over him.

"Sweetheart," she murmured.

He tried to speak.

"Hush, you mustn't say a word. Wait till you're rested," she cautioned. Then with true feminine inconsistency she bent over and asked him a question.

For answer he threw his arms around her neck and kissed her.

Agricultural Politics.

A young farmer who had been elected to a state legislature and instructed to follow the lead of the state central committee of his party was taken to task by some of his constituents for voting against a party measure.

"My friends," he replied, "when I was a boy one of our neighbors got a new hired man—a chap from the city. One day he took him out to a pasture lot and set him to turning the sod under.

"'You start in here,' he said, 'and plow right to that old red cow.'

"Then he went off about his work. Toward noon he came back to see how the fellow was getting along and found he had plowed a rambling furrow all over the field and was still at it.

"'Here!' he shouted. 'What do you mean by that sort of work?'

"'Why,' said the man, 'you told me to plow to the red cow, and I've been plowing toward her all morning, but she keeps walking all over the field.'

"Now, I'll admit, gentlemen, that you told me to plow to a red cow, but I should like to have you as farmers compare my furrows with that cow's trail."

A Cold Finds Your Weak Spot

THE BRONCHIAL TUBES AND LUNGS ARE PROTECTED AGAINST THE EVIL EFFECTS OF COLDS BY

DR. CHASE'S SYRUP OF LINSEED AND TURPENTINE

You can never tell just what form a cold will take, but you may be sure it will search out your weakest organ. With some it assumes a catarrhal nature and affects the head principally; with others it becomes bronchitis and there sets in a hard cough and severe chest pains. Then again, it often leads to inflammation of the lungs, consumption, pneumonia, or may settle on the kidneys or bowels.

Because colds do not always prove serious some people take chances with them but the risk is great. Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is intended for people who want assurance against serious results from colds.

This great medicine has absolutely proven in its extraordinary control over coughs, colds, croup, bronchitis, whooping cough, asthma and all such ailments and for this reason has a place in the great majority of homes.

Mr. John Clarke, coachman, Port Hope, Ont., writes:—"Being exposed to all sorts of weather, I frequently catch cold. Last winter I was so bad with a cold that I could not speak above a whisper, and had great pains in the chest. At last I feared it would develop into consumption if I did not succeed in getting proper treatment. A friend advised me to try Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine and I began to improve before I had taken half a bottle. One bottle cured my cold, which I believe, would have proven very serious if I had not used this medicine."

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, 25 cents a bottle, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. To protect you against imitations, the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every bottle.

The Ideal Laxative for Children

Mothers cannot be too careful in what they give children to move the bowels. Calomel, cascara, senna, salts, cathartic pills, castor oil, and purging mineral waters irritate the bowels—upset the stomach—and eventually lead up to chronic non-action of the bowels—Constipation.

Have You An Ear For Music?

If you've never heard a really good Talking or Singing Machine, don't think of the scratchy, jerky, low-grade machines, when you read about the Victor-Berliner Gramophone.

That would be like mis-taking a street-musician's fiddle for a Stradivarius. There are so many low-class machines about, which offend the ear and get on the nerves, that many people don't realise what glorious music can be produced by the

Victor-Berliner

Gram-o-phone. It is so marvellously true—so natural. It reproduces every sound in pure, clear, smooth tones. Its softest notes ripple out in a distinct, but delicate, pianissimo that charms the most exacting of musical critics.

And its repertoire includes everything—from a Melba Solo to a Coon-Song. The Victor-Berliner can be played by anyone, any time—and it never gets tired. In fact, it seems to enjoy its own music.
