OTTAWA July 26 (CP)—Canadian forces took reading material along with them on the invasion of Europe.

Squad Ldr. Gregory Vlastos of Kingston found this, out recently when he went to Britain to obtain the troops' view of various Wartime Information Board Publications.

He wrote to Lieut. Donald C. MacDonell, editor of Canada Digest, one of the publications for the troops.

"For a while I was mystified not to find a single copy of it in a number of units of the 1st Canadian Army that I happened to visit. Then I solved the mystery. Apparently the full copy of the May issue was packed securely away in boxes and tucked into the back of three-top trunks in which auxiliary service supervisors are riding in invasion operations. Canada Digest has been included in the list of priority essential to welfare and morale read by the troops."

The Digest is distributed to men of the three services not only in the United Kingdom theatre and northern France, but in the Mediterranean, the Middle East and India.

It has already provoked considerable comment, not only in letters from readers, but in the British press. The South Wales Argus, published in Newport, concludes an editorial with the hope that the British authorities will duplicate the Canadian publication.
