Unprofitable Boarder In The Poultry Flock

(Experimental Farms Note) The unprofitable boarder in the poultry flock is a liability that should be wiped out at the earliest possible moment and, though the trap-nest is the most reliable indication of a poor producer, there are certain visible characters that readily distinguish the poor layer at this season of the year.

Providing the condition has not been brought about by injudicious feeding, a depilating mite, or a nutritional deficiency in the ration, a bird that goes into an early moult is generally an unprofitable bird. The persistently broody hen and the bird that is hard to "break up" is using feed that should be going to a good growing pullet that should take her place in the flock. If she is overlooked she may become a menace and transmit the undesirable broody factor to her offspring. The bird with the hard, heavy abdomen and thick, hard fat covering and public bones at the sides of the vent, excessive yellow pigmentation in legs and beak, and with dry, scaly combs is a poor producer if these characters are in evidence at this season of the year when a good hen should be "bleached out" in leg and beak, carry a full, waxy, bright red comb, a bright alert eye, soft pliable skin over the abdomen, a large moist vent, and good spread between the pubic or "lay" bones. At this season the novice will seldom err if the flock is handled and carefully culled by these elementary and simple characters.

To ensure a more reliable selection, a closer study should be made of other outward and visible characters possessed by both high and low producers in addition to those mentioned and, if a definite record of both production and egg size is desired, the trap-nest is essential. HONEYMOON TRIP TO PRINCE'S RANCH

MONTREAL, July 25—It's not every bride who encircles the globe on her honeymoon trip, and fewer still who spend a part of that idyllic period at the Prince of Wales' E.P. ranch at High River, Alta. In fact there's only one who places in this class. She's Mrs. George L. Wood, of London, who arrived here last night from Quebec after travelling from England with her husband aboard the Canadian Pacific liner Duchess of Bedford. Mrs. Wood is a daughter of Admiral Sir Lionel Halsey, Comptroller of His Royal Highness' Household, and she and her husband will be the first honeymooners to stay at the Royal ranch.

In addition to this princely gesture other unusual presents were a feature of the wedding which took place in London recently, for the trip round the world was the gift of the bridegroom's grandfather, George F. McCarquodale, wealthy Scottish landowner. Their Canadian itinerary will include Toronto, Niagara Falls, Lake Superior, Winnipeg, Calgary, Banff, Lake Louise, Vancouver and Victoria. From the western port Mr. and Mrs. Wood will sail for New Zealand and Australia, and the honeymooners will return to England by way of Suez.

In their west to east round-the-world honeymoon Mr. and Mrs. Wood will pass another honeymoon couple travelling in the opposite direction, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Lewis, of Tacoma, who started their globe-girdling honeymoon recently in the Canadian Pacific liner Duchess of York, their trip having been a bequest in the will of the bridegroom's grandmother.

REMOVAL OF SANDBARS UNDERTAKEN AT CREDIT — PORT CREDIT, July 25—Work was commenced today to remove the sandbars at the mouth of the Credit River which have impeded navigation for several months. For some time fishing boats and larger craft have been unable to navigate the channel, particularly in rough weather, and have been forced to go to Oakville or Bronte to unload. The channel will be dredged from the lighthouse to the fishermen's shacks, a distance of about 300 yards. It will be deepened to 15 feet. The Russel Construction Company is doing the work and expects to complete it in five days.
